The Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno, Cal., of which George C. Roeding is the well known head, have sold their holdings at La Habra, but will continue to grow stock of citrus under contract in this place, the land and climate being especially suited to this class of stock.

T. D. Robertson, of Fullerton, Cal., reports business as good. In a recent visit the writer noted that he is selling avocados (miscalled "alligator pears") from the trees in his nursery at a pretty good price. It looks like good business to grow the trees and sell the fruit at the same time. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The first frost of the season hit the chrysanthemum acreage in the vicinity of Redwood City and Palo Alto the early part of last week, but comparatively small damage was done to the blooms except in several instances where no protection for the plants was provided. Prices for the large mums are still on the rise and a number of growers anticipate a stiff price by Thanksgiving, for by that time all the stock will be grown either under cloth or under glass. The pompons and Chinese mums are still in good condition and in strong demand, both with local florists and for shipping trade.

Violets are plentiful and moving well. They are in good shipping condition now and the eastern demand is strong enough to clean up the market in good shape every day. Retail prices in San Francisco are maintaining a satisfactory level, with the demand normal.

The rose stock is still improving. While blooms of fine appearance have been in the market for several weeks, they were hardly of a quality to ship satisfactorily, but the buds are more solid now, on longer stems, and the shipments of the last week have arrived at their destinations in excellent shape. Another week and the shipping volume will be greatly enlarged.

Orchids are scarce again and with the present call for them retailers are hoping the next crop will be large enough to carry successfully the holiday trade, which they expect to be especially large this year. Fortunately, gardenias are more plentiful and these, together with cyclamens, are filling the place of the orchid in high-class corsage orders.

proved in quality. It is estimated that the call for stock of this sort will be quite heavy this year, as there was comparatively little of first quality to be secured during the last holiday period.

The first California holly has made its appearance, looking well with brilliant foliage and bright red berries, the severe frosts in the foothill section having brought the coloring out rather early. Madrona berries, too, are to be had, the decorative qualities of the shrub making it particularly popular for all sorts of work.

Various Notes.

The Western Evergreen Co. had on hand last week some heavily budded eucalyptus foliage, in addition to a fair supply of madrona berries.

L. Picetti, of the Chas. Navlet Co., has been greatly rushed since the arrival of the Dutch bulbs, filling a large quantity of orders which have been in for some time and getting the stock into shape. He states that the demand is just about double that of last year and consequently he is looking forward to an early clean-up on the stock.

The staff of the E. W. McLellan Co., Inc., is extremely busy with shipping orders, filling a consistently large demand for chrysanthemums. The McLellan nurseries at Burlingame are just starting the cutting of the good rose stock and Henry Avansino, manager of the Bush street depot, states that the rose shipping will commence in earnest within the next week or two. Even now he is sending out some fine Shawyer and Ophelia.

The United Flower & Supply Co. reports an exceedingly large Thanksgiving business. The mum crop is lasting well and this stock, together with the rapidly maturing rose crop, will nicely hold up the shipping business of the firm. One of the members of the company stated that they are endeavoring to get the orders for holiday stock in as early as possible, in order that a choice selection be given their customers. Even at the present time, he said, it is difficult to meet the demand on account of the number of orders already on the books. This concern has a rose crop which will be ready for cutting in about one week. It is in fine condition now and the growers anticipate a stock of first-rate quality.

The long awaited shipment of Kyogi mats has arrived at the store of Enomoto & Co. and the force is getting out the orders as fast as possible. Violets, too, are a large item with this firm and Mr. Enomoto is sending out some fine stock. He reports a strong Eastern demand for woodwardia, which is meeting with popularity all through the country this year. In addition to these greens, his holly and pepper berry shipments are of considerable volume.

Mrs. Darbee reports all the business she can handle. With the gradual closing of the mum season she is filling in with woodwardias and calendulas, both of which are wanted by many eastern florists. Mrs. Darbee is also pleased with her violet crop this year. She says that in spite of the large acreage planted to violets, there will not be any too much stock to meet the shipping demand. After a honeymoon of several weeks spent at Guerneville, Cal., Mrs. Stamatis, née Gregory, has resumed her duties at Mrs. Darbee's shop, on Hyde street.

Other news pertaining to matrimony is the reported engagement of Miss Blanche Green, of the office force of the MacRorie-McLaren Co. A Mr. Kellogg of this city is the fortunate man. Miss Green has been one of the mainstays of the MacRorie-McLaren office for a number of years and, while her associates wish her all possible happiness, they are looking forward with regret to the day when she relinquishes her responsibilities with the firm.

The Palace stand had a busy week with the annual charity ball, which was held November 11 at that hotel. While there were no special decorations for the ball itself, numerous dinner and supper parties were decorated and an enormous amount of corsage work kept the staff busy until late in the evening.

The first winter assembly, which took place the early part of last week at the Fairmont hotel, was attractively decorated by one of the local florists in the Halloween manner. The ballroom was turned into a bower of autumn foliage. An arbor of oak leaves was erected between the light fixtures and over each fixture was a crescent moon of orange, surmounted by a black cat. The windows were banked in brilliant autumn leaves and a trellis of leaves concealed the musicians. The Market.

Flowers are getting scarce as business is increasing. Marigolds and zinnias are small and chrysanthemums are almost gone, except for a few late varieties. Carnations, indoors and outdoors, are getting better. Cattleya labiata is equal to the demand. Two first-class weddings, a large funeral and a big navy ball were the chief business of the week.

Various Notes.

Walter Ollestad has discarded his greenhouse carnations and has planted roses instead. He considered it too much work and too expensive to replace carnations every year. He keeps his roses going three years.

George F. Otto reports good business, especially in decorative plants.

Miss A. M. Rainford had charge of the decorations of two of the largest weddings of the season.

Boyle & Darnaud furnished 1,000 roses for the navy ball. At the store, funeral work keeps the staff busy.

The Bird Rock Florists have moved into attractive new quarters on Broadway. A. D.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The market condition remains about the same as for the last two or three weeks.

Chrysanthemums are the strong feature and are meeting with a ready sale. Stock is first-class, but some of the florists are still having stock shipped in from California.

Ferns are in good demand and hard to get.

There seems to be a large supply of home-grown violets and they are selling well, being cleaned up every day.

Potted plants are somewhat scarce. A few fine cyclamens are being shown at the different stores, but prices are a little high and they are not selling fast.

Business is good and stock is being cleaned up each day. The cold weather for the last few weeks has entirely destroyed all outdoor plants, so that everything that is used now is greenhouse-grown. L. T. S.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

HIGH prices are creating surpluses in some stocks by curtailing the demand.

THE Wholesale Seedmen's League held its annual meeting at Detroit November 19.

DESPITE the reputed shortage, there seems to be a small surplus of Paper Whites.

"ANY seed dealer who is putting up a new building that he figures on using for the next fifty years," says Robert Nicholson, "should keep in mind the necessity for a good landing place for his customers' airplanes."

"THE only crop insurance we know," says Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, "is to patronize a reliable seedsman and pay his price. Reliable seeds cannot be produced cheaply, nor can those who depend on crops to make a living afford to take chances with cheap seeds."

SOY beans, or soja beans, have been grown in China and Japan since ancient times. Although introduced into the United States as early as 1829, they attracted little attention until the early eighties and again in 1900, when the United States Department of Agriculture began to introduce large numbers of varities from the Orient. Since then their popularity as a feeding crop has gradually increased as their value became more evident, due largely to the introduction of varieties better suited to the wide range of soil and climatic conditions found in the United States.

"SEEDS AND WEEDS."

The British government proposes a new "Seeds and Weeds" act, which, in brief, will provide: "(1) Every purchaser of seeds to be given an account of the particulars of the variety, purity and germination of the seeds sold, and all seeds exposed for sale must be so marked. (2) Authorized government inspectors to be allowed to enter trade premises and take samples for testing without payment. (3) Official testing stations are to be set up and from the government decision there is no appeal to an independent testing station. (4) Special penalties for offenses under the act. (5) Publication of results, with name and address of seedsman."

"Dearie me," as one of the British seed trade's proponents is fond of remarking, we have had such a law in America for so long it is an old story and the only harm it has done has been due to some reputable seedsman's momentary carelessness.

A BIG SEED MARKET.

Possibly no other district of equal size consumes so many seeds as does the Imperial valley, in California. County Horticultural Agent F. W. Waite inspected and passed the following items into Imperial county during the month of August: 968 sacks potatoes, 171 sacks onions, 75 sacks spinach seed, 39 sacks lettuce seed, 78 sacks English pea seed, 300 sacks barley seed, 12 sacks milo maize seed, 3 sacks alfalfa seed, 1 sack tomato seed.

From the importations of various seeds it would seem that there is to be an increased acreage in Imperial county during the coming fall and winter in practically all of the kinds of winter vegetables grown in this community. The importation of spinach and pea seed has been unusually large.

Imperial valley, comprising 413,000 acres under cultivation on the American side of the border and 80,000 acres on the Mexican side, produced crops worth a total of $47,832,292 during 1918, according to data compiled by the Southern Pacific railway. It required 18,682 cars to move this crop. It represents produce worth approximately $600 for every man, woman and child in the valley. Twenty-one thousand tons of cotton, worth $10,625,000, was the largest single item. Other products contributing $5,000,000 or more to the total value, in order of importance, were alfalfa, live stock, milo maize and cantaloupes, with combined winter vegetables following closely.

CALIFORNIA SWEET PEA SEED.

During the decade in which California sweet pea seed was slowly but surely gaining dominance of the world's market, it was the habit of our British cousins to decry its quality. For the last couple of years the British have been so glad to get our seeds that we heard little of their complaints, but the story has not been forgotten, as witness the following from an open letter in their leading trade paper:

"I cannot imagine that the general run of retail seedsmen and market growers are calculating on squaring the high cost of some lines by a low price on sweet peas. Certainly the sweet pea enthusiast is not going to be led away by low prices. After all, it is not a question of how cheap but how good, and I am sure that Spencer sweet peas at 12 shillings per pound in these days can have no claim to goodness. The general run of growers, who bought seed by the pound last season, at rates ranging anywhere between 15 shillings and £2, will admit that a pure stock was a rarity. The supposition that the mix-ups were due to shortage of skilled labor hardly counts, for the real explanation is Californian stocks.

"Surely those who buy seed by the pound have a right to know just what they are getting, or must one assume that nothing matters but price? If such is the case, then we shall see a decline rather than increase of sweet pea growing.

"Those of the trade who specialize in sweet peas fully realize what they are up against, for what they fail to grow they go without, rather than take any wholesale offering. One might almost assume that an effort is being made to crush out the home grower altogether, for certainly no one can hope to compete against the wholesale quotations with reliable stocks.

"Considering the fact that America has its own labor difficulties and high living expense, one may at first wonder how seed can be grown and shipped here to sell at 10 to 12 shillings per pound for up-to-date varieties like President, etc. Personally, I imagine it is another case of averaging. All over the U. S. A. and Australia there is a big and increasing demand for early-flowering varieties. and a declining call for ordinary sorts. The prevailing wholesale prices for early-flowering varieties in the U. S. A. is about 40 to 48 shillings per pound, some varieties, including Yarrawa (Australian-grown), running up to £5 or £7 per pound. These are 'some' figures, compared with what ordinary varieties are offered here at. It appears to let daylight on the subject.

"The recent statistics of the U. S. A. flower seed industry show 473 acres of Spencers, ordinary, against eighty-two of Early Spencers. Those eighty-two acres would be worth while at prevailing rates. The rest would not get much attention, hence could be sold cheaply, and maybe, to make the bulk larger, quite a lot of standard mixed, plus grandifloras—and there are over 1,000 acres of these, mind you—fall in. At least the samples I grew this season suggest it, and to help the home producer out of business, merchants over here handle it. Dearie me!"

IMPORTS OF PLANTS AND BULBS.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Robert Nicholson, Dallas, Tex.—"Nicholson's Notes, a Little Magazine for Seed Dealers," in which about half the space is occupied by brief articles and pithy paragraphs, and the other half contains a wholesale price list of garden and field seeds; twenty-four pages, in pocket form. According to the title-page, these "notes" are published "every now and then" and the subscription price is "your good will."

Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, Pa.—"Getting Acquainted with Your Seedsman," a 16-page illustrated booklet, printed with brown ink on cream-tinted paper; not a complete catalogue, but a list of specialties in vegetable seeds, with some "intimate facts concerning aims and principles."

Watkins & Simpson, Ltd., London, England.—A special wholesale catalogue of seeds of newer and rarer varieties of flowers and vegetables; illustrated, sixteen pages and cover. The stock offered is carefully classified under two heads, "Novelties" and "Recent Novelties and Specialties." Among the novelties in flowers are three verbenas, four antirrhinums and half a dozen sweet peas. The prices are in English currency.

Danish Seed Import, Minneapolis, Minn.—"Preliminary Wholesale Price List, for Market Gardeners and Florists," a 16-page, condensed catalogue of vegetable and flower seeds. Danish seeds are a specialty, but the stock as a whole, says Chris Mosbjerg, the proprietor, is from "reliable growers both here and abroad."

Safepack Mills, Boston, Mass.—"Safe Packing," an artistic and unique 16-page booklet, explaining the use of the Safepack waterproof wrapping material and also giving some general suggestions on packing for shipment. The booklet is worth noting as a good example of skillful advertising. The text and pictures are interesting, even entertaining, and also convincing.

E. Turbat & Co., Orleans, France.—A comprehensive wholesale catalogue of nursery stock; 116 pages, with no illustrations and with only brief descriptions. The prices are quoted in English currency. Among its specialties the company mentions roses, fruit tree stocks, lilacs, perennials and the new varieties in general ornamentals.

Perry's Hardy Plant Farm, Enfield, England.—Two catalogues, Nos. 195 and 196, both printed in the compact, clear and accurate style that is characteristic of the Perry publications. No. 195 is a 16-page "Special Offer of Irises and Bulbs." No. 196, just double the size of the other book, is entitled "Perry's Select List of Alpines and Perennials."

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

the finishing touch being garlands of pansies attached to the sides of the box in the manner of handles.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is busy now with his catalogue of dahlia bulbs. Each year, Mr. Pelicano states, the business assumes larger proportions and at the present time his orders are so numerous that he anticipates a complete clean-up on his stock.

T. E. Mabee, manager of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno, Cal., was a visitor in San Francisco last week. Others of the trade who recently paid this city a visit were Harry Short, of Napa, Cal., and Frank Smith, of Modesto, Cal.

At the store of Mrs. Copeland, on Sutter street, was seen a most attractive window last week. A handsome, Korean, camphor wood chest, elaborately decorated in the brilliant oriental reds, was filled to overflowing with masses of madrona berries, carrying out the color note to perfection. Mrs. Copeland states that she is shipping large quantities of colonial bouquets of strawflowers to many eastern cities, where they have met with instant popularity. They are also on sale at the shop here, where the demand is constantly growing.

A new store has been opened at 1006 Bush street under the attractive name of the Band Box. The store is conducted by Mrs. V. van der Meerch and Mrs. E. Davenport. Both ladies are comparatively recent arrivals in San Francisco, but both have had experience in the business before—Mrs. van der Meerch in the east and Mrs. Davenport at Spokane, Wash. The shop is attractively finished in pale green with striped green hangings decorated with multicolored flower motifs. As it is located in the heart of the Bush street apartment house section, it is thought that a quite substantial business can be built up.

The annual convention of the California Nurserymen's Association was opened November 10 at Chico, Cal.; its sessions continued through the week until Friday, November 14. Among those locally known who spoke at the convention were H. A. Hyde, of Watsonville, Cal., and H. Plath, of San Francisco. Mr. Plath's address was entitled "Ferns for Outdoor Garden Ferneries."

The land which has been used during the last season by the Silva-Bergtholdt Co., nurserymen, at Lincoln, Cal., has been released and will be planted again this winter. M. M.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE office of the new executive secretary of the A. A. N., John Watson, is at 400 Nassau street, Princeton, N. J.

R. C. MENERAY, one of the veterans in the trade, has bought the nursery of the L. H. Smith Nursery Co., at Council Bluffs, Ia.

IMPLIED WARRANTY.

In Sale of Nursery Stock.

A decision of the California District Court of Appeal in the case of Elmer Bros. vs. Carpenter, 183 Pacific Reporter, 566, denies plaintiffs' right to recover the full amount of two notes given for the price of fruit trees sold to defendant. The decision leaves out of consideration a claim by defendant that there was an implied warranty that the trees were in sound condition, proceeding upon the theory that defendant was entitled to defeat liability on the notes on the ground that there was an express warranty, which had been broken.

The suit was brought on two promissory notes given to cover the price of 1,200 fruit trees. The trial judge found from the evidence in the case that the notes were wholly without consideration, excepting as to $52.60 which defendant received from third parties on a resale of part of the stock and for which the court gave plaintiffs judgment; that consideration for the notes failed because the trees were sold to defendant without previous opportunity for inspection and under misrepresentation that the trees were good, sound and healthy, and not diseased, and that the stock delivered was diseased with a black rot and was condemned under the statutes of California as being unmerchantable. Plaintiff appealed from this judgment to the District Court of Appeal, but that tribunal has affirmed the decision of the lower court.

Question of Warranty.

On appeal the principal points made by the attorneys for the plaintiffs was that the trial judge erred in finding that there was an implied warranty in the sale of the trees. Disposing of this question the appellate court says:

"Appellant then proceeds to argue, with quotations from certain cases, that the facts are not sufficient to show an implied warranty, the point of contention being that the general rule is that there is no implied warranty in a mere contract of sale (section 1764, Civ. Code), and that the evidence does not show the case to be within the exception provided in section 1771 of the same code, as follows:

"'One who sells or agrees to sell merchandise inaccessible to the examination of the buyer, thereby warrants that it is sound and merchantable.'

"The matter is discussed because, among the conclusions of law, the trial court stated: 'That there was an implied warranty that the fruit trees sold by plaintiff to defendant, for which said notes were given, were merchantable.'

Consideration for Notes Failed.

"But it is clear that this may be entirely ignored without affecting the integrity of the judgment. The court fully found the facts as we have shown, from which the conclusion necessarily follows that the consideration for the notes failed, except as to the said $52.60, and that plaintiff was entitled to a judgment for only that amount. Indeed, from the facts the court properly concluded:

"'That the consideration for said notes failed by reason of the unmerchantable character of the trees sold, except to the extent of $52.60, value received by said defendant; that plaintiff is entitled to judgment in the sum of $52.60 without costs.'

Express, Not Implied, Warranty.

"The force and validity of these findings are not affected in the least by the erroneous inference that there was an implied warranty, instead of stating it to be, as it was, an express warranty.

"We may add that as to this objection urged by appellant there is evidence in the record to the effect that when the trees were purchased they were not accessible to the examination of respondent, as that term should be applied in a case like this, and the court might have found the fact in the language of said section 1771 of the civil code. The defendant, however, set up in his answer an express warranty and its violation. The court so found, and the sufficiency of the evidence to support that finding is not attacked. We may therefore disregard the said statement as to an implied warranty as mere surplusage.

"We conclude, after an examination of the record, that the decision was entirely just, and the judgment is therefore affirmed." S.

The Market.

Business has had a decided slump on account of street car conditions and the outlook for car service is not encouraging. A few of the local florists ran their delivery trucks on Sunday with these slogans on their wind-shields, "Ride Free with Me" and "Say It with Flowers." A great many took advantage of their offer.

Stock is still plentiful. Single violets coming from California are good only in appearance. The later varieties of large mums and pompons are arriving in good quality and large supply. Pepper plants, Jerusalem cherries and mum plants are selling easily at good prices.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Retail Florists' Association was held at Jack Helmer's store Tuesday evening, November 18.

J. L. Schiller was in New York last week. He has a lot of primroses which he is growing for seed.

Schramm Bros. worked hard to carry through the Sunday closing proposition.

Visitors last week included the following: I. Rosnosky, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Florence L. Gooch, representing Gen. A. J. Gooch, of San Francisco, Cal., and F. A. Brooks, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. C. M. B.

Brazil, Ind.—A. Dinkel, of North Walnut street, has sold his greenhouse and plant growing business to Herman G. Hershey, of Clinton, Ind. Mr. Dinkel will continue only in the cut flower and house plant business; he opened his new store November 8 in the room formerly occupied by the Red Cross in the Brazil Trust Co. building. The interior of the store is attractively finished in tan and white enamel.

The Market.

There was a decided improvement in business last week. Chrysanthemums in all sizes and colors took the lead and pompons sold well. While there is an abundance of stock of good quality, there will be enough late stock for the Thanksgiving trade. Roses are none too plentiful, Russell being the leader at present with other varieties in rather short supply. Carnations are also on the short side. There are not enough greens, smilax, plumosus, etc., for the needs of the trade.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the residence of C. O. E. Boehm, Davenport, Tuesday, November 11. It was an afternoon meeting. A tour of the Vanderveer park conservatories showed the usual high standard of flowers, of which there were about 5,000 on exhibition; the arrangement was particularly pleasing. President Goos called the meeting to order. In the absence of Secretary Knees, the chair appointed W. C. Wilson secretary pro-tem. The names of N. A. Larson and Victor DeLescaille, of Davenport, were proposed for membership and a committee of recommendation appointed in each case to report at the next meeting. Chrysanthemums were the topic of discussion presented by Ludwig Stapp, whose talk proved interesting and instructive. Then supper was served. After extending a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Boehm for their hospitality, the club adjourned to meet at the residence of Joe Tuckis, Thursday, December 11.

THE VICTORY FERN (Nephrolepis victoria)

We take pleasure in offering this new and valuable variety of Nephrolepis. It is a beautifully crested form of "Teddy, Jr.," with fronds frequently subdivided on the ends, making a most unique, distinct, and desirable variety.

This Fern was AWARDED A BRONZE MEDAL

at the S. A. F. Convention at Detroit in August, 1919. The judges of the award reported as follows: "Special stress is laid on the new fern, Victory, with a rapid growth and a branching at end of fronds, making it a shapely plant. It should be a commercial success, and

We Recommend it Most Highly."

The Market.

Florists whose shops are near cemeteries are beginning to get orders for winter decoration of graves. Lack of frosts and of extremely cold weather has made the season somewhat late in this respect, as there have been flowers blooming in the cemeteries practically up to the present time.

Carnations still show a tendency to "go to sleep" easily, but with the advent of colder weather it is expected that this condition will be speedily eliminated. The mums now coming into the market are of excellent quality and the quantity is sufficient for the demand. Bulbs are still selling well, since many persons outside the trade are purchasing for home gardens.

Essex Florists Meet.

The November meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club was held Thursday evening, November 13, at Rover hall, Elizabeth avenue, Newark.

A committee was appointed to consult with the license committee of the city government regarding push cart peddlers of flowers. Members of the club reported that their business was greatly injured by these street venders, who sell on the street when flowers are plentiful, but quit when prices go up. People seeing the low price charged by the street peddlers, and not taking into consideration the low-grade flowers sold, think the florists are robbing them when they charge a reasonable price for good flowers.

The club has elected new officers, as follows: President, Edward Perrson; secretary, William Connelly; treasurer, D. A. Murphy. R. B. M.

Roundup, Mont.—E. Burton, manager of the Flower Store, is enthusiastic about the business outlook, having lately had to move to larger quarters. The coal strike has caused business to become rather quiet, as 1,200 miners in this field are out, and the situation looks grave.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING A FLORIST'S BEDROOM.

Will you tell me the best way to arrange the coils in a bedroom which I intend to heat with steam? The room is 9x12, with a height of eight feet to the ceiling, and is lighted by two windows. I have a lot of 1½-inch pipe and ells which I wish to use. G. S.—N. J.

In order to make an accurate estimate of the number of square feet of radiation required for heating a sleeping room, it is necessary to know the area of the glass in the windows, the amount of exposed wall surface and the temperature to be maintained.

If the room described does not have more than twenty square feet of glass and has only two of its walls exposed, about thirty square feet of radiation will be required to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. This will be furnished by sixty linear feet of 1½-inch pipe. We would suggest that a flow pipe be run around three sides of the room, with the return pipe underneath. While we would prefer to connect both flow and return directly with the boiler, it will answer if they are joined to a 1½-inch pipe running to the boiler or to the main.

HEATING WITH TWO BOILERS.

We have a greenhouse which has no protection except from the east side, where we propose building a potting shed right away. We have purchased two upright steam boilers of ten and twelve horsepower respectively. One has a steam outlet of one and a half inches and the other of one and a quarter inches. We propose to bring these up to two inches just after they leave the boilers and cross-connect them. We want to maintain 60 degrees with an outside temperature of 30 degrees below zero. We have thought of running a main overhead on the supports, taking off drops of one inch and returns running back to the boiler. The water line in the boilers will be about twelve inches below the level of the greenhouse floor. Is this sufficient to prevent the water from backing up? We are permitted to carry a pressure of ten pounds without a certified engineer and we wish to use that pressure if it is sufficient to get the required radiation.

E. B.—Can.

From the sketch which accompanies the inquiry we learn that the house is even-span, with sashbars thirteen and a half feet in length, and that the south and east walls have two feet of glass, but whether there is glass in the north and west walls is not shown. The length of the house is not stated, and hence we cannot give a direct answer regarding the radiation required, the size of the mains, or the required drop from the returns to the water level in the boiler.

If the house is not more than 100 feet long and if there is glass in all walls, we should consider the two boilers of ample capacity to heat the house when it is 30 degrees below zero outside; one of the boilers would do the work in mild weather. However, we should by far prefer one boiler of twenty to twenty-five horsepower, as the work of keeping up steam would be materially lessened. Careful attention to the firing of the boilers will be necessary.

By increasing the size of the mains at the boilers to 2-inch and connecting each of these with a 2½-inch main leading to the greenhouse, satisfactory results can be secured.

We would run the 2½-inch main through the house three feet below the ridge, and connect it with return coils below the benches by means of 1¼-inch pipes. There should be sixteen 1¼-inch pipes in the four coils, with five or six pipes in the coils under the outside beds and two or three under each of the beds in the middle of the house.

If there is no glass in the north wall one less return may be used under the north bench. In case the house is only fifty feet in length the main need not be larger than 2-inch.

When possible, it is desirable to have the lower end of the return four feet above the water level of the boiler, but in short houses fairly good results can be secured if there is a difference of two feet, provided that the line of the returns is carefully graded. In the present case we would give the returns about one inch of fall in fifteen feet and would carry them one foot above the level of the greenhouse floor at the lower end, if this does not bring the returns within six inches of the bottom of the benches at the highest point. Bottom heat is helpful in growing most crops, but when the pipes are less than one foot from the bench bottoms, there is great danger of the drying out of the soil, which often results in serious harm to the crops, unless more than usual attention is given to the watering. The surface may appear to be too wet, while the soil at the bottom of the bench may be dust-dry.

A Couple of Comments on Ease of Installation

E. H. Sunbury, of Wamesit, Massachusetts, writes the following:

"The Skinner System of Irrigation is the simplest and easiest to install, as well as the most practical I have ever heard of."

This is what Mr. R. Scheffler, of Wheaton, Illinois, writes:

"The Skinner System can be put up by any handy man."

The Market.

Business was quiet the first part of last week, but the latter part was extremely busy. Flowers have been plentiful, owing to favorable weather conditions, although there have been some light frosts.

The dominant flower has been the chrysanthemum. There has been a good sale for Dr. Enguehard, Yellow Bonnaffon and Mensa. Pompons have been in great demand for table decorations.

Ophelia, Shawyer, Mrs. Russell and Hoosier Beauty are chiefly in demand among roses. There is a good sale for both double and single violets. There was a great demand for poppies for Armistice day and a good business would have been done if the stock had been obtainable. Carnations have been plentiful. Calendulas have also been plentiful, with the demand brisk.

Various Notes.

At the greenhouses of Knecht & Freese they have been cutting some unusually fine Columbia and Russell roses, also some Major Bonnaffon and Eaton mums.

The Blossom Floral Co. had a number of large baskets for the opening of the Busy Bee, a new confectionery store here, and of the Gaylord Clothing Co.

Ten employees of the Flick Floral Co. were entertained at a dinner party Wednesday evening, November 12, at the Wolf & Dessauer tea room.

Mr. Huddelson, of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind.; Henry J. Kaspar, of the Kaspar Manufacturing Co., Chicago, and Hiram A. Frishkorn, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, called on the trade in this city last week.

A local firm, the E. F. Brinkman Co., has just signed a contract with the Society of American Florists for 1,000 road signs, 7½x20 feet, for $45,000.

At the store of Edgar Wenninghoff, some Chinese narcissus plants have been on display and there has been a good demand for them. Mr. Wenninghoff has had some decidedly artistic window displays recently. A. F.

Syracuse, N. Y.—The Baker Floral Co. has sold its greenhouses, with all stock and fixtures, to E. W. Edwards & Son.

CHARCOAL

Sandy Soils

Charcoal has the wonderful power of absorbing excess moisture, purifying it and yielding it up as required by the plant. So that in sandy soils otherwise excessive drainage is equalized to the plant by charcoal.

Long experienced and successful gardeners are practically unanimous in favoring charcoal as an absolute necessity in all soils.

One bushel of charcoal (extra fine, size 20) should be mixed with sixteen bushels of earth in general soil preparation and an inch or more of size 1 (nut) should be placed at the bottom of all pots and beds.

Prices: F. O. B. Ironton — 100 lbs. $2.50; 500 lbs. $11.00; 1000 lbs. $21.00; Ton $40.00; in bags, by freight only.

of roses and mums. White and Yellow Bonnaffon and Rager are the best sellers among the latter.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. report a heavy landscape business this fall. The wet summer and fall has induced a remarkable growth on rhododendrons and kalmias at their Cape Cod nurseries. These plants have made two growths and ripened both well. With so much moisture at their roots, all evergreens should winter remarkably well.

Inquiries at the various seed stores show that Dutch bulbs are well cleaned out. There is, as usual, a fair surplus of Paper White narcissi. Giganteum lilies are selling well and promise to be soon cleaned out. W. N. C.

MORRIS, ILL.

The property of the Morris Floral Co. has been purchased by Marsh & Marsh, who will grow roses for the wholesale market. George Marsh is from Iowa. Harry Marsh formerly worked for T. Nelson.

T. Nelson has added a house 60x200 feet.

George Heath has built another house of Dietsch materials, 15x160 feet, for propagating and for violets. He has now about 30,000 feet of glass. He has installed a new heating system, putting in Charleston boilers.

Auburn, Neb.—C. G. Milam, who expects to go to Texas shortly, has disposed of a half-interest in his greenhouses to his son-in-law, E. C. Holtz, formerly of Guide Rock, Neb., who with Lewis Milam will conduct the business. The salesroom in the Souders building will be maintained as heretofore.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

At the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society Tuesday evening, November 11, announcement was made that the first in the series of lectures will be given Tuesday evening, November 25, by Louis Graton, of Whitman, Mass. He will speak on strawberries, to the culture of which he has devoted a large part of his life, and concerning which he is a recognized authority. The lecture will be open to the public. The members of the Newport Garden Club and the Home Garden Association have been invited to attend.

The society, on invitation of Miss Mason, president of the Home Garden Association, voted to coöperate with that organization in its work. A number of exhibits were made and the members engaged in a general discussion of various subjects.

Various Notes.

Oscar Schultz had the decorations for the recent Armistice Ball held in Masonic hall by the Metal Trades' Council and for the ladies' night recently held in the same hall by the Elks.

Joseph Gibson, of Gibson Bros., is a candidate for the Representative Council from the Second ward and George M. DeFray from the First ward.

Robert Clifford, manager of the Leikens, Inc., stores in New York and this city, has arranged for an operation at the Newport hospital. Later he will sail for Porto Rico to be in charge of the floral department of the new Vanderbilt hotel there. He will also visit Cuba, where the Vanderbilt may also have a branch hotel shortly.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Stimulated by the annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, which was held in the parlors of the Narragansett hotel last week, business for that week has shown a substantial improvement over the two preceding ones. Mums are far more active than for a number of years, there being an increasing demand for the big single blooms that bring 50 cents to $1 apiece. Those retailing at $2.50 to $6 per dozen move readily and there is also a good demand for the smaller flowers in sprays.

Roses are in far better quantity and quality, while carnations are consistently improving. There has been an increased demand for palms, ferns, decorative foliage and blooming plants at satisfactory prices. Funeral work is about normal for this season, but wedding and pre-nuptial demands show considerable improvement. There is an unusually good supply of all kinds of plants and flowers for the Thanksgiving period.

Various Notes.

Mrs. James A. Foster, of the Warwick Greenhouses, left Tuesday, November 11, with a party for a 10-day automobile trip to Canada.

T. O'Connor had several wedding decorations last week, at which he used principally chrysanthemums.

Charles Smith, of the Eastern Wreath Co., has returned from a business trip through southeastern New England.

Alexander H. Johnson, of George Johnson & Son, was appointed sergeant-at-arms of the American Legion convention at Minneapolis, Minn., last week.

Noel T. McCarthy, son of the late Timothy McCarthy, and for many years superintendent of the Swan Point cemetery, was married November 12 at the SS. Peter and Paul cathedral to Miss Madeline M. Fox. Mr. McCarthy was attended by his brother, Joseph McCarthy, as best man.

The sudden death by accident of Frederick Shawyer, for the last few years head gardener at Farmholme, the estate of Miss Mary Sharswood, at Wequetequock, near Westerly, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

A Glazing Putty of Real Value

In all our experience and investigation we had never found a preparation for bulbing over the outside of a greenhouse that was quite satisfactory, until we ran across PERMANITE. This was about four years ago. At that time we set about investigating the merits of PERMANITE and proceeded to watch the results of its application to greenhouse roofs.

Last year we were entirely convinced of its high quality and durability, and accepted the western agency for the sale of these goods.

We applied PERMANITE to hundreds of greenhouse roofs, over almost every part of the United States.

The results obtained were highly satisfactory indeed. Glass roofs of all kinds, both old and new, were made water-tight and air-tight, saving thousands of plants from being spoiled by water dripping on them and saving many hundreds of tons of coal by making the roofs proof against the wind and storms of winter.

We give PERMANITE our unqualified endorsement and recommend it highly for all kinds of glazing.

We have a very large stock on hand in our warehouse and can ship immediately.

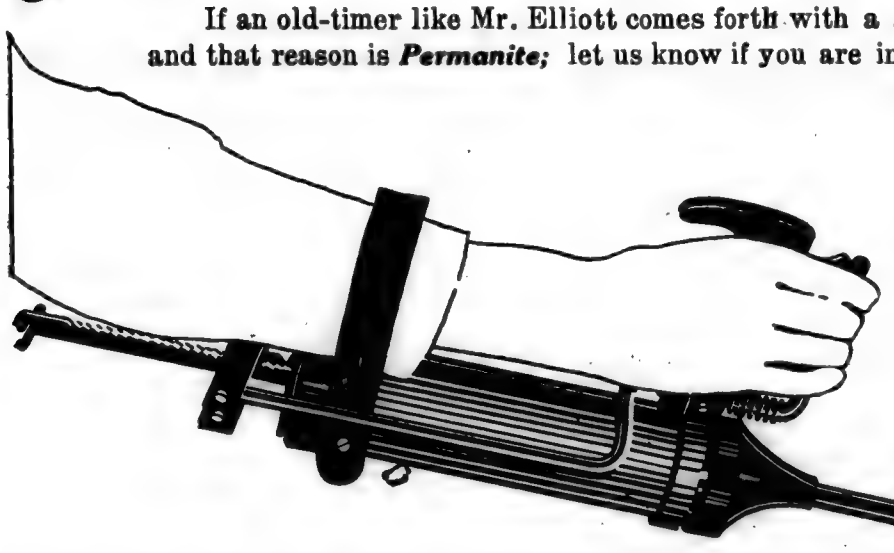
Permanite



[Trade-mark registered, U. S. Patent Office.]

Troubled with glass blowing off?

If you are—here is a letter from Mr. Elliott, proprietor of John Bader Company, at Pittsburgh, which will interest you:

"I want to make a little statement about your Permanite Glazing Cement. We used this on sixteen old houses several years ago; greenhouses were in such condition that every little wind storm would blow the glass off and we would have some time repairing them. Since using your Permanite I do not believe that one light of glass has ever been blown out; we now have it on all of our houses excepting three which were just built this year, and we will put the Permanite on these houses next season. It is certainly a boon to people with old houses; I would not be without it if it cost five times what it costs today."

If an old-timer like Mr. Elliott comes forth with a statement like this, surely there must be a reason and that reason is Permanite; let us know if you are interested in having further particulars and we will gladly send you full data without any obligations whatever.

ORNAMENTAL SHADE TREES

We are offering the following stock for shipment, fall of 1919 or spring of 1920. The Hackberry we are offering is the northern type, perfectly hardy as far north as you would wish to plant it; is free from disease and insects; is a clean, strong and desirable tree for all purposes. It has light gray bark, slender branches, light green leaves and will make a perfect shaped tree with less pruning than any other northern shade tree. The other trees are too well known to need description. Boxing or baling extra at cost.

Build your next benches of concrete and save money

For precisely the same reason that wood has been replaced by concrete in the construction of buildings, so, too, is wood being replaced by concrete in the building of greenhouse benches. Concrete benches are the most sightly, most efficient, most economical for every grower's use. Repairing is never necessary—they save time and money—prove an ever paying investment.

This bench has been widely accepted as the standard. Growers over the entire country have registered pleased expressions. Benches built under the "Ready-Set" system cost but slightly more than those made of wood and they put your bench expense at an end. Build your own benches—save the contractor's profit—save 20 per cent lumber waste—and considerable labor cost.

Our method for building concrete benches permits you to make the parts during spare moments—you can assemble the units into benches of any length, width or height when desired. It is the practical, easy, inexpensive way to build everlasting benches. It incorporates features that are exclusive.

You may not have in mind the building of benches for three, six or twelve months to come—so much more reason why you should let us submit an estimate on the cost to build benches, under the "Ready-Set" system, NOW. We base our estimate on the time in which you have to build. No great outlay is required.

"Ready-Set" stands for the best and most simple and inexpensive in concrete greenhouse benches. Ask those who use them.

"Ready-Set" Concrete Benches

The asking for an estimate and "Ready-Set" information in no way places you under obligation—just tell us you are interested.

A glance won't do

You'll simply have to study this illustration detail by detail to realize that you are looking at the most wonderful structure ever erected by a greenhouse manufacturing company.

And while you're studying, bear in mind that this greenhouse is hundreds of feet above the street, and that THE WIND IS BLOWING A GALE almost continuously. But no one worries about THAT—There's no danger of anything's breaking, bending, coming loose or collapsing. It can't, for the WHOLE STRUCTURE IS AGMCO BUILT.

That's your cue for 1920. We're ready to talk—are you?

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

Greenhouse Builders

This shows the Giant Arch with its V-shaped bracing, as used in the 28-foot 2-inch Semi-Iron house only. A sag rod extends from the ridge to the center of the pipe cross tie. The V-bracing extends from that point to a ¾-inch pipe purlin placed 1 foot 6 inches below the vent header.

Setting You Straight on Our Semi-Iron and Pipe Frame Houses

OF course we furnish materials for, or erect Pipe Frame and Semi-Iron Houses.

Don't think for a minute that because we build so many Iron Frame houses, it's the only kind we build.

Some Reasons

There are at least three reasons, however, why we build more of the Iron Frame ones than the others.

1. Been building the Iron Frame longer than any other builder, because we were the first to build it. Logically we know how it should best be built.

   The Iron Frame idea was originated by Mr. Burnham and first used by us over 40 years ago.

2. The higher cost of materials and labor, due to the war, makes the difference in cost between the Iron Frame and the Semi-Iron Frame so slight, that most growers prefer to pay that slight difference and get the better house.

3. The proven economy of wide houses and the demand for as few columns as possible, makes the Iron Frame the best proposition.

Columns or Rafters

Wide Semi-Iron Houses are of course built, but they have a regular forest of columns in comparison with our Iron Frame houses of the same width. The roof must have a certain amount of support. If you don't have iron rafters, you must have an equal support in columns. When you add rafters and trussing you can reduce your columns.

Lighter, Lasts Longer

It's been proven over and over again that the iron rafter construction, as we construct it, makes a far lighter house than the Pipe Frame.

Likewise, lasts longer.

In fact no one knows how long they will last, because none of us have yet lived long enough to know.

Whichever You Want

We are glad to sell you whichever construction you want; but whichever you decide to buy, am sure you will welcome facts and figures concerning each which our construction experts will gladly send to you.

The Two Best Roses

We ever have offered

CRUSADER. (Montgomery.) A big, strong-growing variety, robust and rugged in every characteristic. The growth is heavy and the flower stems are strong and heavy, producing very little blind wood. It is free growing and free flowering, and the blooms are truly characteristic of the variety—big and double, and, in color, a rich, velvety crimson. These large, heavily petaled blooms open perfectly and are amply supported by the strong-necked, heavy flower growths. Crusader takes water well and will keep under almost any conditions. The plant is free from canker and does not show any tendency to die at the union of scion and stock. It breaks freely from the hard wood and is a strong-growing, free-flowering red Rose.

If you want a real winner you should buy Crusader NOW.

PILGRIM. (Montgomery.) In color, a beautiful shade of bright rose-pink. The bud, which opens perfectly, is long and of ideal form. Pilgrim is a Rose of good substance and petalage, and at any stage of development is perfect in color and form of flower. Its pronounced tea fragrance will attract all rose lovers. It is prolific and highly productive of first quality blooms. The stems are straight and strong, and there is no tendency to weaken at the neck. It takes water freely, and this quality makes it a good Rose for the store man, as it will keep when cut and retain its color and fragrance. It is a wonderful grower, propagates easily, grafts nicely, grows freely, and throws strong bottom canes early, making heavy, profitable plants on the bench in a very short time. It makes little blind wood and is comparatively free from disease, resisting black-spot and mildew to a great extent. It is the pink Rose to grow.

Never have all the Florists, Seedsmen and Nurserymen of America had greater cause than today for Thanksgiving

THIS year the autumn celebration instituted by the Pilgrim Fathers to give thanks for the abundance of the season carries a real and sincere meaning for the florists', seed and nursery trades. A year ago the florists received larger returns than ever before, but the chief cause of that prosperity, the influenza epidemic, had a saddening rather than an elating influence. This season there is no such bitter taste in the cup of rejoicing. The demand which is felt so strongly this year is the result of the public's desire to spend for flowers some of the money which it possesses in greater amount than ever before.

For this inclination to add to the trade's coffers there is no reason for aught save rejoicing unalloyed. Not only is it not dependent on some abnormal occurrence, which is to be deplored rather than welcomed, but it represents a real growth in the public's use and desire of this trade's products. In such steady and constant increase there is strength and indication of continued progress, which are as much causes for thanksgiving as the tangible financial gains from such prosperity.

Trade Growth.

Without the shadow of doubt, florists have greater reason for satisfaction in the growth made by the trade in the course of the last year than in the pecuniary reward they may have derived in that period. Whereas the latter are temporary returns, the former represents an investment that is permanent and will itself be productive, giving greater yields as time passes.

One of the phases in trade growth during the year has been the increase of coöperative effort in publicity. The progress is to be credited under two heads, one to the advertising account and another to the trade fellowship or cooperation account. For, while the greater amount of publicity that is given to flowers is a matter of satisfaction, the increase in the spirit of union, of the desire to get together, is more important still, since it augurs larger achievements yet. Therein lies the basis for statements by trade leaders that the profession has advanced more in the last year or two than in the previous ten or fifteen years, statements made in sincere calculation of results obtained and not in boastful enthusiasm over present enterprise.

Strides Forward.

One of the most emphatic forward steps that have been taken is the widespread adoption of Sunday closing. Individual florists and certain communities have closed on Sunday in years past, but the trade in general had not adopted the practice. During the last summer, however, many florists shut their doors on Sunday of their own accord, and in many towns and cities the various members of the trade united in agreements to make no sales on the Sabbath. The way to unity and cohesion was not easily won, but in the many communities where, despite difficulties and temporary setbacks, the best sentiment ultimately prevailed the feeling of trade solidarity which has resulted has prepared the way for still further accomplishment.

Similarly the coöperative movement for advertising has won its way with the florists in various localities. Growers, wholesalers and retailers have united to encourage and urge the greater use of flowers by the public. The growers have come to the support of the retailers, recognizing that they, as well as the members of the trade who deal immediately with the public, have a great deal to gain by the larger demand to be created by advertising. The enthusiasm with which these elements of the trade have combined for the purpose of multiplying flower sales is a matter for rejoicing.

No less to be commended are the splendid efforts which the florists in various cities have shown in the first "Say It with Flowers" week. This idea spread from one city to another almost as soon as it was contemplated in Washington and the immediate results were truly surprising. Another year much more is confidently expected.

Bright Future.

And while the unity of purpose and action exhibited during the last year gives real reason for thanksgiving, there is equal cause in the actual business condition at present. Sales kept up remarkably well through the summer and gluts in the markets were few. Since the arrival of cold weather reports are common that sales are up to those of a year ago, though the trade had not anticipated anything of the kind.

Amistice day created much business in a good many places and this additional holiday trade is quite acceptable as a curtain-raiser for Thanksgiving. Predictions for the latter holiday have been rosy, for this year it is a real Thanksgiving day to the public. Though the armistice had been signed before Thanksgiving a year ago, the boys—over 2,000,000 of them—were still in France, and another 2,000,000 in the training camps. Many of those abroad had been absent for two Thanksgivings. So this year the festal board weighs heavy before them—and some of the weight is of decorations from the florist.

For Christmas no one makes predictions, for everyone confidently expects to be sold out. The only fly in the ointment is that there are not sufficient supplies of stock to satisfy demands. The absence of Belgian azaleas, in addition to the unusual demand, causes plants to be a thing more sought after than obtained for holiday sales.

Nor will prosperity stop at Christmas. It is certain to continue not only into another year but for several seasons. Production has not yet caught up with demand and the publicity campaigns, local and national, are steadily increasing the demand. Never was there a time in the trade when hard work won a surer reward and the industrious florists who are doing their utmost to increase stocks will celebrate in prosperity another Thanksgiving.

ARMISTICE DAY SALES

NEW HOLIDAY HELPS TRADE.

Proportionate to Effort.

While returns to the florists varied in different cities, there was considerable impetus given to flower sales by Armistice day, November 11. In some states it was declared a holiday and the greater observance was, of course, to the trade's advantage. In other localities less attention was paid to the occasion in a generally public way and florists in such places found little benefit. All in all, however, the gain was considerable.

That old truism, "As ye sow, so shall ye reap," proves its verity on an occasion such as this holiday. Where the trade made strong efforts to boost the day as an occasion for flowers, the results were marked. Buffalo combined its "Say It with Flowers" week and Armistice day advertising campaigns, using in the Courier two full pages Sunday, November 9, besides deriving publicity from other floricultural matter in the same issue. As the result of that drive, flowers brought unusual prices and the market was cleaned of stock.

South Celebrates.

Similar effort was rewarded in other sections. R. C. Kerr writes from Houston, Tex.:

"Without the question of a doubt Armistice day far exceeded our expectations. The Mothers of the Army and Navy recommended that floral offerings should decorate the flagpole and requested every firm and organization in Houston to send a floral tribute. They also advocated the wearing of flowers in commemoration of the boys who lost their lives.

"Among the floral offerings that were sent was one from the Houston Horticultural Society in memory of E. E. Stone, a member of our organization.

"The governor of the state and the mayor of Houston declared Armistice day a holiday and recommended that flowers should be used in commemoration of the boys.

"If the florists throughout the country will get busy, there is no question in my mind that this day can be made one of our big days. Our business was almost as large as Mothers' day. We were much gratified with the result and feel that next year will be even greater, provided we lay the proper foundation for the work."

New England Has Holiday.

The governor of Massachusetts declared Armistice day a holiday and business houses generally were closed November 11. Boston florists were pushing their "Say It with Flowers" week and they celebrated the holiday in a way that caught the public eye by virtue of the large space devoted to it in the public press. The Boston Globe on the following day ran the following beneath a 3-column illustration of the long line of loaded flower trucks:

"Say It with Flowers," and 100 members of the Florists' Association of Boston spoke yesterday when they dispatched thirty-five automobile delivery wagons with approximately 25,000 blooms and 1,000 potted plants to the patients in the various hospitals in Boston.

To the sick, the maimed and the convalescent, Armistice day, as it did to the rest of America, meant peace and rejoicing that the war was over. But it remained for the florists to think of the unfortunate hospital patients, and yesterday they inaugurated a practice that it is hoped will grow with each succeeding year until Armistice day and floral gifts will be synonymous.

Early yesterday morning the members of the Florists' Association of Boston and their employees gathered at the Boston Flower Exchange, on Otis street, and prepared immense boxes of flowers for distribution among the patients. Growers, commission men and retail florists contributed great quantities of chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, sweet peas and other seasonable blooms and plants in order that the day might be made brighter and more cheery for every hospital patient in the city.

The great flower boxes were packed with approximately 150 blooms each and into each of the thirty-five cars six of these boxes and several potted plants were packed. Each package contained a card denoting that the contents were presented by members of the association, and at 10:15 the parade of cars, in single formation, across the windshield of each being pasted the national slogan, "Say It with Flowers"—and the information that the machines were assigned to the various hospitals by the Florists' Association of Boston—started on their missions of mercy with the blowing of auto horns and the ringing of bells.

Upon the steps of the Boston Flower Exchange, their faces wreathed in smiles of satisfaction, the members of the organization and the officers, President Henry Penn, Vice-president William H. Elliott, Secretary E. S. Gorney, Financial Secretary Frank Edgar and Treasurer William C. Stickel, watched the cavalcade move away.

The machines moved through the downtown streets, along Boylston street to Copley square, where the unique parade disbanded and the machines departed for their various destinations.

Yesterday's innovation, it is hoped, will be more generally observed next year. Chrysanthemums of every color and species predominated among yesterday's contributions, and plans are already afoot to have New England's November flower, symbolic of Thanksgiving, take its place as the Armistice day favorite of the future.

Let us hope Mr. Kerr's and the Boston Globe's expectations of next year's holiday will be fulfilled.

HELPING THE PUBLIC DECIDE.

The effect of suggestion is being increasingly recognized as an important consideration in salesmanship. So many possible flower buyers do not know exactly what they want. But if there is an attractive window display to draw them into the store and awaiting them inside an adequate stock of the season's best offerings, arranged where anyone can see them without having to think of names or ask questions, then sales are much more easily accomplished.

The accompanying illustration, showing the interior of the Louise Flower Shop, Washington, D. C., suggests what may be done in store displays. In the background of the picture is shown the window space wherein Miss Louise Daugherty, sole owner of the store, has recently featured some notable window displays, in which birds, fish, miniature canyons and waterfalls and concealed electric lights, as well as flowers, have shared. Most of the illustration, however, is occupied by the profusion of chrysanthemums and other seasonable flowers that customarily attract customers.

WHAT IS AHEAD

THERE is no doubt in my mind that the coming season will be a most satisfactory one. Your share of whatever prosperity is in store for us will be in proportion to the effort that you have put forth to produce it. The law of compensation is not likely to permit you to share to a larger extent.

Some people look to the government to cure all social unrest and business disturbances. The experiment in most cases has been a sad failure. We welcome any legislation of a constructive nature, but we should resent government interference with business. Unfortunately, the people are still sending politicians to Washington to manage our national affairs, instead of business men, who are better qualified to understand the needs of the country.

Who Will Stop First?

We hear much about the profiteer and everybody denounces this selfish monster; yet, while everybody condemns the profiteer, nearly everybody continues profiteering. Everybody is doing his share—the manufacturer, the jobber, the retailer and labor—each is not missing an opportunity to grasp a share of the spoils. From every side we hear that profiteering must stop, but where shall we begin and who will make a beginning? No one is willing to sacrifice even a trifle, lest his neighbor should profit ever so little by the good one might do for the benefit of any general cause.

Thrift and increased production are to overcome the high cost of living. That is what we are told, not only by the statisticians, college professors and the self-styled public advisers, but by the government itself. And while Uncle Sam is preaching thrift to his people, they are working overtime at Washington to find ways and means to collect more taxes and spending the money in an almost reckless fashion. Every taxpayer is trying his utmost to make the other fellow help pay his taxes. The high rate of taxes has increased the high cost of living as much as anything else. Who will be the first one to practice thrift? Who is willing to help increase production and work ten hours a day instead of six or eight? Again we find a condition where most of the people can see danger ahead, but no one is willing to take the initiative to clear the road.

Uplifting the Business.

A similar condition confronts us today in our business pursuits. Through the trade organizations, such as the Society of American Florists, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and many local clubs, we have aimed to create a more favorable understanding among the members of the trade and the different branches of our business. It has been their endeavor to procure closer coöperation and undoubtedly much good has been accomplished. The F. T. D. has probably accomplished more in that direction than any other effort; for the reason that the benefits derived are traceable to actual, visible results. When an F. T. D. florist receives a telegram in the morning for a $25 order, there is no question in his mind that the F. T. D. is a good institution and a business producer. Not much is left to his imagination; the actual facts are in evidence.

There has been a great deal of discussion about the uplift of our business, how to increase sales, improve the working conditions and a hundred other subjects. Who is going to right all the wrongs? Who is the big leader among us that will be our standard bearer and show the way? Is there such a man in our profession? I say, yes, thousands of them, if only each and every one of our profession will see his duty to himself, to his neighbor and his business. Everybody should set his own house in order and the rest would be comparatively easy.

Individual Action Needed.

The great trouble is, we complain because nothing is being done. What are you doing to help build your own and your neighbor's business? What are you doing to elevate our profession, to make it more attractive for the young men and women who will carry on our business in the future? What are you doing to make our business bigger and more profitable? You have the opportunity every day and every minute of the day. Doing your duty—that is the solution.

Coöperation means nothing unless you personally are coöperating. An advertising campaign misses its mark completely unless you are a part and parcel of the campaign. Unless the public can see a reflection of the national advertising campaign in your store, you are losing all of the benefits of the advertising.

The S. A. F., our national publicity campaign, can do nothing for you unless you are willing to do something yourself. Sometimes we hear an argument that only the big retail stores are being benefited by national publicity. Admitting that they are being benefited, it is only to the extent that they are taking advantage of the opportunity which exists for all alike. Every florist or group of florists should do some local advertising, and if the local effort is linked with the national publicity, there are bound to be satisfactory results. Every florist in the country should be a subscriber to the national publicity campaign, but that is not sufficient. You must work along with the publicity campaign. Any collective movement only gives you an opportunity to participate in its benefits, but unless you take advantage of that oppertunity you cannot expect to accomplish anything.

The Essential Fact.

All this argument points to one essential fact: You must do your part. You must do your duty. You must grasp every opportunity to improve our business.

The retailer who keeps a careless shop, who does not deliver the goods in quality or value, one who lacks courtesy, one who is not aggressive, is not an asset to our business.

The grower who produces an inferior quality of flowers, who places them on the market in a careless manner, may the flowers be good or bad, is a detriment to our business. Poor flowers interfere with the sale of the good ones. If you do not pay close attention to the small details of growing—watering, ventilating and a hundred other details that enter into the growing of flowers—and for that reason produce stock that lacks quality or keeping ability, you are doing an injury to our business.

If you want the business to grow and expand, you should render 100 per cent efficiency in your establishment and the rest is simple. You are the one to be benefited and you are the one that must make the effort. No movement of any nature, either through the S. A. F. or a local effort, will produce good results unless you personally do your share. Before you criticize or condemn, always ask yourself the question, "Have I done my part?" Not until you can answer that question in the affirmative, will you derive the full benefits of any national or local movement.

Greater Advertising.

Look over the list of the subscribers to the national publicity fund and you will find nearly all the progressive florists in the country. Unfortunately, some of them do not subscribe to the extent that they should. The S. A. F. should for next year ask every subscriber to double his subscription and I believe over ninety per cent of them will do it gladly. Some men condemn national advertising, yet the first purchase they make is a nationally advertised article, which they never would have known had it not been for advertising.

We often hear the remark that we must educate the public to the use of flowers. But first of all let us educate ourselves to the point where we thoroughly understand our own business. Some years ago I expressed a thought that the S. A. F. should start on a campaign of education among the retail florists. Have three days' sessions at some central point and bring all the florists from the neighboring cities together for an educational session. Show them by actual demonstrations how to link the national publicity campaign with their own business. Teach them anything new in the business, the correct margin of profit, the value of local advertising, or any problem that may be brought up for discussion. A great deal of good could be accomplished. The distribution, or rather the selling, of flowers at retail is the all-important feature of our business that needs development. The production will take care of itself. I will leave it to the progressiveness of the grower to keep up with any effort made by the retailer.

Do Your Duty.

In my talk I have wandered somewhat from the main point that I wish to emphasize most strongly; that is, no one can help you unless you are willing to do it yourself. Our business is in a healthy condition. The last season was undoubtedly one of the best we have ever had, and the coming season looks promising to me. If we could only arouse every one of our craft to realize fully the wonderful opportunities that exist today, greater opportunities than we have ever had in the past, and urge every man to do his share 100 per cent, our business would grow in leaps and bounds. Doing your duty —that is the final answer.

Only the wise and experienced or the extremely young and inexperienced are ready to express themselves with confidence on any point. You may favor a peace treaty today and have a changed opinion three minutes hence. You may be against prohibition today and you have the privilege of changing your views over night.

But there can be no change of opinion or difference of opinion in reference to the fact that doing your duty is the sure, short and quick road to success.

CHANGE PLANT CRATES

NEW CRATE SPECIFICATIONS.

For Vegetable Plants.

New specifications for crates used in shipping cabbage, tomato and sweet potato plants were agreed upon at a conference between manufacturers of crates, plant growers and shippers, express officials and members of the Bureau of Markets at Washington a few days ago, which change specifications issued by the American Railway Express Co. some time ago. The express company had required plant crates to be constructed of sawed lumber instead of veneer, of a minimum thickness of five-sixteenths of an inch instead of three-sixteenths, but at the conference the shippers and manufacturers prevailed upon them to accept the lighter-weight veneer crate for a six months' trial beginning November 1, the crates to be strapped or wired. At the end of that time, if the express company continues to find objections to the crate, another conference will be held and another agreement made.

Specifications.

The specifications agreed upon for the six months follow:

500-PLANT CRATE.

Dimensions—Eight inches deep, eight inches wide, twelve and three-quarter inches long, inside measurement.

Heads—Two heads, five-eighths-inch thick, eight inches wide, eight inches long, sawed lumber, dressed on one side.

Sides—Two sides composed of three veneer slats, not less than three-sixteenths-inch thick, two and one-quarter inches wide, fourteen inches long. Two cleats three-sixteenths-inch thick, two and one-quarter inches wide, eight inches long, secured with staples or nails driven through the cleats and slats, and clinched.

Top—Composed of two veneer slats not less than three-sixteenths-inch thick, three and three-quarter inches wide, fourteen inches long. Two cleats three-sixteenths-inch thick, two and one-quarter inches wide, eight inches long, secured with staples or nails driven through the cleats and slats, and clinched.

Bottom—Not less than three-sixteenths-inch thick, eight inches wide, fourteen inches long, composed of not more than two pieces of veneer closely fitted together. Two cleats three-sixteenths-inch thick, two and one quarter inches wide, eight inches long, secured with staples or nails driven through the cleats and slats, and clinched.

Making up—Sides, top and bottom must be nailed with not less than three 4d. nails in each end. Crates must be wired all the way round at each end with wire not smaller than No. 15, or must be strapped with metal strips sixteen inches long, two straps to each end of top and bottom, securing all corners.

Wood—To be of pine or gum, or wood of equal strength, free from injurious knots or other defects, which weaken the strength of the material.

Marking—Crates must be legibly marked with two strong card tags—one on each end. Each tag must be tacked on with not less than five tacks. Tags must be legibly marked with name of consignee and destination, and shipper and shipping office.

Exceptions—On account of the fact that cabbage plants grown in different sections, and those grown in the same sections at different seasons, sometimes vary in size, shippers will be permitted to change the height of heads and centers of the crates to fit the plants, provided material of same strength and thickness as provided for in these specifications is used.

Crates for 1,000 plants are the same except in dimensions, which are eight inches deep, twelve and three-quarter inches long and sixteen inches wide, inside measurement. Crates for 2,000 plants require a center as well as two heads and in dimensions are eight inches deep, sixteen inches wide and twenty-five and one-eighth inches long, inside measurement.

Express Company Dissatisfied.

The express company's representatives were not satisfied with the conclusions reached. The strapping, as proposed, with wire or metal tape, it is believed will secure the slats to the heads and middle of the crates, but does not strengthen the slats themselves. The crates would be wholly acceptable to the express company were the slats of greater thickness, i. e., ¾-inch instead of 3/16-inch.

The shippers proposed that, inasmuch as a large supply of crates is in stock, they will strap them as set forth in the specifications and that in consideration of the express company's acceptance of these crates the shippers will hold the express company harmless from all claims at points of origin and destination which result from the use of these crates.

It was further agreed that the first-class rates are to be charged on all crates containing shipments which do not meet with the specifications above mentioned and that no veneer crates are to be offered or accepted by the express company, of stock now on hand, that are not strapped with wire or metal tape.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

COMMERCIAL CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Their Treatment.

The chrysanthemum (Greek: Golden Flower) includes many of our perennials, which we will exclude and only deal with our two favorites, the large mum and the pompon.

The last twenty years have produced wonders in the mum, thanks to such men as Mr. Pockett, E. G. Hill, Chas. H. Totty, Elmer D. Smith, A. Herrington and one in our own locality, C. W. Johnson, at Morgan Park, Ill. Others, too, have done great work and are doing it yet, but the above-named men have put dollars in the pockets of all mum growers, regardless of where they live.

Care of Cuttings.

Let us begin with the single-stemmed mum. Start propagating in February and March from plants cut back the previous fall which have been growing in flats or on a bench during the winter in a cool, airy house. Use only good, strong cuttings. I have found it practical when making cuttings to dip them in a nicotine solution with a little soap added. If the cuttings are not clean when placed in the sand, the result is loss of cuttings and stunted plants, which are sure to give dissatisfaction the whole season. A good batch of rooted cuttings means an even crop, all one size, with no "deadheads" on the bench. Keep plenty of stock plants, so that you can get as many cuttings into the sand at one time as you need of each variety. On some fast-growing varieties I take my cuttings when the plants are done flowering and place them in sand at once. In that way I don't have to bother with stock plants. However, I do not believe this to be practical with a slow grower.

I prefer 2½-inch pots for my cuttings, instead of flats, as the plants are taken care of for a long time, and when the pots are filled with roots, liquid manure can easily be applied, which proves quite beneficial to the young plant.

Benching the Plants.

When Memorial day has passed, get ready to bench out your mums. Several methods are used; some growers plant eight inches apart, some six inches, others seven inches. The latter I believe ideal for commercial purposes, as I get fine foliage and fine blooms when the plants are set this distance apart. At six inches a strong grower has not much chance. When the young plants are established, stake them at once; when they fall over, they lose vitality, and as a rule these are the first to get red spider and black spot, two things hard to conquer at the same time.

For spot on mums I believe the copper ammonia solution the best; for spider, good water pressure. When aphids make their appearance, I believe fumigating to be the most efficient remedy, as the fumes reach down into the crown; besides, butterflies and millets are also killed by the fumes.

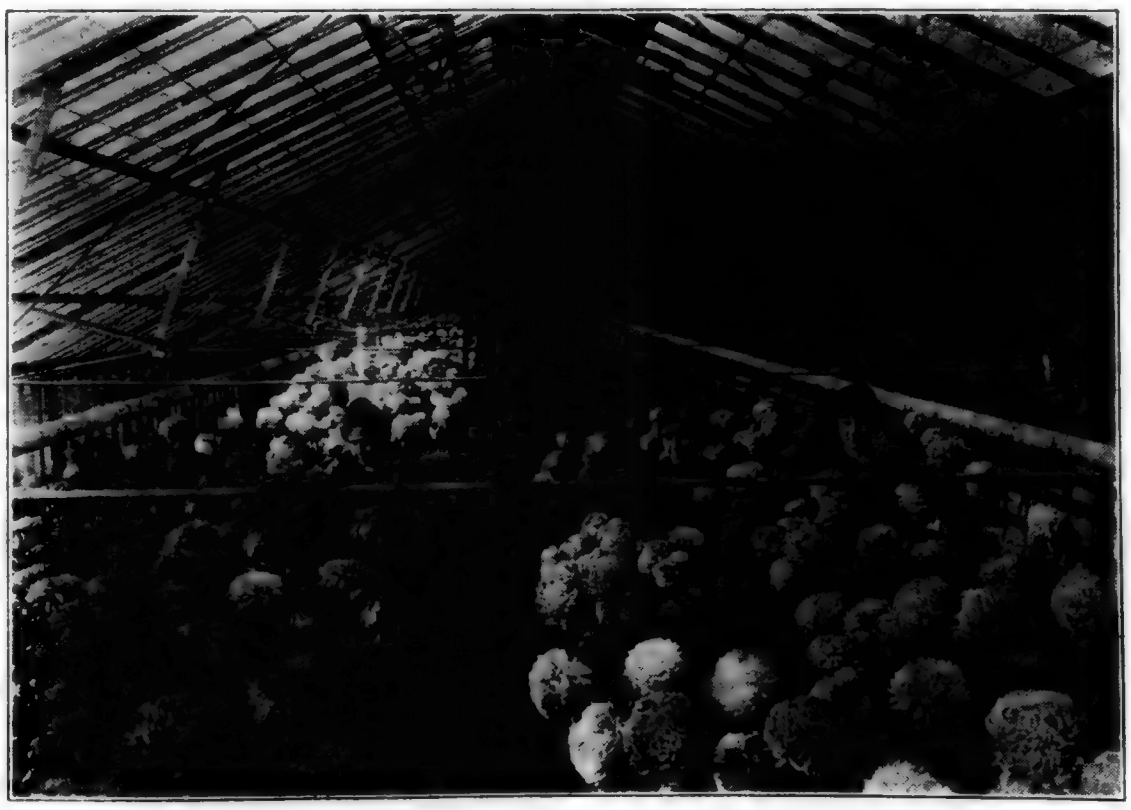
When spraying is done, I like to start about 2 p. m. and lower the vents to about three inches, as this helps to keep the odor in the house. In Denmark much fish-oil soap with nicotine is used for spraying and is effective and harmless. Hydrocyanic acid gas is good, but dangerous. I do not care to recommend it, but use it myself when it is necessary.

Spraying Important.

In summer I spray my mums overhead three or four times daily. Insects cannot live where there is sufficient moisture in the air. We have passed through a dry, hot summer, and my mums have had but one fumigation and are perfectly clean. They have never been syringed and have no spider.

Spraying daily early in the season will do away with much labor when the mums come into bud. When grasshoppers and leaf rollers make their appearance, I use arsenate of lead. I do not favor Paris green; it burns too easily on a hot day. When August comes around I apply a mulch of either cow or sheep manure; both are good. Remember the mum is a gross feeder. From August on the plants are active and need much food. In Europe we used a great deal of night soil and guano, these two being cheap years ago.

It takes a strong plant to produce a first-class flower; when the bud is about half-grown the plant will need more food, and when the petals commence to loosen, raise the temperature to 52 degrees at night to give the flowers the right color and size. When the blooms are matured, cool off a few days before cutting.



Taking the Bud.

Do you know that some growers lose out when it comes to the time to take the bud? I have known men to say: "We will take the next bud; we are too busy now." In most cases the crown bud is the best; in some the terminal bud is used. There is a big difference between the two. A crown bud is the third bud and the end of a season's growth. A terminal bud is borne on a growth coming from beneath the crown bud when not disbudded. When crown buds are wanted, be on the job and be extremely careful, lest in a few days the terminal buds get the best of it.

I believe you have all read articles about packing in our trade papers. It is brought up every year and is most important. There are too many flowers coming to the market spoiled in packing. Putting too many in a box is poor policy. Mums should be handled less than any other flower, but, it seems, get the most abuse.

Pompons.

Pompons are treated like the large mums while young, with the exception that one must keep on pinching to get as bushy a plant as possible by July. After that let them go, and they will do the rest. When spring comes, my pom-pons are planted outdoors until July, when I bring them in and push them along as I do the large mums. Cultivate them freely, give them plenty of moisture overhead and watch your pompons go ahead. I don't want to go into details about varieties; each market has its favorites and few growers agree on any one variety.

Let us work toward the day when we can truthfully say that we have the mum up in line with the rose. There is no reason why it can't be done. A man devoting his time to growing mums should receive as much for his labor and his investment as a rose grower. But he does not—simply because he is not so careful as the rose grower.

MUMS FOR ALL TASTES.

Effort to satisfy the varying demands of the flower-buying public is suggested by the flourishing collection of chrysanthemums of different varieties shown in the illustration on page 23, which gives a view of the interior of the chrysanthemum house at the range of E. H. Montgomery, Fairfield, Ia., constructed four years ago by the John C. Moninger Co. The picture bears out Mr. Montgomery's statement that he has the new fancy mums as well as the standard ones. Mr. Montgomery's 14-year-old daughter is standing on the left of the path.

PERSONAL GLIMPSES

COLLEGE MEN.

Wallace R. Pierson.

Forced to enter the greenhouses upon completion of the ordinary high school course, the writer has often envied the fortunate young man who began his business career with the inestimable advantage of a college training. Commercial floriculture is a dignified pursuit and it is fitting that its devotees should possess cultivated faculties. Many self-made men are inclined to disparage the practical value of advanced study, believing it unessential to success, but undoubtedly those same men would have achieved earlier in life a more notable degree of prosperity—to say nothing of the greater pleasure derived from their business—had they started out with the broader equipment such as the college course alone imparts.

In this line of thought the names of a number of florists come perforce to mind, prominent among them being that of "Wally" Pierson, than whom there are few better known young men in the trade. We always admired this stanch young New Englander, because he is known to possess the courage of his convictions. Trade coöperation receives his best support and he is ever ready to assist in the solution of the big problems. He is one of the workers who can always be relied upon to do his share. Forceful in argument, tolerant in debate, the constructive impress of his personality is felt at all trade gatherings. Let us hope that many more business men of his ilk will be evolved within the ranks of the trade as the profession advances.

Robert Pyle.

When Robert Pyle, fresh from Swarthmore, elected to make the florists' business his life work, there was added to the fold a man of the most eminent abilities and splendid ideals. And although Mr. Pyle has been a successful florist, the writer cannot escape the feeling that the same devotion to business in countless other commercial fields would have won for him greater rewards. Since he is fond of flowers, there is little doubt that the æsthetic side of the business appealed strongly to him.

During the last twenty years Mr. Pyle has done much to popularize his favorite flower, the rose. In addition to the lavish use of printers' ink, he has labored zealously upon the platform to create in the bosom of the public a greater love of the beautiful as exemplified in flowers. "A rose for every home" is his slogan. That his work, as well as the work of other unselfish men of similar ideals, has borne fruit, is indicated by the unprecedented sale of flowers within recent years. Robert Pyle's activities in the American Rose Society, of which he is now president, have been untiring and are thoroughly characteristic of the man. He truly loves his work and from its performance derives his greatest pleasure. This, after all, is the truest gospel of life.

J. W. Grandy.

A dozen years or so ago there came to West Grove, Pa., a young man desirous of supplementing his college course in horticulture by some practical experience in a commercial greenhouse establishment. He had chosen the florists' business for his life work. After a few years of preparatory effort, combined with study of the successful methods employed by various up-to-date florists, this young man opened a modern retail flower store in his native city, Norfolk, Va., and today Grandy the Florist is one of the best known members of his profession in the country.

The secret of J. W. Grandy's signal success is that he prepared himself for his work. In addition to securing practical training before embarking in business, he was able to bring to bear in his chosen field the enlarged view, the disciplined mind and the developed personality typical of the successful college man. The business of the up-to-date retail florist is transacted with people of the better walks of life. His clients are, for the most part, men and women of taste and refinement, which makes it all the more to be desired that he be a man of more than average culture. When competition is keen and when merchants are put to their wit's end in devising new ways of moving their wares, the college-trained man has everything in his favor. The notably successful florist of the future will be the man who takes up his commercial career with a broad general education.

Mark Palmer.

There is better organization in the business world today than at any previous time in history. It is vitally essential for the achievement of progress. The old competitive idea is obsolete and coöperation, instead of competition, is the life of the trade. What was once left to the uncertain solution of personal initiative is now being solved by the concerted action of trade bodies, the constructive influence of which is now recognized in all branches of the florists' profession. To sustain this great work, leadership must be forthcoming.

It is extremely gratifying to note the active part taken by that talented young man, Mark Palmer, of Buffalo, in the trade affairs of his city. Blessed by a pleasing personal presence and favored by a natural aptitude for leadership, he will doubtless develop into a strong creative force in the local councils of the organized trade. It is a well known fact that for several years the best young men have been drifting away from the calling of their florist fathers, apparently finding greater remuneration and encouragement in other lines of endeavor. Now that the war has substantially proved the florists' business to be one of dignity and stability, there is no reason for the boy to fear following in the course of his parents. The profession has been raised to a higher plane, offering favorable working hours and compensation comparable with that of other industrial pursuits. For young men of brains and ability the commercial flower business now offers better opportunities than ever before. And it is to be hoped that many more able young men like Mr. Palmer will embrace these opportunities by adopting the business for their life work.

TATE'S TIPS

TEACHING THE PUBLIC.

Unconscious Education.

There is, perhaps, no business that has made the same rapid strides in the last fifty years that the retail florists' business has made. When we go into the history of the growth of this branch of the trade, we find it a romance in which "Say It with Flowers" has played the leading role.

In a recent article it was my endeavor to bring out the importance of education among the growers. While talking this matter over with a retailer, we compared the number of retail stores doing business in a large city twenty-five years ago with the number engaged in a like calling today. Of course, as the inhabitants of a city increase the number of stores naturally increases. But the retail florists' business has increased on much greater proportion than the population in the cities of this country. Now, the reason for this is, I think, that the florists themselves have been unconsciously sowing among the public the seeds of education, which are now springing into life and bearing fruit a thousand-fold.

Common Efforts.

The object of this article is to bring out the fact that, if the education of the public has been the greatest factor in the miraculous advance the business has made in the last fifty years without any well defined plan, its possibilities in the next fifty years, with all who are engaged in the business working together with this object in view, are yet greater. The first point to be considered is the best means of gaining the ear and the eye of the public and in no better way can this be accomplished than by everyone connected with any branch of the business or its allied trades getting together, for the more flowers that are used, the more supplies, ribbons and everything of this description that goes to make up the retail business, will be consumed.

Let everyone get behind the national advertising campaign; let him feel that this campaign is a vital part of his own business and that as it progresses his individual business will progress.

Indeed, both the publicity campaign and the F. T. D. are fast taking such a hold upon the public that they will do more for the florists' business in the future than any of us can estimate at the present time. Both of them have gone beyond the experimental stage; they have both proved themselves to be sound business propositions. We are all familiar with the fact that once an enterprise gets into a position where it pays good dividends, its stock will soon advance.

Let each florist feel that every advertisement in the magazines, every billboard and, in fact, every appearance of the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is his personal advertisement. Conduct your business as though you were alone responsible for it, as you are to a great extent, to the customer who perhaps through reading somewhere determines to "Say It with Flowers." Let your goods, your attention and your skill go to make one whose first experience it is in saying it with flowers realize what a perfect way it is.

New Customers and Converts.

This is what the practical educator would term personal work. While all that goes before is most important, it is the personal work that finally clinches all that the advertising campaign has started and gains a convert to the great army who on every occasion will "Say It with Flowers."

In handling telegraph orders, personal work is most important. The florist receives an order from a distant city. It may be for a funeral, or perhaps a box of flowers or a plant for some happy occasion, to be delivered to someone of whom you have never heard before. Consider for a moment the possibilities in such a case. Perhaps the recipient has never had occasion to buy flowers before. Cannot you readily see how important it is that your wire order should be better than satisfactory? The novelty of your order being sent by someone out of town, probably living at a great distance, will have its effect and in every case we may depend upon the sender being near and dear to the recipient. This will make your order attract more attention than any other received and a note will be made of where it comes from; in nine cases out of ten, you have made a new customer and at the same time a convert to flowergrams.

Let us all remember that in our education we are only beginners. Great things are ahead of us, but above all things, let us remember that no one who was not educated ever imparted an education; there is only one way to acquire an education and that is through constant application and study.

LAMBERT'S LOCALS.

E. H. Kunze, proprietor of the Newton Floral Co., Newton, Kan., has a fine new carnation, which has the earmarks of a winner. It is a sport from Supreme, salmon pink, measuring four inches, and has a stiff stem, good calyx and heavy foliage. Mr. Kunze points to it with considerable pride and says he will have some for the trade next spring.

According to Chas. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., the coal situation is not so bad in that state, though he himself is installing oil. Mr. Mueller is an authority in his community, being active in all local public enterprises. He states that within a few days the agitators, not miners, will be moved out by the governor of Kansas and once the agitators are eliminated the miners will return to work. Most of the miners, he says, want to return to work and the operators will treat with the miners individually, to their mutual benefit. Mr. Mueller has added another delivery car, a Hudson Supersix, making eight cars in use for his two successful stores and his greenhouses. Mr. Mueller is president of the school board, head of the local Rotarians and at the head of the Civic League.

WHO'S IN THE HOOSIER?

INSURANCE TANGLE GROWS.

Lawyers Working On It.

That the Indiana florists who undertook to straighten out the affairs of the American Mutual Cyclone & Hail Insurance Co., of Muncie, are finding their task rather more difficult than they expected is shown by a letter sent out in printed form over the signature of President Dillon Myers. Apparently it went to all the members outside the state of Indiana and it puts them in doubt as to their status, because they previously had been notified that they were out, simply dropped. Now it appears legal opinion is that these "foreign" members could not be so summarily disposed of, but that membership is held to be a liability instead of an asset.

Here is the case of a Michigan florist. He took out membership in 1918, receiving a policy for $2,000. In the spring of 1919 an assessment of $70 was paid. Shortly after, notice was received that the policy was void, because the company's charter did not permit it to write insurance outside the state of Indiana. The florist did not know where he was "at" and did nothing.

Still a Member and Liable?

Now comes the following letter from President Myers:

> We are trying to reorganize the American Mutual Cyclone & Hail Insurance Co., of Muncie, Ind., and find that our charter does not permit the carrying of risks outside of the state, but that all properties to be insured "must be located within the state of Indiana." To continue to carry such risks outside, or other than in Indiana, would mean the forfeiting of our charter by the auditor of the state, who has so informed us.
> We employed an attorney, who, after thorough investigation, informs us that these certificates of membership, or so-called policies, are binding on all parties concerned (members), and that in a final settlement, such as would be made by a receiver, should one be appointed to wind up the affairs of the company, these certificates of membership or so-called policies would be assessed and that these assessments could be collected and that the best way to completely cancel same is for the assured to sign the attached release blank, which will be accepted by the company and placed on file.

This will cancel your membership and relieve you from any future liabilities, as under the charter each member is liable for ten per cent of the total amount of the insurance in force, for each loss if needed, and as the certificates of membership or so-called policies outside of the state are not many, and your assessment was rather a high one the last time, you can see that it will be to your interest to be released from any future obligation.

We regret very much to be compelled to ask this of you, but in order that we may save our charter, for the owners of Indiana greenhouses who have assumed the complete management of the company, for Indiana exclusively, we would ask you as Man to Man to help us in this way, by signing the attached blank (release) and mail it to us at once, in the enclosed stamped addressed envelope, which will be greatly appreciated, we assure you, and oblige.

The blank enclosed was a mutual release, the assured releasing the company from all indemnities or claims for such and the company releasing the assured from all further dues and assessments.

The Present Management.

The present management, which took hold of the concern last spring, lies in a board of directors all of whom are florists in Indiana. They elected Dillon Myers, of Bluffton, as president, but retained as secretary, James F. Hildebrand, who had been the active manager of the company before its reorganization, receiving, according to President Myers, twenty-three per cent of the membership fees, including those of the florists outside the state.

BAN BARS BUSINESS

WORKING AT CROSS-PURPOSES.

F. H. B. vs. National Interests.

"We are unable to grasp the reasoning of official or scientific minds, which ignore commercial or national interests," write McHutchison & Co., New York. "If the members of the Federal Horticultural Board were doctors they would confine all human beings to their houses for fear they might contract some disease if allowed to run loose, and common sense shows that we would then soon have no homes or sidewalks or intercourse with others." Their attitude is fully apparent from their response to a letter addressed to the board by McHutchison & Co. regarding plant imports bonded to Canada coming through United States ports. The inquiry read as follows:

By request of several of our Canadian customers we have received prices from them upon Holland nursery stock, consisting for the most part of Azalea mollis, rhododendrons, magnolias, boxwood, roses, etc., which Canadian laws do not prevent Canadian florists from importing to stimulate their own commerce, as our United States laws do.

These nursery stock items are mostly balled, i. e., with earth about the roots. In one of your recent letters you advised that such stock cannot come through United States entry ports when earth is about the roots, even though they are bonded through to Canadian ports.

You will see how your regulations work to the disadvantage of American trade. Such shipments will have to be forwarded via English and Canadian ports, thus driving commerce away from American ports. It will also be a disadvantage to the Canadian importers, as they will get slower service at an increased price.

Before issuing our quotations we suggest, as patriotic Americans, that you reconsider the matter. As these shipments are not unpacked in the United States, there is not the slightest danger of introducing insect pests or plant diseases in the United States through them, and we do not think it is your intention to drive commerce away from the United States without adequate reasons.

In quoting to Canadian firms we must either say that the shipments can come in bond through New York ports as usual, or that we can book orders only when the importer makes arrangements for shipments to come via English and Canadian ports; so we trust you will give proper consideration to the matter and advise us of your final decision as soon as possible. We are receiving almost daily requests from chambers of commerce and other commercial bodies to boost foreign trade, but so far as our business is concerned, your regulations block any efforts we could make. Yours truly, McHutchison & Co.

How remote is the possibility of the F. H. B. reconsidering its decisions and how firmly their present ideas are established is indicated by the following reply to the above letter:

In reply to your letter of November 13, I would say that although our regulations prohibiting the importation into the United States of plants with sand, soil and earth on their roots even for transmission in bond do work some disadvantage to American brokers, they are designed to act to a far greater advantage to the growers of plants in the United States. One of the most important sources of foreign insects which have come into the United States and have attacked our nursery crops, farm crops and wild and ornamental trees has been the balls of earth about the roots of imported plants. Many insects spend their lives buried in the soil and emerge from this soil to attack our plants. Even though the soil is tied up in sacks and packed in boxes, these insects may emerge and fly away from a package, thus gaining entry into this country. It is therefore one of the very necessary safeguards of this immediate transportation in bond that the plants shall not have sand, soil or earth on their roots and that bulbs shall not be packed in sand, soil or earth, except such sterilized soil as is provided for in amendment 1 to Regulations Supplemental to Notice of Quarantine 37, a copy of which I enclose. Very truly yours,

R. Kent Beattie,
Pathologist in Charge, Foreign Plant Quarantine.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The funeral work of the trade in Detroit, Mich., was stimulated recently by the arrival of the bodies of the fallen heroes of the war from the Russian battle fields. Those viewing the parade which was given in honor of these soldiers would probably prefer that the 70,000 fallen heroes who lie in France should remain there, as it is not a pleasant sight to see a city in mourning, as would happen if their bodies were all brought back to the United States.

At the Statler hotel, Detroit, Mich., Tuesday evening, November 18, the Florists' Association of Detroit held in connection with its regular meeting a small but complete mum show. For the variety, color and size of the mums exhibited it was unbeatable. The feature display was one by private growers, who exhibited the largest and finest exhibition mums ever seen here. Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., was present and had a collection of new unnamed varieties in both large chrysanthemums and pompons. After a short talk on the history of the chrysanthemum, Mr. Smith discussed the merits of the newer varieties, a subject of great interest. He also showed us some new bushy pot-grown pompons, which he promises will be a possibility in a year or two in plants of the 4-inch and 5-inch pot size. This was easily the most interesting of the new things offered. A vase of the new pompon, Sunshine, was shown by J. B. Goetz Sons, of Saginaw, Mich. The Ruth Baur carnation was also exhibited by Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, Ind., Mr. Steinkamp being a guest. W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., had a vase of Dolly Dimple which was admirable. And Thomas Browne, Greenfield, Mich., had several vases of exquisite mums, beautifully grown. A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, gave an interesting talk on Japan and showed a number of good pictures, taken during his visit to the land of Nippon. The meeting was well attended, the ladies coming in for their share, and was concluded with a vote of thanks to the speakers and to those who so kindly displayed their products.

A. H. Evans, of Detroit, was passing around the cigars last week. It's a boy. It is not often a florist has the good fortune to travel all over the world. Mr. Evans, at the early age of 9, was learning the florists' business. The wanderlust got hold of him; so he went out in search of romance in the four quarters of the world. After many years of travel and work in foreign countries, he landed in Detroit, liked the place, and has been a florist there ever since.

DULUTH, MINN.

The Market.

There was a great change in the weather last week, changing from extreme winter to something more like spring, and consequently business has increased wonderfully. Counter trade saw a marked increase, which is likely to continue. There was a plentiful supply of good stock for Thanksgiving day. The local cut of chrysanthemums is at its best this week, which is a great advantage to the florists here, for nothing bruises so much in packing as the incurved varieties of chrysanthemums. The local cut includes such varieties as Enguehard, Bonnaffon, Marigold, Turner and Oconto. Roses are a big factor in the Thanksgiving trade and fancy stock is in plentiful supply. Carnations have been improving right along and some excellent stock has been seen this week; they still retain their good prices. There was a glut of single violets last week and many have to be used up in funeral work to get rid of them, while double violets are scarce. There is a good supply of potted plants, including Primula obconica, cyclamens and chrysanthemums. Out-of-town business is increasing right along and a great deal of stock is being shipped daily to the towns on the Iron Range.

Various Notes.

The Superior Floral Co. had the elaborate decoration and bouquets for the Cruption wedding. A canopy of southern smilax was made, under which the wedding took place. The fireplace was banked with palms and ferns, with southern smilax entwined. The chandelier was decorated with lily of the valley and asparagus, with bows of white chiffon. The bride's bouquet consisted of valley, sweet peas and cattleyas. The bridesmaids' bouquets were made of My Maryland roses, white pompons and gypsophila. The matron of honor wore a corsage of violets and cattleyas and the maid of honor wore a corsage of Shawyer roses. At the greenhouses the carnations are just coming into crop and will be in fine cutting for Christmas. Victory, White Wonder and Pink Enchantress are varieties that are doing exceedingly well. This firm's cut of chrysanthemums will be over by the end of the week. In potted plants primroses and cyclamens will be in good shape for the Christmas trade.

F. C. Ashby, of the Tower Floral Co., Superior street, had a large decoration for a reception banquet given for the McKellar wedding at the Gitchi Nidji Club. Two long tables, at which were seated 100 guests, were set under a canopy of southern smilax with small art baskets, which were hung from the arches, filled with Killarney roses and tied with small bows of white chiffon. There was also a large basket filled with chrysanthemums hanging from the center. The fireplace was banked with palms and ferns and yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Ashby says that business has been satisfactory during the last month, since he has been able to clean up most of his stock each day without much waste.

O. J. Eichen, of the Duluth Floral Co., went to Chicago on a buying trip for Thanksgiving. J. E. S.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

Last week saw the end of surplus stock. Saturday the market cleaned up in a thorough manner, which has not happened before during this season.

An unusually large number of mums were grown this year, and as their season comes to an end the grower of other flowers comes into his own. There is no reason to believe that prices will soar to the height of last year, but prices will, no doubt, be firm for a long time.

A large number of Paper White narcissi were on the market last week at poor prices and moved slowly. Good stevia is here and sells readily, because there has not been an overabundance of it. Sweet peas are arriving slowly and lack quality, but sell at good prices. Violets are still scarce, of good quality and firm in price. Calla lilies are becoming more numerous and are in good demand. Carnations are short in supply and the crops seem slow to throw heavy cuts. All roses have been plentiful except red roses and Beauties.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

MR. AND MRS. E. GURNEY HILL.

STRIVING to tell why E. G. Hill is in the "Who's Who" of the trade is akin to painting the lily, carrying coals to Newcastle and similar vain undertakings. Particularly is it so now, when Mr. and Mrs. Hill have just completed their own "swing around the circle" and met face to face fellow florists in many cities. Their tour was, judging from this snapshot at Seattle, more beneficial than the late presidential one; Mr. Hill admits he gained ten pounds and says the trip did both him and Mrs. Hill a world of good. The western call has always been strong in Mr. Hill; he started life at Rochdale, England, September 11, 1847, but three years later reached Geneva, N. Y., and in 1870 got to Richmond, Ind., where he has taken firm root. Although the American Rose Annual credits him with thirty-five varieties, Mr. Hill expects to raise more roses, some as good as the famous Columbia and Premier, even if he has passed three score and ten. No, he doesn't look it and he doesn't act it.

Advertising Club's Booth.

A booth was maintained November 20 to 25 by the Florists' Advertising Club at the Food, Household and Music exposition held in the Auditorium. A large sign in the background, a facsimile of the S. A. F. slogan, "Say It with Flowers," easily caught the eye. Visitors were shown inexpensive ways in which to arrange flowers in their homes. The booth was arranged as a dining room, with table and buffet trimmed for a festive occasion. Numerous vases of mums were also shown. Ladies were in charge to give information to the public regarding prices and combinations of flowers which could be readily procured from any florist at little cost. The baskets and centerpieces shown were all under $5 in retail value. Keeping in mind the class which would be expected to show interest in a household show, the Advertising Club kept its displays moderate in cost and there is no doubt that a great deal of good resulted.

Various Notes.

The new store of Baumgarten, Inc., which opened Tuesday, November 25, at 93 Wisconsin street, gives evidence by its artistic appointments of the good taste of Mrs. Ida Baumgarten, who is the active head of this firm. As Mrs. Baumgarten puts it, "Success has led us to this location, where we can more fully provide our patrons with the little niceties added to each order which are so much appreciated." Many friends in and out of the trade were present at the opening to wish them well.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Florists' Advertising Club was held November 18 at the Blatz hotel. Money was appropriated for December and January advertising, to cover car cards and newspaper work.

Mrs. Mazey, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Julius Schaeffer, with Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, St. Louis, Mo., were in the city last week, attending to Christmas purchases. A. H. M.

PENN'S magazine for his retail customers, "The Blue Flower," has started its fifth year.

LAST-MINUTE buyers of giganteum bulbs have not much time left if they want a crop for Easter.

CONSIDERATION of the viewpoint of the person on the other end of a sale or purchase will give one a business insight that is exceedingly valuable.

ONE express company received over 300,000 shipments at its nineteen "no mark bureaus" last year. Surely the "Pack it Right, Mark it Right" campaign was needed.

THE editor's desk has been decorated for several days by a fine vase of a new pompon mum, Seedling No. 10, from R. E. Moss, Vinita, Okla. The large, full, snow-white flower has excellent keeping quality.

IT is with pleasure that The Review greets the reappearance of its contemporary, the Florists' Exchange, with its Rochester date line, after the suspension by the printing trades in New York city. We hope that it may soon be issued regularly again from its own printing plant, which long has been a model of its kind.

THE publishers of The Review can look back to the time when one man did most of the typesetting, and in a few hours. But those days are past. Now the composition is a real problem. It is impossible to provide enough men to set all the type in the day or two preceding the hour of going to press; composition must go on all through the week. It is the custom of weekly trade papers in other lines to close the next issue as soon as the preceding one has gone on the press, thus getting a week for the typesetting, but The Review can hold its forms open until the night before an adition goes to press—can hold open, that is, if its friends do not throw too much of the work into that last day. Mail copy to reach Chicago Friday or Saturday when you can.

WHEN you're talking business, talk dollars and sense, and don't forget either.

"IN FLANDERS FIELDS."

Nearly all retail florists felt the call for poppies for Armistice day, but could not profit by it.

In a large number of places there was concerted effort to make of November 11 another general flower day, but the measure of success for the first attempt was not such as to arouse sanguine expectations. The only real, spontaneous call was for poppies, the flowers that blow in the Flanders fields of the verses.

We can make November 11 a poppy day without half trying. Is it worth while?

In this connection it is worth noting that a British seed house, Baker's, of Codsall, Wolverhampton, is introducing a novelty called Sunbeam poppies. The disseminator says: "In color they resemble the well-known Iceland poppy, but in length and strength of stem, size of flower, robust habit, they are so far in advance as to justify their being considered a new type. Flowering from May to October, makes them an ideal plant either for the hardy border or bedding work, while for cut flower purposes we predict they will, when known, be used as universally as the sweet pea." The Sunbeam poppies were given an award of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society July 19 and may be just what we want for Armistice day.

FIGURES ON BIG BUYING.

To the florist who wishes to compare the advance in his sales over other years with the much discussed increase in buying in merchandise lines, the figures of last week's trade report of R. G. Dun & Co. offer these statements:

"Retail business is fifty to seventy-five per cent larger than in November of last year. Mail order houses are doing thirty to forty per cent more business than in last November. These figures mean new high record totals for business in the current month and offer the best explanation possible for the pressure on the wholesale markets which is constantly forcing prices upward.

"Quotations on merchandise in many cases are already considerably higher than the highest of war times and there is no evidence of either the satisfying of demands or the exercise of restraint on the part of buyers.

"Indications are that the approaching holiday trade will be limited only by the difficulty of obtaining sufficient goods with which to meet demands."

COAL MEN IN DEADLOCK.

After the operators made propositions which the coal men turned down, Secretary of Labor Wilson suggested an increase amounting to 31.61 per cent, which was approved by the miners but rejected by the operators. The latter desired the administration's agreement to an increase in price to the consumer to cover the added wages, but the government officials declare the mine owners have drawn enormous profits of late and can stand the wage increase without suffering a loss of profits of a proper percentage. So a deadlock on three sides holds up production.

In the meantime state governors are taking steps to seize the mines and enforce operation. And not too soon, for in many localities the public utility companies are suffering from shortage of fuel and industrial establishments are commencing to close. Though the latter are few now, the number may grow rapidly in the course of a week or two, say many, for the fuel administration cannot administer fuel if no one will mine it. Action of some sort is expected daily to renew productive activity.

Florists who have their coal are proceeding serenely. Others are hoping for the deadlock to be broken. In that lies their only hope, for even firms on the preferred lists no longer can expect to secure supplies of coal. Even street cars are cold and city electric lights fail to flicker. The shortage is increasingly acute and may become dangerous if the conference at Washington does not reach an early decision.

SPREADING THE GOOD WORD.

"Our stuff is the best of its kind in America," said a man to us the other day. "Don't doubt it a bit, if you say it," said we, "and that being the case, how splendidly it would pay you to hire an advertising man, because right now the trade thinks one of the other fellows sets the pace in your line!" "Yes, and it's the ads that have made most of them think so," chimed in a prospective customer of our friend. It's like this:

Review ads sure get the business.—Aubrey A. Hart, Hart Floral Co., Blackwell, Okla., November 18, 1919.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

Daniel Sidney Brown.

Daniel Sidney Brown, well known for years in the trade as a collector of orchids, died at his home, 5221 Washington boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., November 17, from a stroke of apoplexy, at the age of 66 years. Mr. Brown's collection of orchids was considered the finest in the country and was recently given to the Missouri Botanical Garden. A blanket of the finest orchids from this collection was sent by the directors of the garden and covered the casket.

Alexander Common.

Alexander Common, of 412 Grand River avenue, Detroit, died Friday, November 21. He had been in the trade in Detroit for twenty-two years. He retired last spring on account of advanced age, being over 60 years old. He was buried at Gault, Ont. J. A. L.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

With warmer and brighter weather, which brings on the stock, all growers were cutting in large quantities. The first part of last week there was plenty for all, but in the latter part stock was scarce. Business has been increasing, with occasionally a big job coming in, which would clear the market of what happened to be on hand.

Mums are in large supply, but the demand seems to have no limit. All the varieties clear each day with the exception of white mums. Yellow Eaton and Golden Chadwick are the best yellows which the market affords and buyers have to be in the market early to get any. They are large in bloom and with long, straight stems—really specimen stock. Patty is high-grade stock, but it has a tendency to wilt. However, many boxes of them are soon disposed of. Enguehard is of large flower, but the bloom is a bit too heavy for its stem. However, they bring a good price and have no trouble in finding the buyers. Chas. Rager, a beautiful white, is in good supply, but the demand does not incline toward the white varieties. White Chadwicks are few and of wonderful quality; the buyer feels fortunate to get them. Roman Gold is smaller, second-grade stock and the market has plenty for sale. Bonnaffons are medium in size and with short stems; they are always in demand even if they are poor keepers. There are a few novelties to be had, such as Harvard, a beautiful red, and Barbara Davis, a bronze colored mum. They are short in supply. Maud Deans are high-class in quality with a good supply in the market; their demand is fair.

Pompons are a bit short in supply, except in the poorer grades. Bronze and yellow are most favored by the buyers. Mrs. Frank Wilcox (known as Mrs. Beu) is in crop, but it is quickly disposed of, also Golden Climax.

Roses are plentiful in the market, but the growers are not cutting large quantities. Premiers are the leaders and are of high quality. They sell slowly, bringing a high price, but the supply usually is well distributed. They are of good color and size with long, straight stems. Columbias are also high-class, with the supply a bit short for the demand. Ophelias are of all grades and qualities. The high-colored buds are just equal to the demand and bring a fair price considering the high quality, but the lighter colored ones have the appearance of having been kept too long by the grower, being partly open and faded in color. Hoosier Beauties are short in supply; those to be had are of good size and stiff stem. The other roses, such as Shawyer, Sunburst, Killarneys and Russell, are fine stock and clear slowly each day. Wards are plentiful and are nice, sturdy buds; hence the supply is not in overabundance. White roses, like the other varieties, are of good quality with a steady cut, but they are in demand one day and off the next. Bon Silenes are off crop, with only a few to be had. Sweethearts are being cut too ripe, which depreciates their value to the retailer.

Carnations are coming finely. All colors are to be had, of good stock. The demand is poor and it is a good thing that they are not in heavier crop.

The other flowers in season, such as calendulas, sweet peas, bouvardia, Paper Whites, snapdragons and violets, are all to be had, but are not appreciated by the buyers or the public.

Plants are off crop, only cyclamens and mum plants being available and those in too small quantity to allow choice, so that the demand is poor. The supply of asparagus, maidenhair ferns and smilax is heavy.

Club Meeting and Flower Show.

The Detroit Florists' Club met at the Hotel Statler, Tuesday evening, November 18, in connection with an exhibition of roses, mums and other flowers. A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, addressed the club on his recent trip to Japan and his observations of the large-scale lily bulb growers of that country. The next speaker was O. E. Steinkamp, of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., who discussed the Ruth Baur carnation and then extended a welcome to all to attend the F. T. D. convention in Indianapolis next year. Philip Breitmeyer, of John Breitmeyer's Sons, called attention to the beautiful exhibits and complimented the growers on their contributions to the success of the show. Albert Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D., spoke highly of the careful way in which the mums were packed and urged that commercial packing should be brought up to the same standard. Finally, Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., gave an interesting and instructive talk on chrysanthemums and the problems of the development of new varieties; his talk was illustrated with two boxes of sample mums.

Among the exhibits were the following: Collection of new varieties of mums, by Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; vases of Golden Chadwick and of Patty mums, by Thomas Browne, Greenfield, Mich.; vases of Dolly Dimple and of Golden Chadwick mums, by W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Sunshine anemones, by J. B. Goetz Sons, Saginaw, Mich.; Madame Butterfly, a sport from Ophelia, but deeper in color, by the Joseph H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; Frank W. Dunlop, a seedling of the Russell type, but larger and heavier, by John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; Ruth Baur, by Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., and Glory of Wandsbek cyclamen, by the Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago.

Various Notes.

Albert Winkler, of John Breitmeyer's Sons, was at Bay City, Mich., for three days working on a wedding decoration.

Alex Common, of Grand River avenue, died November 21. Further account appears in the obituary column this week.

Philip Breitmeyer has returned from New York. His views on the trade and market of eastern cities are optimistic, but for Detroit growers he has many compliments for their stock as compared with that in other markets.

E. A. Fetters has been ill with the grip, which accounts for his bowling less than 180.

Walter Taepke, of Gratiot avenue, had all hands busy with a large decoration for the Knights of Columbus last week.

Wayne MacLaughlin, of John Breitmeyer's Sons, is on a trip to Kansas City and will visit other cities en route.

Beard Bros., of Fort street west, has a fine lot of cyclamens in bloom.

Thomas Browne, of Greenfield, Mich., is cutting mums in large quantities. His white and yellow Chadwicks are indeed fine stock. He is also cutting fine pompons in large quantities.

The Breitmeyer Floral Co., of Mount Clemens, Mich., is cutting Major Bonnaffons in great quantities. This firm is also bringing stevia into the market.

The Doemling-Schimmel Co., of Mount Clemens, Mich., is cutting a fine grade of Columbia and Hoosier Beauty, also Ward buds. H. T.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Activity increased steadily as Thanksgiving approached and prices improved with the demand, so that it is the general report that conditions have been excellent during the last few days. Indeed, many of the wholesalers, both growers and commission men, are able to report that, except for a few days in the middle of the month, November sales have been running steadily ahead of last year. This has been in spite of much lower average prices and in spite of an almost total absence of funeral work, in notable contrast to the tremendous call for funeral flowers a year ago. The quantity of stock handled has, of course, been much greater than last November.

While it is impossible at this writing to give anything more than a rough survey of the Thanksgiving demand, it is evident that in quantity of stock moved and in aggregate sales, it has eclipsed all previous records for the Chicago market. There has been an enormous business. While prices were not high enough to awaken any special degree of enthusiasm in the growers, they were firm enough so that retailers felt confidence in the stability of the market and bought freely.

Chrysanthemums occupied the center of the stage for Thanksgiving, as they have all through November. Those who feared a scarcity found their apprehensions groundless. There was, however, a shortage of strictly first-class stock; a large percentage of the mums this year have looked as though they were a catch crop, a space filler, and had received insufficient care. It is the general report that the Chicago market has had more mums this season than ever before and, from the growers, that there has been no money in them. Perhaps the explanation is to be found in the large proportion of low-grade flowers, for the well-grown stock certainly sold well for Thanksgiving. Pompons were moved in great quantities. The prices were not nearly so high as last year, but were the best of the season. It develops that the supply of bunch mums will hold out another two or three weeks and that there are several growers who have houses of Chadwick, Nonin and Frick still to cut. A stiff market is expected from now on.

The Thanksgiving call for roses did not run to the longer grades. The people who buy flowers for the family table do not ask for the highest-priced flowers and the call for the longest roses was limited to social uses. Beauties are not in large supply, are mostly long-stemmed and sold at what were Christmas prices in the years just before 1918. Russell is less of a factor than earlier in the season; it is without a peer as a summer rose, but Premier now is coming into its own. Columbia has not lost any friends. White is in small supply and there are not many red at present.

You Can't Beat Randall's for ROSES

While Randall's Roses include both the longest and short, the bulk of the Randall supply is the medium length of stem that every flower store uses in greatest quantity.

Carnations moved up for Thanksgiving, but their time will not come until the pompons are gone. Violets turned unexpectedly scarce. Telegrams to the Hudson river growing district brought the information that the New York market had come to life and that violets were bringing $3 there, resulting in diverting most of the shipments. Cattleyas are in such concentrated control that November 22 the price was pushed as high as $3 per flower. Of course, only a few can be sold at such a figure. Dark weather has limited the sweet pea supply. There is enough valley, usually, at the price. Lilies will be scarce until late January.

Paper Whites have come down. Their action has been a disappointment to many people and, unless conditions change, it presages a much reduced demand for the bulbs next season. If the flowers do not net the grower 6 cents this season, nothing but hope will keep him at it next year.

The growers have been complaining in chorus the last few weeks. To hear them tell it, none of them is making anything. All their costs have risen, especially for labor, and undeniably the price of flowers is much lower than last year. But there is a general feeling that prices will improve as the mums go off. The quantity of stock which has been sold shows the retailers as a body are having a big season and it is believed by many that the gravy will now be passed to the producers.

Lord & Burnham Get Contract.

The addition to the range of the Weiss-Spandikow Co., Maywood, referred to in The Review for November 20, has since then been put under contract. It is with the Lord & Burnham Co. and calls for four iron-frame structures, each 70x400. Two are to be built at once and two are optional, to be subject to call when wanted.

Weiss & Meyer Co., of Maywood, also contracted November 25 for an L. & B. house 70x400.

Miss Kennedy Sings Our Song.

Three hundred florists and their friends, probably the largest party of our trade which ever attended a show in a body, gave Miss Frances Kennedy an ovational welcome at the Majestic theater Tuesday evening, November 25. A. Lange had placed over 200 of our people in a group on the main floor and there were at least 100 more scattered through the house. The song, "Say It with Flowers," the singer and the floral decorations were a hit.

After the show there was a lively supper party at the Hotel Morrison, with Miss Kennedy as guest of honor. All the florists and their families had been invited to participate, a special room had been engaged and the whole affair made a fine start for the administration of President Asmus.

The management of the Majestic is playing up the act, taking advantage of the trade's coöperation. The lobby is profusely decorated. Monday and Tuesday the decorations were by the Bohannon Floral Co., Wednesday and Thursday by A. Lange; Friday and Saturday they will be done by Andrew Chronis, of the Alpha Floral Co., with J. L. Raske decorating for the big Sunday crowd.

Christmas Greens.

With the passing of Thanksgiving, Christmas greens come into the foreground. All the conditions point to a big demand this year.

Lycopodium, known by various aliases, is and probably will continue scarce. It is said to be selling freely at 16 cents per pound. Report has it that one house holds most of the visible supply, the result of being the early bird and equipping its buyer with cash money.

Holly has weakened during the last few days. Sales are now being made at $6.50 to $7 per case. Ten days ago the market looked like $8.

Boxwood is selling well, retail florists now using more of it than of any other Christmas green, for baskets as well as wreaths. Considerable quantities have arrived. Most of it is the woody grade, but it is selling well at $25 per 100 pounds, with a prospect of a rise. The short sprays are $30.

The range consists of about 75,000 square feet of glass exposure and is entirely in carnations, which since November 18 have been sold by the E. C. The other varieties grown in quantity are Benora, Nebraska, Matchless, Enchantress Supreme and Mrs. C. W. Ward.

Lawrence Lahmann, who has been in charge of the place for Mr. Hill, will continue in the same capacity for the new owners.

unable to leave their places at night, it was considered advisable to meet during the daytime in the future, and a trial will be made of the next meeting, which will be held at the Randolph hotel December 11 at 2 p. m.

Secretary Otto H. Amling says that in order to stimulate the demand and thereby get better average returns for flowers, the growers are considering resorting to publicity. This will be the special subject for discussion at the next meeting.

Various Notes.

There have been unusual quantities of exceptionally good chrysanthemum plants in the retail stores, where they have sold well, this month. Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Frank Oechslin have been principal sources of supply, but many other growers have had smaller good lots. Cyclamens of excellent quality for so early in the season appeared in time for the Thanksgiving trade.

F. M. Johnson says the growers' interests come first; that prosperous growers mean prosperous retailers, wholesalers, supply dealers, bulb merchants and trade papers. Furthermore, Mr. Johnson says he has come to the conclusion that cut flower prices are largely a state of mind, meaning that if we think of, say, the carnation as a 4-cent flower we consider prices high or low as they exceed or fall short of that figure; but if we thought of it as a 6-cent flower it would be as easily sold on that basis.

The golf bug has bitten A. Henderson. It gives him the outdoor exercise he needs and takes his mind off the troubles of bulb merchants.

J. S. Ricketts has joined the refrigerator and store fixture department of the A. L. Randall Co., as draftsman, to assist W. Abrahamson.

C. L. Washburn says he is fully convinced that quality is the only thing that will pay in the florists' business in future. The records kept by Bassett & Washburn show conclusively, he says, that the only varieties that pay are the ones that produce uniformly good quality. Poor flowers are valueless in a well supplied market. E. B. Washburn has returned to the Sierra Madre palm factory.

Leonard Kill has returned from Los Angeles, probably to remain. He makes his headquarters with his old friend, A. C. Spencer.

Clarence Smith, with Wendland & Keimel Co., as foreman, before the war, has become foreman for Mrs. Elmer Sigwalt's Grove Floral Co., at Arlington Heights, Ill. The roses there are in nice shape.

N. J. Wietor is content. He says his firm has overcome its growing difficulties, that the place is clean, producing well, that the stock is selling briskly and that it was the largest Thanksgiving in the history of Wietor Bros.

Roland M. Poehlmann is on the staff of the Daily Illini, the college paper at the University of Illinois.

I. Rosnosky, of the W. W. Barnard Co., was in the house for a few days last week after a trip east as far as Connecticut. He left November 23 for Pittsburgh.

Guy French says that his calls on the growers lead him to believe that the plans for Easter do not include over two-thirds the number of lilies usually planted for this market. He recommends the purchase of bulbs as risking little but offering a possibility of exceptional profits.

John Kruchten celebrated his thirty-seventh birthday anniversary November 21.

Visitors.

M. J. Sporman, of M. J. Sporman Co., Cedar Rapids, Ia., was a recent visitor to the Chicago market. He reports business good and was much pleased with his visit to Morton Grove as the guest of John Poehlmann.

Ove Gnatt, of La Porte, Ind., returning from a trip to St. Louis, was a visitor on the market November 21.

Chas. F. Edgar, representing the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, was in town last week, visiting old friends. Mr. Edgar was formerly connected with the Fleischman Floral Co. He is a former fellow townsman of those ex-Philadelphians, Paul Klingsporn and I. Rosnosky.

Frank C. Goodman, of Kemble & Goodman, Mason City, Ia., was here last week, buying supplies for their prosperous business, the only one of its kind in a city of 25,000 inhabitants.

ments in mums crowded the wholesale market almost daily. The excellent demand for mums hardly left an impression when the morning sales were over. Shipping trade in cut flowers has increased greatly this season in this market. The wholesalers have plenty of advance orders for this week for any flowers that are in season.

In anticipation of Thanksgiving, prices went up on all cut stock and a great cut was expected in mums of all kinds, as every grower consigning to this market has doubled his mum crop this year. This week we noticed fine blooms of T. Eaton, Golden Wedding, white and yellow Chadwick, Seidewitz, a fine pink, and Dr. Enguehard. In pompons there are many and all varieties are in favor this year.

The rose crop is off and hardly enough came in last week to supply the demand, according to our local growers. The shortage in roses will be large for this week. Premier is having the call over Russell this season, only that Russell is more plentiful. Premier cleans up daily and no doubt our local growers will stock up on Premier next season in place of Russell. Columbia sells well for light pink and any variety in red has a good demand. White Killarney is the only white to be had at present. Carnations seem off crop and consignments were not nearly enough for demands. With plenty of funeral work, as reported by the retailers last week, all light colors had the call.

The shortage in carnations and roses should assist the growers in disposing of the especially big crop of mums that will be consigned to this market this week. Violets, too, have been somewhat short of the demand. This cool, bright weather should be beneficial in producing a large crop.

Sweet peas are still in light supply, but each week should improve the supply and from reports of our local growers there should be the largest crop in years this season. Orchids have been more plentiful this week and the demand good at $18 per dozen. Valley and lilies continue scarce in this market. Narcissi, both white and yellow,

The members of the St. Louis Association of Gardeners should not forget the meeting of the association which takes place Wednesday night, December 3, at the municipal greenhouses, 5800 Oakland avenue. The discussions on park management by Ernest Strehle and the park floral displays by John Moritz will be interesting and a large attendance is looked for.

Frank Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, and Albert Gumz, of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., visited the county growers last week. While on the road out Mr. Gumz's machine got into a smash-up, but no one was hurt. Another machine was soon at hand and they proceeded on their way and spent a most pleasant day among the growers.

The chrysanthemum show at the Missouri Botanical Garden is now at its height and great crowds are in attendance daily. After the mum season, beginning December 15, there will be an exhibition of poinsettia plants and of the garden's rare collection of orchids. This exhibition will be in charge of George H. Pring.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold its last meeting in the old year on Wednesday night, December 3, at the Eleven Mile House. Secretary Deutschmann says there are some important matters to be disposed of and he looks for a large attendance.

Visitors last week were Adolph Nielson, of Pana, Ill.; Mr. Florentine, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Ove Gnatt, of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind.; J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, and William Montgomery, Santa Cruz, Cal. All spent several days here calling on the trade and all report splendid road trips.

Mrs. N. E. Kelly, of Iuka, Ill., spent a few days here last week calling on friends. Mrs. Kelly reports a splendid business season in cut flowers and plants.

The publicity committee is placing some effective advertisements in the daily papers, which according to several leading retailers help greatly in selling the big surplus of mums that are now consigned daily to this market. A large Thanksgiving advertisement appeared in the Sunday papers of November 23.

Martin Moran, chief clerk in the seed department of the St. Louis Seed Co., is back attending to his duties after a two weeks' lay-off with a lame arm, caused by an attack of rheumatism.

Charles Young, head of the C. Young & Sons Co., says that while fall bulbs were in heavy supply this year, the firm was so fortunate as to have big mail orders which will clean them up well. This firm is having the best season in years.

As the Roses won the odd game from the Carnations, these two teams are now tied for first place, with the Sweet Peas

The Market.

The market last week remained about the same as it was in the previous week. Sweet peas and Paper Whites are a little more plentiful. Some of the finest chrysanthemums of the season are coming in. Orchids are a little more plentiful and can be bought at $1.50 each. Chrysanthemums still reign. The rose and carnation supply has shown a good increase.

Various Notes.

George Comley had a large decorating job last week. He also reports that he has a large number of weddings booked for this month.

Fred Leapley has been busy with funeral work in addition to several important weddings. He has taken on more help in order to assure his customers prompt service. He is also growing some fine ferns.

F. H. Kramer's palm garden is attracting unusually large crowds. It is highly spoken of by all of the florists as well as by its many patrons.

George Shaffer had two important weddings November 22. They included a large amount of decorating work at the homes and churches.

The Market.

Last week the market showed considerable improvement, the demand being much more satisfactory than it has been for some time previous. While in some measure this was due to a rather strenuous week of entertainments, including the reception of the Prince of Wales, the horse show and many house parties, the fact remains that the demand from trade unaffected by the doings of society was better than at any other time this season.

Chrysanthemums, which are in large supply, are meeting a good demand, and there is little, if any, waste. Bonnaffon, Chadwick, Eaton, Seidewitz and Chieftain are leaders among the standard sorts and there are many fancy varieties, among which bronzes, crimsons and wine-colored sorts are prominent. Pompons and singles move well, especially varieties providing sprays with long stems, such as Wilcox.

Violets have again met a heavy demand, owing to another football game, between Harvard and Yale, and brought as much as $2.50 per hundred.

Roses are moving well and are of good quality. American Beauty is becoming a little irregular in supply and the price of specials last week reached $75 per hundred. Francis Scott Key has been in good demand, with really an insufficient supply. This beautiful rose is increasing in popularity and in the near future will likely be more generally grown. Among the hybrid teas, Columbia, Premier and Prima Donna are especially fine in quality and bring top prices in all grades. Red roses are scarce.

Carnations are not overplentiful and prices have advanced, the best Mrs. C. W. Ward bringing $8 per hundred, and top grades of other varieties $6. The cooler weather is making for better quality, which will be welcomed.

The supply of orchids is short and the market price high in consequence. Most of the available stock is sold before arrival at $2 and more for select flowers. Gardenias are also short in supply and orders booked ahead of arrivals are not wholly filled. The top price is $9 per dozen.

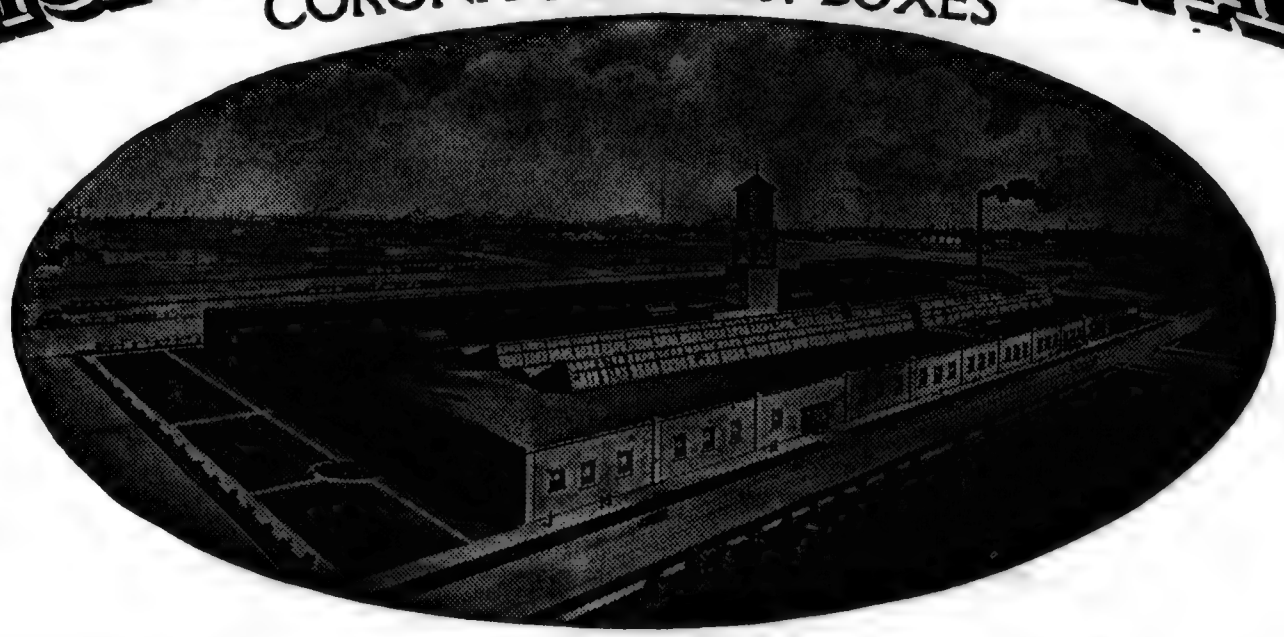
Easter lilies continue in limited supply; in fact, they are now hardly a commodity and the supply of rubrums is much diminished. There is sufficient lily of the valley to meet a small demand, at prices ranging from $4 to $20 per hundred. Retailers generally are not pushing valley and only purchase it when needs are exacting. White bouvardia, which all along has been used as a substitute for valley in wedding work, is nearing its end for the season and some florists are using small callas for similar work. Callas are bringing $2 to $3 per dozen.



There is an abundance of Paper White narcissi, which command 50 cents per dozen for the best. Snapdragons in limited quantity are available at 50 cents to 75 cents per bunch. Stevia is making an appearance in some quantity, but is too green to be inviting. Calendulas, sweet peas and pansies are in good supply and move well.

Various Notes.

Among the important functions of last week was the dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria given by Henry P. Davison in honor of the Prince of Wales. J. H. Small & Sons had the decorations, which were quite lavish. Among the cut flowers used were 1,000 long-stemmed American Beauty roses. Palms and decorative plants were used in great profusion, severely taxing the resources of

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Martin Gannon has never known such a Thanksgiving since he has been in the business. That statement of Mr. Gannon's pretty accurately describes market conditions at the close of business on the Saturday before the holiday. Flowers are surprisingly scarce. There is enough business to use them all at prices that are advancing. The strength of the market is the shipping business, which has been heavy all week, carrying off quantities of fine stock. Late chrysanthemums have done exceptionally well. A large number are sold at $4 and $5 per dozen and a few even at $6 per dozen, usually in fancy values. Pompons have ascended to 50 cents, 75 cents and even $1 per bunch. Perhaps the most interesting advance is in carnations, where the pink novelty, Laddie, has gone from $6 to $10 at a bound, leaving the cream of the standards at the former figure. There really seems no limit to the prices. Take the cypripedium, for example. That modest flower is bringing 25 cents on insigne and 50 cents on Sanderæ. Cattleya Trianæ has come and gone right up and so have gardenias. White lilac is also here, with promise of staying for six months.

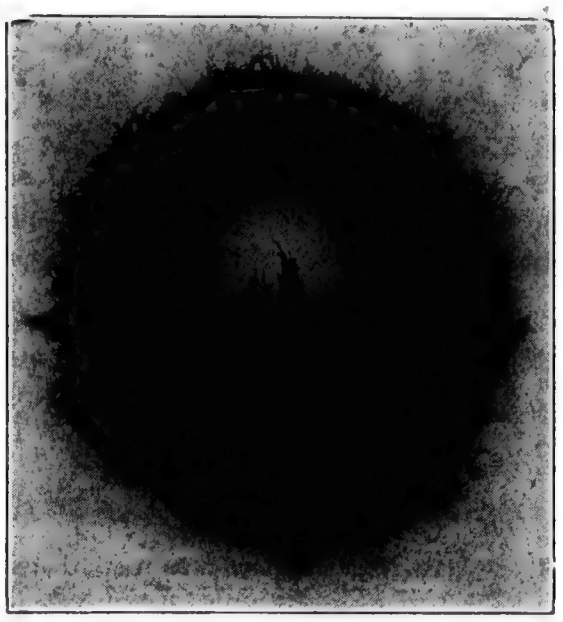
In roses it is noticeable that the buyers want medium-grade flowers. The fancy stock is sold out, but there is not the keen demand for it that marks the demand for mediums.

Beauties have advanced again; so have Russell and Ophelia. Wards go well and all the pinks, but white is quiet. Returning to carnations, white is poor stock; so are Paper Whites. Violets are popular. There are a few more sweet peas.

The Question of Prices.

It chanced that there were two lots of the late single chrysanthemum Mrs. E. G. Godfrey side by side on the counter. They came from two different growers. The bunches in each lot contained exactly six sprays. Yet how different was their appearance! The bunches in one lot were large, with an abundance of perfect, well colored, shapely flowers, borne on long, strong stems clothed with deep green foliage. The bunches in the other lot were small, the flowers were pale and watery in appearance, the stems were short and rather weak, the foliage was meager. The wholesaler, John Berger, of Berger Bros., said that the first lot brought 75 cents a bunch and that the second lot were harder to sell at three bunches for $1. Verbum sapienti.

Carnation Mrs. C. E. Akehurst.



There were stories floating about of a certain good-looking house of carnations that were shaping well for December. So it was with pleasant anticipations that a cordial invitation to come and see was received. The house was all that could be desired. It was filled with clear, even plants filled with buds, the foliage of that deep blue that suggests perfect health and is the coloring of the Colorado blue spruce. The variety, there was just one in that house, was evidently not a cropper. It was of the cut-and-come-again type so satisfactory in winter. It was an early bloomer and it had good, stout stems. The flowers were of excellent size, fragrant and of that popular shade of pink that is neither light nor deep, but that has life in the shade. The variety was Mrs. C. E. Akehurst. The grower, Emile H. Geschick, said that he bought Mrs. Akehurst when it was first sent out, that he had been against it when it was in the field, but that he had decided to take a chance and had benched it in the greenhouses when bringing in his other varieties, that fifteen or twenty per cent of the plants had shown disease, but that he had used great care in propagating, so that now the stock was practically clean, that Mrs. Akehurst did not split with him in the dark days of December and that he could always depend upon it for good, salable flowers.

The Andorra Nurseries.

There is an interesting feature of the Andorra Nurseries that is not well known to the ordinary visitor who goes to see trees and shrubs. It is an increasingly important department that is now seen at its best. This is the propagating department. It is located in a couple of small greenhouses, exceedingly neat and clean, that are filled to overflowing with nursery stock. The method is much the same as you or I would use, but there are a few features of it that are interesting. The propagator is extremely skillful. His success is attributed to great care in the selection of the wood. Year after year he successfully roots something like ninety-five per cent of his cuttings. When they are rooted and potted off, the cuttings are grown a few days in the greenhouse and then put outside in heated frames, where they are carried through the winter. The aim is to propagate all the desirable rare varieties, increasing their number as rapidly as possible, leaving to others the varieties that are grown in vast quantities.

Rats.

Nearly every florist has trouble at this season, when cold weather first commences. The greenhouses and sheds are attractive and when corn and oats and bulbs are to be had it means heaven to the rats. How to get rid of them when busy is the problem. There are any number of different ways—all good. The thing to do is to follow up the plan selected systematically until well rid of them and never to use bare hands in setting the trap or spreading poison on food. Rats and mice do not like the smell of human hands. Use gloves when setting a trap. Use a knife and fork when preparing their food. It is the hunter's idea regarding wild beasts carried into our daily life.

Richard Lange, of Roxborough, firmly believes in Maurer's rat paste. Mr. Lange says that he thoroughly cleaned out his place when it was overrun with rats some years ago by using this poison. He adds that it has the further merit of bringing the rats out of their holes after they have eaten it. They come out and die.

Secretary Robert Kift announces that fifty members have signified their intention of supporting the local publicity campaign.

Various Notes.

William Berger's Sons had one of the handsomest wedding orders of the season November 22. They decorated the church and the club house where the reception was held with chrysanthemums and wild smilax. The bride's and maids' bouquets were of orchids and ferns, exquisite in their delicacy.

Harry Crawford is now with the Robert Craig Co. Mr. Crawford, who did his bit over there, has the best wishes of many friends in his new position.

Joseph Goetter is sending some grand Chadwicks to the Leo Niessen Co.

David Anderson, of Garrettford, has fine White Killarney.

Charles H. Grakelow had a select little lunch party at the Manufacturers' Club one day recently. His guests were Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Commodore John Westcott and Alvah R. Jones.

Edward Reid urges that florists push what their wholesaler advises rather than take orders for flowers that they know are difficult to obtain.

Robert Q. Shoch returned from the south November 22, remarking that he had had a fine trip, and with a jolly laugh said that cotton was $3 a pound.

Leo Niessen announces the arrival of white lilac.

Mention has not been made in this column of the fact that Charles H. Grakelow decorated floats for the city for the parade of October 11. Mr. Grakelow executed the entire order most successfully. This was the largest order since the memorable historic pageant so strikingly portrayed by J. J. Habermehl's Sons. Phil.

The Market.

Cut flower business is much improved under the stimulus of Thanksgiving buying. The market began to take a decided brace November 20 and the improvement continues this week. The Harvard-Yale football game created a good demand for flowers, red roses, mums and carnations with violets being given a decided boost. Roses are in much reduced supply and prices have advanced sharply, with short-stemmed stock cleaning up at $6 to $10 per hundred and a proportionate advance in other grades. Nearly all growers are off crop at present and at this time it looks as though hybrid teas would realize high prices for the holiday. Carnations are doing much better. Red and crimson flowers made $8 to $10 per hundred for the football game and present quotations are $5 to $8, with fancies higher.

Chrysanthemums are cleaning up well at from $2 to $6 per dozen. For pompons there is also an excellent demand. Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon and Rager are now more in evidence than any other varieties. Violets readily sell at $2.50 to $3 per hundred and are not in large supply. Some nice sweet peas are coming in. These sell well at $2 to $3 per hundred. Lilium longiflorum and callas are not yet abundant and readily clean up at good prices. Bouvardia is eagerly bought and has become quite popular.

There are some good pink snapdragons selling at $16 per hundred and shipments of cosmos are still arriving. Cattleyas are getting scarce and have sharply advanced in price. There are nice supplies of cypripediums and other seasonable orchids. A few gardenias come in daily and sell at $9 to $12 per dozen. In the way of more everyday flowers there are now larger lots of stevia and Paper White narcissi. A few Soleil d'Or are also seen.

Plant trade is good. Chrysanthemums are passing, but cyclamens are abundant and of splendid quality; begonias also are offered freely, as well as ericas, camellias, oranges, solanums, primulas and an abundance of ferns, palms and miscellaneous foliage plants.

Club Meeting.

There was a large and enthusiastic attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club November 18, no less than 120 members being present. One new member was admitted. Exhibits were numerous and of grand quality. The A. N. Pierson Co. had fine vases of the new roses, Crusader and Pilgrim. The former received a report of merit and the latter one of highest merit. From the same exhibitors came a fine lot of chrysanthemums, including Barbara Davis, Volunteer, Charter Oak, Hilda Canning, Katherine Harley, Frank Wilcox, Western Beauty, Helen Andre and Dusky Maid. Peter Arnott, gardener to E. S. Webster, had magnificent specimen plants a yard across of Begonias Optima, Rosalind, Elatior and Exquisite, awarded a cultural report of merit. The W. W. Edgar Co. showed Begonias Melior, Cincinnati, Mrs. Peterson and Optima. H. H. Bartsch spoke in the highest terms of the last named and considered Melior ahead of Cincinnati.

A. Leuthy Co. had a table of palms, ferns, begonias and other plants. W. N. Craig showed vases of Chrysanthemums Mensa, Godfrey's Perfection and Mrs. Wilcox, also two dishes of quinces. S. J. Goddard had vases of Dorner's newest seedling carnations, Pompon Chrysanthemum Sunshine and a yellow cosmos from the Philippines which proved valuable for cutting. Henry Stewart had a finely flowered specimen plant of Oncidium varicosum Rogersii. Janiten & Kunan showed splendidly berried plants of Solanum Cleveland.

J. T. Butterworth had grand specimens of Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ with twelve to fourteen flowers each, also the variety Harefield Hall and Cattleya Naiadia, awarded a cultural report of merit. Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, had a splendid lot of cypripediums, including Harefield Hall, Leeanum Clinkaberryanum, Dreadnaught, Actæus Roehrsiana, Maudiæ, Boltonianum, Actæus var. Majestic, Lord Wolmer, Marne var. of Alwyn Harrison and unnamed seedlings, awarded a cultural report of merit. George I'Ansen, the lecturer of the evening, covered two large tables with splendid photographs of unusual and valuable orchids Nominations of officers for 1920 were made as follows: President, Herman H. Bartsch; vice-president, William H. Judd; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, S. J. Goddard; executive committee, P. W. Burke, Andrew Christensen, George W. Hamer, Walter H. Golby, Andrew K. Rogers, J. P. A. Guerineau, George W. Butterworth, John L. Russell, John R. Ness, Donald B. Sutherland and Harold A. Ryan.

George I'Ansen, orchid grower at the celebrated A. C. Burrage estate, Beverly Farms, delivered the address of the evening on "Orchids." Mr. I'Ansen, before coming to America, had charge of noted collections with such firms as Veitch's, Low's and Charlesworth's and knows his subject thoroughly. He showed over 100 slides, made by himself, of new, rare and useful orchids. In the resultant discussion the question of feeding orchids came up. The lecturer did not approve of anything more than rain water and said even in the case of terrestial orchids, like calanthes, phaius, cymbidiums, etc., only weak liquid manure was advisable or ultimate injury would result. J. T. Butterworth also considered rain water all the food orchids needed, and he had never given stimulants to any of his plants. Other speakers took an opposite view and instanced remarkable oncidiums, dendrobiums and cattleyas which were regularly given stimulants.

Various Notes.

The Penn Coöperative Association was organized November 10, every adult employee of Penn's becoming a member. Officers elected were: President, Maurice Clancy; treasurer, Miss Katherine Lyons; secretary, Miss Susan Davan. The association will mutually benefit the members and those who are sick or in need will receive special attention. Penn's, so far as I am aware, is the first flower store to have its employees organized in this way.

The next meeting of the Boston Florists' Association will be held at the Parker House, December 2, when members will have an opportunity to join in a full discussion of publicity and the general problems of the hour.

Among recent visitors were John Canning, Ardsley, N. Y.; E. J. Cardarelli, Cromwell, Conn.; A. A. Rosin, Rochester, N. Y., and J. L. Howell, Lansing, Mich. The last three attended the club meeting November 18.

R. G. Chamberlain, of Dedham, sailed for England for a three months' visit, on the Leyland S. S. Winifredian, November 18.

H. S. Rogers, of Hamlin's, states that business is good and steadily improving. Theater trade is particularly satisfactory.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. reports an encouraging fall business and is busy preparing for Thanksgiving and Christmas trade. Edward J. Welch, at one time with Welch Bros. Co., is now to be found here.

John McFarland, of North Easton, lost his brother, George, November 21. He dropped dead on the street in Quincy near his home. He was badly injured in an automobile collision last March and had never fully recovered. The deceased was 66 years of age. Interment was at Quincy, November 23.

JONES, THE HOLLY WREATH MAN, Milton, Delaware

The Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, R. I., is sending in some fine Columbia, Stanley, Ophelia and Double White Killarney roses. A number of varieties are at present off crop. They are growing one house of carnations this season. Some years ago they devoted a large area of glass to them.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report that in spite of prevailing high prices there is a good demand for flowers. They anticipate a heavy call for both Thanksgiving and Christmas.

M. E. Moore, of Arlington, one of our largest vegetable growers under glass, is installing crude oil heaters. Other vegetable growers are seriously considering doing the same and so are a number of florists.

Some of the finest specimen chrysanthemums which have come in this season are from W. R. Nicholson, Framingham. He had some superb crimsons for the Harvard-Yale game, which realized $12 per dozen, the highest wholesale price recorded here for some years.

William H. Elliott had some good Hadley roses November 21 and 22, and these sold readily at $35 to $50 per hundred. He has had a most successful season with pot mums, which are now nearing their close.

H. M. Robinson & Co. received large advance Thanksgiving orders and are showing an extensive line of baskets and other Christmas material.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club visited the greenhouses in Strasburg, Pa., Thursday, November 20. At the range of Amos N. Rohrer, where Ward, Belle Washburn, Matchless, White Wonder and Supreme carnations are grown, the general neatness and up-to-date business methods were a valuable object lesson for the visitors. J. Wade Gayley, the next one visited, had 10,000 carnation plants, including Matchless, Ward, Beacon, Alice and Supreme, and was cutting fine, long-stemmed blooms, with good prospects for a heavy cut for the Christmas holidays. According to Mr. Gayley's records for last season, Mrs. Ward had an average of nineteen blooms per plant, Matchless twenty-two blooms and Beacon and Alice twenty-five blooms per plant. Among the carnations being grown by

For fourteen long years we have been handling green goods, and feel that we are entirely safe to guarantee satisfaction in every instance.

We learned long ago that A GOODIQUALITY OF STUFF is what the trade wants, and that is what we promise to supply; not only good quality, but considering labor conditions and cost of living, even for the most humble picker of wild decorative evergreens, we feel that our prices are very reasonable.

Our goods are absolutely FRESH FROM THE WOODS, not like cold storage galax, neither green nor bronze.

Charles B. Herr, Crystal White is giving a particularly good account of itself. Mr. Herr is not only a flower grower but a pigeon fancier and has some rare varieties of this bird.

In the evening forty guests sat down to a bountiful dinner prepared by the ladies' auxiliary of the Florists' Club in the directors' room of the Y. M. C. A. building. A genuine surprise, particularly to T. J. Nolan, was a handsome angel food cake presented in honor of Mr. Nolan's birthday, its sixteen candles symbolizing his perennial youth. The speakers of the evening were Arthur Niessen, of Philadelphia, who discussed "The Outlook of the Florists' Business," and Mr. Therkildson, formerly of the Burpee Co., Philadelphia, and now with the Ayer advertising firm in that city; his subject was "Advertising for the Florists' Business."

The decorations for the dinner were by B. F. Barr & Co. L. S. Landis and H. D. Rohrer's Sons exhibited McNiece, Seidewitz, Nerissa and Dolly Dimple mums and Elmer J. Weaver had a fine exhibit of pompons. H. K. Rohrer was the winner in a spelling bee, which was held during the evening and in which botanical names were given out by Mrs. B. F. Barr and Mrs. A. M. Herr.

WHOLESALE COMMISSION FLORISTS

1108-10 Grand Ave., KANSAS CITY, MO.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Business was somewhat quiet last week, as it usually is preceding a holiday. Stock is plentiful and mums are in perfect condition. Roses are abundant enough for all wants, although being held for Christmas trade, and carnations are good and plentiful.

Numerous advance orders were received for Thanksgiving and florists prepared for a big day. Ordinarily this is not much of a flower day, but local dealers have succeeded in making the principal holidays amount to more in a business way each year. A great many dinner parties and dances had been arranged and even the informal home dinner now calls for a few flowers on that day.

Preparations for Christmas are also well under way. Wreaths and baskets are being made up and as much of the preliminary work as possible is being done early.

Various Notes.

Thomas J. Cane is now able to be about and attend to business, after a long siege of illness.

Miss J. E. Murray had earlier Thanksgiving orders this year than ever before.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop had several parties last week and has several scheduled for this week. Hugo Neff, manager, says he has had heavy sales of strawflowers as well as of regular stock.

Armistice Day

We Are Featuring Chrysanthemums For the Week

The Big Day of

"Say it with Flowers"

Week

The Florists Association, of Boston have set aside this week as a special floral week, particularly emphasizing Tuesday, Nov. 11th, as "Armistice Day."

The joyful occasion which this first anniversary celebrates can best be expressed with flowers.

Flowers in the home, floral gifts to war heroes, floral remembrances to mothers and sweethearts and those who "kept the home fires burning"—all form a part of the observances for this day and all of next week.

The Boston Florists have adopted a program for this week, including specially arranged displays, in which Penn the Florist heartily joins.

See our "Armistice Day" windows. Flowers ordered from Penn this week (as at all times) mean the choicest and freshest selections that the growers can produce.

licity campaign. The legion of florists in our own United States who have not yet subscribed to the fund should, to use a slang expression, sit up and take notice—then sit down and write their checks for the contributions which, surely, they intend to make. There is no room for doubt as to the beneficial effect of our campaign. A year or more ago some might have been of the opinion that a shortage in production of flowers, through lack of fuel and war conditions, was the cause for a general clean-up of market stock at inflated prices. Such conditions have long since passed, but today we find the markets cleaning up as never before, in spite of increased values. Why? Simply this, the public is buying more flowers. Flowers are going regularly into homes where before their use was only occasional. Anniversaries are being more generally remembered with the "Say It with Flowers" spirit. The sick are being cheered with bright flowers continually and the sending of flowers to hospitals is now practiced on a much larger scale. New uses for flowers are being suggested every day and the florists are reaping the benefit arising from the new demand. The glut point in our markets is no longer a dread; the ash barrel has become a poor customer indeed. If our campaign is not in great measure responsible for this change, what is? Our committees have gone the limit with their resources. To continue the work means that we must have more support. We cannot expect the liberal-minded men who have contributed to bring our work thus far to shoulder more of the expense, even though some may be willing to do so.

Our committee is now urgently in

The setting of the song was helped by local florists, who supplied flowers and gave other assistance. In Cleveland, where Miss Frances Kennedy exploited the song, about 200 florists attended the theater on the first evening and they supplied about 1,500 corsage bouquets for the ladies in the audience as souvenirs and, besides, used banners on their delivery wagons and special window trims. ARE YOU LOYAL?

Some women's idea of a good husband is one who can carve without getting spots on the tablecloth. It reminds me of the florist who thinks he is doing his duty when he helps along a local publicity fund and forgets the national campaign, which is helping all local campaigns, but depends wholly on florists generally for its support. And it will display its true worth if you will continue in its support.

Your committee has many important plans in store for further success, provided the funds can be furnished, which will raise the standard of the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," to a still higher level.

Many a man complains that things are not coming his way when it is really the fault of his way.

This publicity campaign ought to put you on the way to doing things, so that all will continue in the prosperity, if we may call it such, that other lines are having. And if you analyze these particular lines you will find advertising plays an important function toward that end.

Now, if it is good for all other commodities, who will deny its application

The Market.

Everything outdoors has been cleaned up by frost. As is usually the case at this time, the market last week was short on all lines of stock. There had been a large quantity of the poorer outdoor mums used in the cheaper grades of funeral work and, as the demand for this grade of work holds strong, other stock had to be used. This kept the commission houses well cleaned up. Much complaint is heard of the inability to get medium-sized stock in mums again this season; it would seem that there should be more of these grown, as experience has proved that there is always a good demand for stock that will sell at from $10 to $15 per hundred. fact, since I have been watching the market the supply has never equaled the demand, and there is no doubt that they pay as well as the larger varieties. There is a fine supply of the larger sizes to be had and these clean up well each day.

Roses, while not so plentiful, have taken a jump in price. Short white stock was at a premium the early part of last week. Long-stemmed stock of all varieties was only in fair supply and cleaned up well. Carnations are in the same class with roses; those coming to the market are of good quality and the supply is such that there has been no congestion. Sweet peas are still short, but what are coming are of good quality. Violets are to be had, but, like other winter stock, are hardly counted a factor in the market as yet. Snapdragons are in the same class and, perhaps because of their scarcity, the demand seems larger. I mean by this that when one wants them for a special purpose, he inquires for them at every available place, which gives the erroneous impression that there is a large demand for them.

his eighty-sixth birthday Sunday, November 16. If I did not know him as well as I do and know how correct everything connected with his life and business always had to be, I should feel that a mistake had been made in his age, for he looks today more like a man of 60 than like one who has crossed the four-score line. The day was celebrated by a family dinner, with all of his children and grandchildren about him, indeed a large family. In the afternoon a drive and an hour spent with a friend and fellow-craftsman wound up what, for him, was a perfect day. There was but one thing to mar the day—the continued illness of his good wife, but even this had its bright side, for she is much improved and, we trust, well on the way to complete recovery. It was her illness that prevented their usual trip to Florida this year.

A recent conversation with Albert M. Fiedler, the South Charles street retailer, brought a full realization of the quality of salesmanship that must be possessed by the retailer in times of emergency. Mr. Fiedler has had heavy funeral work to contend with, so much, in fact, that at times it was impossible to secure sufficient stock. Yet orders had to be taken care of and it was necessary to educate his patrons along such lines that he would be able to procure the stock to fill their wants. For instance, one morning last week he had twelve dozen mums, which cost him $4 or $5 per dozen wholesale. These, of course, had to be made into sprays and helped him out on his design work. But the public in South Baltimore has plenty of confidence in Albert Fiedler and a suggestion from him is all that is necessary.

napolis road is about to be started up again as a modern establishment for producing cut stock. This place has been closed down since shortly after Walter Erdman died. A Mr. Rome, of Washington, who has been investing in agricultural property, has secured it. He has made arrangements with C. M. Wagner, who will manage it and will conduct an up-to-date range for growing flowers. Mr. Wagner has had much experience; his last place was with Fred Bauer and previous to that he was with James Hamilton, of Mount Washington.

Erdman & Ulrich have a fine crop of late mums. Five houses of Chadwick, which are now almost ready to cut, are as fine as one would wish to see. Seidewitz is to be seen at this range in all its glory. This is a color that is always in demand and they have it as well done as any I have ever seen. Out at this range they will have, in a short time, a fine lot of snapdragons. Their plants are clean and in a good, healthy state. If signs do not fail, they will have a fine cut.

On a recent visit to the S. S. Pennock Co., I found the company had just received a consignment of the celebrated "58-endorsement" variety of magnolia leaves. This was the largest shipment of these leaves that I had ever seen. I asked Mr. Perry if the company was buying them in carload lots, but he replied: "Not quite. The leaves of the Dr. H. Dux Co. are the only line of these we handle; so we are getting in a stock at this time that will carry us for a while."

Mary Johnston has added to her fleet of automobile trucks one of the most attractive cars I have seen for a long time. It is a decided departure from

Stock of all kinds is scarcer and higher in price than at any previous time during the autumn season. Everything arriving is of at least fair quality. Roses and chrysanthemums are the only blooms arriving in large quantities. The latter are running anywhere from $1.50 to $5 per dozen, while roses are having a wholesale disposal ranging from $6 to $20 per hundred.

Wednesday afternoon, November 19, with a luncheon at the Seventh Avenue hotel. President Ira C. Harper presided and there was a general discussion on the two subjects of "Say It with Flowers" and Sunday closing.

This session of the organization was preliminary to a banquet to be held at the Seventh Avenue hotel at 6:45 on the evening of December 4, when these same important subjects will be thoroughly threshed out. A large attendance is expected at this meeting, the majority of the members throughout western Pennsylvania having signified their intention to be present.

Various Notes.

With the resumption of social activities, Randolph & McClements are having the busiest season in the history of the firm, with a large number of debutante teas, receptions, luncheons, dinners and weddings. A particularly handsome dinner decoration, supervised by Edward Weaver for this firm, was for a bridal party and guests numbering sixty people at the old Pitcairn mansion, Cairncarque, Ellsworth and Amberson avenues, Shadyside. The hollow table enclosed a garden scene, in the midst of which was a large, electrically lighted fountain. Maidenhair ferns and gorgeously colored autumn leaves formed the groundwork, which was rounded out with large Galloway jars filled with specimen chrysanthemums.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is displaying a chrysanthemum five feet high and carrying approximately 3,000 blooms, which is to be sold for charity. The plant was grown on the Shields estate of Mrs. James B. Oliver for the recent flower show of the Sewickley Horticultural Society, but unfortunately matured too late for the exhibition. P. G. Anderson, after four years' service in the British army, is now at work in Mrs. Williams' store. Prior to entering the war Mr. Anderson was on a large private estate in Scotland. He succeeds Norbert Huttinger, who had returned to his old position with Mrs. Williams following his discharge from the navy some time ago. Recently, however, Mr. Huttinger decided to try outside salesmanship and to this end has joined the force of the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago.

LONDON, ONT.

The Market.

Clear, cool weather with an occasional snowfall marked last week as the opening of the winter season. Although the Victory Loan campaign has just come to a close and London with its 60,000 of population raised $10,246,000, there has been no slump in sales.

The first cyclamens and primroses made their appearance last week.

Various Notes.

W. W. Gammage and E. B. Hamilton, manager of the West Floral Co., have returned from visiting the flower show of the Ontario Horticultural Association, at Toronto, where they report that some fine stock was shown.

K. Clark, of J. Gammage & Sons, Ltd., has returned from his wedding trip.

The West Floral Co. is busy preparing for the Christmas rush. Emory B. Hamilton, manager, reports trade excellent.

J. Gammage & Sons, Ltd., report a good week in funeral work and general sales.

The Dicks Flower Shop has an interesting and valuable window display,

The Market.

There was a good demand for cut flowers last week and now, since chrysanthemums are less plentiful than a few weeks ago, there is no oversupply of stock. Pompons and single mums are almost gone. Bonnaffon, Marigold, Seidewitz and December Gem appear to be the principal varieties at present and even these are not numerous. Mums have not been so low in price before at any time this season. Most growers in this district have been troubled with a disease affecting the variety Seidewitz. In many cases the plants have died completely. Commencing at the roots or the stem close to the ground, the plants would turn yellow or black even after they were in bud. The wet, cloudy weather may be the chief cause, since the trouble is greater when they are grown in solid beds than when they are on benches. This variety usually does well in pots. Ordinarily this is a fine bloomer.

Business continues fairly good in all lines, especially in funeral work. There is still some business being done in nursery stock. Fall business this year has been remarkably good for all kinds of hardy stock, evergreens being in great demand among ornamentals.

Various Notes.

Harvey B. Green recently purchased a small nursery, chiefly for the spruce growing thereon, which he intends to which consists of a collection of Egyptian, Persian and Palestinian souvenirs and relics collected by Lieutenant Spettigue, a London boy, while on active service in the far east. The display attracts a great deal of attention, being out of the ordinary line of relics brought back from the fields of battle.

use for his Christmas trade. Mr. Green, in addition to his interests in this city, is connected with a retail establishment near the cemetery at Cambridge, Mass. Harvey B. Green spent three spring seasons pressing and gathering flowers in Palestine, where he made, with the assistance of native helpers, large collections of wild flowers, twelve varieties of which are pressed in a beautifully arranged book. The flowers are named with the common and the botanical name. With each flower there is an appropriate scriptural verse or verses, with an artistic illustration. They have found a ready sale at 50 cents each. Many thousands of them have been disposed of. E. E. R.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

Last week saw a sudden shortening up of stock and most of the retailers were compelled to look to neighboring cities to obtain supplies sufficient to meet the demand.

Mums are on the short side; White Chadwick, Eaton and Yellow Eaton are the best of the large ones. Pompons are good, but not sufficient in quantity to supply everyone. Orchids are more plentiful and selling well.

The large number of debutantes last week kept the retailers busy making up the dainty arrangements so attractive to the new social "buds."

Various Notes.

One affair worthy of special mention took place at the Country Club, over 100 different arrangements being noted. Nearly every florist was represented, but most of the arrangements were the work of Julius Baer, T. W. Hardesty & Co., C. J. Jones and H. W. Sheppard.

Wm. Schumann, of Newport, Ky., an expert on poinsettias for Christmas use, says that his stock is nearly all spoken for and never looked better. Primula malacoides is a specialty with him and some fine cyclamens can be seen at his store.

Schumann & Wahlers have a fine stock of ferns and cyclamens for the holidays.

William Rutenschroer has a fine stock of Mme. Hecker begonias. Carnations and mushrooms are also leaders.

Edith Kyrk, of Avondale, has neat window displays, usually consisting of specimen novelty ferns and blooming plants.

The president presented the Mrs. F. B. Pratt silver cup for the best collection of hardy mums to John W. Everitt; the Hitchings Co. silver cup for twelve mums, four varieties, three of each, to Peter Smith, and the Mrs. H. L. Pratt silver cup for the best table decoration to George Ferguson.

The exhibits for the next meeting, to be held Wednesday, December 10, are: Pot or pan of Paper White narcissi, three heads of celery and twenty-five Brussels sprouts.

The December meeting will be the annual meeting of the society and one which it is important that all members attend. The officers for the coming year will be elected at this time and the annual reports given.

The Market.

There has been another sharp rise in the price of mums and growers are holding their stock higher than at any time since the earliest flowers were over. While the nights are cool, the days are hot and it will be hard to keep flowers in good condition for Thanksgiving. The stems are harder now and do not take water so freely, which is also a disadvantage. Carnation growers are also holding out for higher prices, but the quality of the flowers is better. Indoor-grown stock is scarce. Roses are coming in nice condition, the foliage clean and the flowers of good substance. Brunners are plentiful in the cheaper grades, but first-class stock is still hard to get. Sweet peas are practically off the market, only a few bunches being seen. Orchids are scarce and high in price. All small flowers are good for the season, owing to the early rains and the bright, open weather since. Judging by the way inquiries are coming in, there is going to be a great shipping business for Thanksgiving, wholesalers reporting that their customers are already doubling up on their orders.

Local retailers say business is good and that their customers are spending more money than formerly. Funeral work of higher price is the rule and basket and box trade is good. Several large decorations have been carried out that helped to clean up a lot of stock. Taken altogether, business is quite satisfactory.

C. Gutting and F. Lichtenberg Display their Bag of Ducks.

Various Notes.

For the last few weeks there have been a good number of prominent men missing from their business, but they are returning in ones and pairs. F. Lichtenberg and C. Gutting blew in from the Owens lake country the end of the week, with a big bag of ducks. They had been expected for quite a little while, but the snow was drifted into the roads up there, making them impassable for hunters that were getting good sport. Other people could get by all right. The head of the Superior Nursery Co. said he "had a swell time." Frank says he did, too, but next trip he is going to take precautions and have an extra gas tank along. About six miles is as far as any car can be expected to run without either tank or gas and not on too steep a grade at that.

At the Broadway Florist store large funeral orders are reported, both local and from out of town. A large and handsome wreath being delivered caused a sensation on Broadway recently, the piece being about eight feet high and quite out of the ordinary.

Mrs. W. Clark, wife of W. Clark, now with C. J. Groen, at Montebello, is seriously ill at their home at Boyle Heights. At the time of writing Mrs. Clark was feeling a trifle better and more cheerful. All their friends hope she is on the way to a speedy and complete recovery.

J. Dieterich is under the care of the doctor, suffering from hemorrhage and discharge of blood from nose and mouth.

T. Wright, of Wright's Flower Shop, has returned from a short hunting trip to the mountains.

Nic Zweifel, formerly of North Milwaukee, Wis., is enjoying the southern California sunshine and at the moment of writing I hear that E. C. Amling, of Chicago, also called this morning.

The Market.

The market, both wholesale and retail, was exceptionally busy last week. Shippers were rushing to get out Thanksgiving orders, which were heavy this year. The first of the late varieties of mums are coming in nicely and a fair number of Wells' Lake Pink, Helen Frick, Col. Appleton and Nonin were seen the early part of the week. The prices are keeping up well on this stock and, in addition, the pompons and smaller mums are in good condition, with prices rising a little. The early varieties of large chrysanthemums, Turners, Bonnaffons, etc., are practically gone, the few remaining not being in first-class shape. The rose crop is improving and a larger selection is now available. Ophelia, Columbia, Hoosier Beauty and Ward are the main varieties in the market. Cecile Brunner, too, is being cut in fairly good quantity, but the crop is by no means at its largest.

The demand for greens is keeping just about one jump ahead of the supply. Most of the growers are getting a larger amount of this stock now than they had several weeks ago and are getting it ready for the holiday season. Eastern orders continue heavy on woodwardia, plumosus, etc. Kentias are still rather scarce, but a number of local growers state that a good supply will be ready shortly. Boston ferns are a little more plentiful and in strong demand.

Orchids are reported hard to get. The call for them in local retail establishments is far ahead of the present supply and many substitutes have been used on orchid orders. Gardenias are fairly plentiful. They are good this year and are bringing good prices. Carnations were in better shape last week and more plentiful than they have been for some time. The large amount of funeral work is keeping the market fairly well cleared of this stock.

Potted plants are commencing to arrive from the nurseries, only in small numbers as yet, but growers state that they expect a good business in this line for the holidays. Cyclamen plants and a few azaleas are the main varieties. The violet crop is in fine condition, but growers are anxious for some rain before Christmas. An enormous quantity

Various Notes.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is one of the big violet shippers and a member of the firm said that this year the violet demand is exceptionally large. This concern expects to have a large supply of kentias in soon, as well as cyclamen plants.

Domoto Bros. are busy with violets, the daily shipments being large. The Domoto rose crop is showing up nicely and Mr. Domoto is well pleased with Premier. He prefers its productive quality to that of Russell and says that the color is well liked. The new baby rose grown by this firm is much admired in San Francisco and has also proved its popularity with eastern buyers, Mr. Domoto says. He is of the opinion that its superiority to Cecile Brunner is shown in its more vivid coloring, its more lasting quality and its productiveness for winter use, as it can be grown in the same temperature as other roses. The company also expects to have a late supply of mums, as the varieties now coming in show promise of long blooming. A few azaleas grown by this concern were seen in the market.

Enomoto & Co. received many large Thanksgiving orders and Mr. Enomoto states that the mat orders are coming in splendidly.

The McLellan rose crop is gradually strengthening and H. Avansino states that a big cut will be ready for shipment next week. The varieties which are to be cut are Russell, Ophelia, Columbia, Beauty, Ward and Cecile Brunner. The McLellan depot had a large assortment of mums last week and finished the season's chrysanthemum shipping with a number of big Thanksgiving orders.

H. Kooyman is back at his place of business on Bush street, after a week's illness. An attack of the grip kept him confined at home for several days, but he is much better now.

Gen. A. J. Gooch states that he is well satisfied with his start in the new store. Orders are coming in steadily and he states that he is cleaning up in good shape daily. He has leased another store, on St. Anne street, opposite the California Flower Market, and will move there immediately after the holidays. So far, he has been too busy to use any time in changing the location of the business, but he feels that the St. Anne street depot will be an improvement on the present store. Mrs. Gooch is traveling through the east at present and is sending in numerous orders.

at each end of the table and in the center, with garlands of pompon chrysanthemums stretching toward the four corners. No greens were used in the garlands or in the small formal trees of pompons which were placed at each corner of the table, where the garlands ended.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. keep busy with social affairs and funeral work. This firm has done considerable work in the basket line for the debutantes. At the opening of Techau Tavern, November 17, a huge urn filled with bronze-tinted chrysanthemums occupied a prominent position at the main entrance. In addition to this piece, the firm had the decorations for a number of supper parties there. A new Kissel car is a recent purchase of the company and will be used for special work.

Eric James, of San Leandro, is bringing in a number of cyclamen plants and ferns. His stock is in a promising condition for the holidays.

Carl Melby, formerly of the Melby Flower Shop, of Seattle, Wash., was in San Francisco for a few days, renewing acquaintances among the local trade.

Frank Sarti, who was connected with Rosaia Bros. for some time, was a visitor last week.

A float entirely made up with chrysanthemums was entered in the San Mateo county Armistice day parade by a number of the Colma growers and brought forth many exclamations of admiration as it made its way through the various towns of the county.

Podesta & Baldocchi are doing a large business with coming-out parties and have made up a great many baskets for these affairs. One party alone, Mr. Baldocchi said, was the occasion for orders for sixty baskets. Orchids have been popular for this class of work, but their scarcity has been somewhat of a handicap.

Julius Eppstein, the St. Francis hotel florist, was busy with the second St. Francis assembly, for which chrysanthemums and greens were chiefly used. The pompon varieties of mums and roses are more popular just now than any other blooms.

The Art Floral Co. reports plenty of decorative work. Mr. Matraia states that the force is kept busy making up baskets, etc., in addition to the usual amount of funeral work.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is shipping a good deal of heather from the San Mateo county nursery and Mr. Bertram spoke of several large landscape contracts now on hand. A white and yellow wedding, decorated by this firm, was held at the Clift hotel last week. Chrysanthemums and greens, with a number of large palms, were used.

Bertha Cohn is no longer connected with F. C. Jaeger & Son.

The flower shop of Miss Recardie Lee Murray, at 894 Geary street, has been sold to Celia Luprecht, who will, for the present, conduct it under the same name.

The Albert O. Stein force was particularly busy last week with work for the funeral of Anton Schoembs, Jr., a well known local detective who was killed while on duty. M. M.

Stock has been scarce for Thanksgiving. The warm weather of the last two weeks, with an outdoor night temperature of 56 and 58 degrees, helped to weaken mums and carnations. Local mums are coming in, but not enough to supply the trade and California shipments continue daily, with fairly good stock.

Various Notes.

The big Shriners' ball at the state armory Tuesday night, November 18, and the entertainment of the Prince of Wales Wednesday at the Country Club called for hundreds of roses and chrysanthemums.

Nearly all downtown stores had funeral work for the soldiers killed at Centralia, Wash., by the I. W. W. The mothers of members of the coast artillery of this city sent several large pieces.

The Smith Floral Co., on Broadway, is altering its store. Business at this store is good and stock is cleaned up every night. Fred Smith took a trip over to Seattle last week to see some of his friends in the trade.

Jos. W. Milton has returned from his trip to California and reports a fine time, having been well looked after by florists in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

C. Malmo, of the Malmo Nursery Co., Seattle, Wash., was in Tacoma last week on business and reports a good business in nursery stock, bulbs and seeds.

The sale of cut flowers seemed to lag during the first part of last week, though the funeral work was fairly heavy. W. during a raid on the hall of that organization on Armistice day. Stock is plentiful. Local mums are exceptionally fine and there seems to be plenty for all. Carnations greatly improved last week, but the cut of roses is decreasing, as is customary in this section of the country at this time of year.

Various Notes.

The Orpheum Floral Co. has a fine showing of white and yellow Mensa and Klondyke mums. This firm's Hadley roses with long stems make a fine showing in its window. These, with other fine stock in potted plants, such as cyclamens, begonias, Whitmanii and Boston ferns, are grown at the firm's Woodland Park estate, which is operated in connection with the store. This firm in the near future will be known as the Woodland Park Floral Co. S. Poolman and Mr. Deitchler, who own this business, say that they will have some good sweet peas for the trade at Christmas. They will also have a cut of about 20,000 Maud Dean and Chadwick mums for the holidays. George T. Kelley, recently discharged from an overseas draft and formerly with the Bellingham Floral Exchange, has joined the force of the Orpheum Floral Co., as has also a Mr. Potts, of this city.

Rosaia Bros. report cut flower sales quiet the first part of last week, but received several large orders for the soldiers' funerals in Centralia and the force was kept busy for the rest of the week. Their large window display of cyclamens attracts much attention from the passers-by. Mr. Rosaia has no difficulty in selling the finest specimens at as high as $6 and $7, when made doubly attractive with mats and ribbons.

The Hollywood Gardens are receiving ample stock from the greenhouses to meet the demands of the trade.

The Woodland Flower Shop had an unusually heavy demand for funeral designs for shipment to Centralia, Wash.

C. E. McCoy, the Burns Floral Co. and Felix Rosaia also received a goodly share of business last week.

Frank Cherunka, of the Butte Floral Co., Butte, Mont., was a visitor in town last week; he has charge of the greenhouses of this firm.

Lambert E. Pedersen, of the West Queen Ann Floral Co., visited his friends in the trade last week. He reports that the firm has a fine selection of cyclamens, primulas, begonias, etc.

Stuber & Richardson have some fine Bonnaffon and small Klondyke mums, which they are shipping in. Their cut of carnations is small as yet, but is on the increase.

There was a meeting of the Seattle Retail Florists' Association November 18. Secretary Paulhamer spoke on the different methods of advertising; he is trying to interest the members in the use of a building at the state fair grounds.

An important ball took place at the New Washington hotel Friday evening, November 21. The hotel was elaborately decorated for the occasion by the Hollywood Gardens. The hotel lobby was decorated with large fir trees and festooning of southern smilax, with here and there large clusters of Bonnaffon mums. The mezzanine floor had baskets of yellow mums and festoons of southern smilax. The main dining room was transformed into a ballroom; large silver-colored baskets full of yellow mums filled its spacious windows, while the lights were covered with shades drawn together at the end, to which was attached a cluster of Klondyke mums. The Louis room and the Red room were used for refreshments, the seventeen tables being adorned with centerpieces of Klondyke mums, snapdragons, cyclamens and a mulberry-colored candlestick in the center of each. Large mirrors at either end of the rooms were attractively decorated with wisteria vines, and the windows ornamented with window boxes filled with yellow mums and trailing ivy. The grand staircase, which turns to both right and left, had in the center a long window box filled with maple foliage, yellow mums, ivy and asparagus. P. T. C.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

At the conference which changed specifications for crates carrying vegetable plants at Washington last week were F. W. Bolgiano and R. T. Moffett, of F. W. Bolgiano & Co., Washington, D. C.

After being elected president of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League at Detroit, C. C. Massie, president of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, left for New York to spend a few days with his son, who is a student at Lawrenceville.

Harry B. McCullough, head of the J. Chas. McCullough Seed Co., Cincinnati, O., was injured in an automobile accident Wednesday, November 12. He suffered concussion of the brain and was unconscious when picked up and conveyed to the hospital.

S. F. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co.; C. D. Coventry, of the W. W. Barnard Co., and Leonard Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, were the Chicagoans in attendance at the meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League in Detroit last week.

At the executive committee meeting, which was held November 20 at Detroit, with a full attendance, it was decided to hold the next convention of the American Seed Trade Association June 22 to 24, 1920, at Milwaukee, Wis. A tentative program was arranged and preliminary plans were made for the convention.

There has been considerable complaint in the United States because of the excessive packing charges on this year's imports of Dutch bulbs, but in England the charges are looked on as so out of reason that the council of the Horticultural Trades Association has been instructed to take the matter up officially with the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association.

The German government has taken a hand in the valley pip market. Export licenses are required. The main object of the control is to secure the best possible prices abroad. The Ministry for Economy is guided by advice it receives from special unofficial bureaus which have been set up for each industry for the purpose of making recommendations to that ministry. These bureaus recommend prices which should be demanded before export licenses should be granted, and also recommend the quantities of various articles and material which should be licensed for export.

WHOLESALE SEEDSMEN ELECT.

At the meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, held at the Detroit Athletic Club, Detroit, Mich., November 19, C. C. Massie, president of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, was elected president for the ensuing year and Lem W. Bowen, president of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, and Burnett Landreth, Jr., of the D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa., were reëlected vice-president and secretary, respectively.

Leonard Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, was elected a director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Henry Wood. C. C. Massie was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Howard M. Earl, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.

The meeting was well attended and in addition to the members there were present a number of invited guests. Conditions in general were discussed. While there are shortages in a number of lines, such as peas, many thought that there was a moderate supply of garden seeds, sufficient possibly to take care of the extraordinary demand that is being anticipated for next spring's planting. There is a feeling in the trade that a great deal of gardening will be done in the spring of 1920 to help reduce the high cost of living.

NEBRASKA'S SEED CROPS.

Some of the Nebraska vine seed crops have been harvested and delivered, mostly cucumber and muskmelon, but not many of them are cleaned and tested as yet. Most cucumbers are making fair yields, but a few kinds are small yields, according to William Emerson, of the Western Seed & Irrigation Co. Muskmelon shows small to fair yields, with only a few kinds up to average yields. Pumpkin and squash are being harvested and delivered to date. The outturn is hard to estimate, but nearly all are less than the average yields and some are total failures.

Sweet, field and flint corn are fair yields, but nearly all are less than average as to quantity. Quality is spotted, good in some localities and fair to poor in others, on account of drought checking growth and late rains causing second growth, with late setting of ears in many cases and possibly immature ears in some crops.

NEW COMPANY BUYS LAND.

A tract of land in the Calumet industrial district at Hammond, Ind., improved with buildings having an aggregate floor space of 120,000 square feet, has been purchased by the Continental Seed Co., recently organized with $500,000 paid-up capital by former employees of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago. Notice of its incorporation as the United States Seed Co. appeared in The Review for October 30.

The property has a Grand Calumet river frontage and is served by the Indiana Harbor Belt railroad and six other lines. There are seven acres of vacant property in the site, which will be improved immediately with a 6-story elevator and other buildings as they are needed. The company plans to employ 150 men.

Following the resignation last month of seven employees of the Dickinson concern, Charles Dickinson, vice-president, placed an advertisement in the Economist offering $10,000 reward for evidence of a conspiracy against his company. The reward offer expired at noon Monday, October 27, without the desired information.

The president of the new concern is Charles A. Heath, who was connected with the Albert Dickinson Co. for thirty-seven years and who disposed of his stock in that concern seven years ago for $180,000. The vice-presidents are A. E. Reynolds, of the Crabb, Reynolds, Taylor Co., Crawfordsville, Ind., and H. W. Doughten, of New York, president of H. W. Doughten, Inc. The secretary is Harold A. Abbott, president of the American Feed Manufacturers' Association, with the Dickinson concern for twenty-one years. The treasurer is Arch. C. Johnson, with the Dickinson concern twenty years as a specialist in field seed. D. W. Hales, of the Hales & Edwards Co., and C. U. Snyder, one of the largest operators in feeds and molasses, are directors.

HASTINGS BUYS 1,500 ACRES.

The H. G. Hastings Co., Atlanta, Ga., recently purchased four adjoining tracts of land aggregating about 1,500 acres, in Clayton county. This land will be used chiefly for growing seeds and nursery stock and raising new plants, with much space for experimental work. The purchase is advantageous because of both the commercially valuable location and the good soil conditions. The tracts are twenty-five miles from Atlanta and are crossed by two important highways and by the Central of Georgia railroad, being between the Lovejoy and Jonesboro stations. Nearly two-thirds of the land is either entirely virgin soil or at least untouched since the Civil war.

KUNDERD'S BIG BULB SALE.

A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Ind., reports the sale of all the surplus gladiolus bulbs of his entire catalogue list for this season and will not issue a catalogue for 1920. The sale of the stock was made to Albert W. Henn, president of the National Acme Co., of Cleveland, O., for a consideration of $60,000. This is the largest single gladiolus bulb sale on record. Mr. Henn is the owner of extensive farms near Painesville, O., where he raises the highest-class pedigreed stocks of farm animals, as well as high-class farm seeds, etc. The management of the bulb and seed department is under the supervision of Ralph E. Huntington, of Painesville, O., the well known nurseryman and bulb specialist.

The gladiolus is Mr. Henn's favorite flower and he has grown most of the finest varieties of the leading specialists for years. During the season just past he grew about 200 of Mr. Kunderd's named varieties, which were a revelation to him and a great attraction to tourists on the main line of the National highway between Buffalo and Cleveland, not far from the Garfield home at West Mentor, O. It is Mr. Henn's intention not to resell any of the bulbs the present season, in order to be able first to grow on larger quantities to supply the demand from seedsmen and the catalogue and nursery trade.

It may be remarked in passing that Painesville is the home of the Storrs & Harrison Co. and a number of other well known nurseries. In all about 17,000 acres of nursery stocks are grown in this vicinity, making it perhaps the largest section where nursery stock is grown in America, if not in the world.

PAINESVILLE, O.

Fletcher Bohlender, of Tippecanoe City, O., made a business visit to the many nurseries here last week.

T. R. Norman & Sons are building up a high-class trade and doing an exceptionally good business.

C. Merkel & Son and the Carl Hagenburger Co., of Mentor, O., have been busy shipping plants and flowers to the Cleveland market for the holidays.

Joseph Kallay, formerly in business with Kallay Bros., has launched out on his own hook this year and has several acres planted in nursery stock, perennials, etc. Mr. Kallay's nursery is located on Mentor avenue, in the same vicinity as the Wayside Gardens and Martin Kohankie. T. J. M.

The Market.

Business was satisfactory last week, funerals calling for most of the flowers. There have been unusual numbers of early morning wedding orders for Thanksgiving day.

Mums and pompons have continued good here with most of the growers.

Various Notes.

Miss Helen Patten is on the sick list.

S. N. Peck is nursing a sore nose and cheek caused by stumbling in the packing shed of G. Bayer & Sons; steam on his glasses obstructed his view.

Max Spanner celebrated his forty-fifth birthday Thursday, November 20.

The next meeting of the Retail Florists' Association is to be held at Patten's Flower Shop Tuesday, December 2, at 8:15 p. m.

Last week's visitors to this city were as follows: H. E. Brandt, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York; E. H. Lane, of the Lindley Florist Box Co., Marion, Ind.; S. F. Lewis, New York; F. A. Wagner, Tiffin, O.; E. R. Sackett, of the Fostoria Floral Co., Fostoria, O., and Mr. Fletcher, of the Rolf Zetlitz Co., Dayton, O. C. M. B.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE high prices received for fruit have greatly stimulated the demand for fruit trees this fall. Many nurserymen are sold out.

THE greenhouses of the Plender Nurseries, Philadelphia, Pa., for the last half century on Twenty-sixth street, near Girard avenue, are being torn down to make way for a garage building.

CALIFORNIANS ELECT.

Annual Meeting at Chico.

At the convention of the California Association of Nurserymen at Chico November 13 to 15 J. E. Bergtholdt, of New Castle, was elected president; H. A. Hyde, of Watsonville, vice-president; W. R. Wood, of San Dimas, second vice-president; L. H. Elmer, of San Jose, third vice-president; James Mills, Jr., of Hamilton City, fourth vice-president; George C. Roeding, of Fresno, fifth vice-president, and Henry W. Kruckeberg, of Los Angeles, secretary-treasurer.

The directors for the coming year are J. E. Merriweather, of Ontario, chairman; R. M. Teague, of San Dimas; Leonard Coates, of Morganhill; W. T. Kirkman, Jr., of Fresno, and H. J. Shearer.

The next convention will be held at Fresno.

The most important action taken by the nurserymen was the organization of a $100,000 corporation to raise select nursery stock. A committee composed of George C. Roeding, of Fresno; M. J. Crow, of Gilroy; William T. Kirkman, J. E. Bergtholdt and H. A. Hyde was named to meet in San Francisco next month and perfect the organization. The corporation was the suggestion of William T. Kirkman, Jr., the retiring president.

The Japanese question came in for discussion in connection with a telegram from Senator Phelan, and a resolution was passed urging the calling of a special session of the legislature to consider the Japanese question. It was pointed out that Japanese nurserymen are competing with members of the association. It was proposed by Senator Phelan that a boycott against the products of Japanese labor be established, but this suggestion was not acted upon.

MAHONIA AND THE QUARANTINE.

In The Review of October 30, under the head of Usinger's Utterances, mention is made of Mahonia Aquifolium as a dangerous barberry. As the natural habitat of this shrub is the Pacific coast, where it is highly prized in landscape plantings, the writer would like to know wherein it is dangerous. Maybe your correspondent has confounded it with Berberis vulgaris, the host of the wheat rust, I believe. D. M.—Ore.

The item was as follows:

L. R. Taft, of the Michigan Agricultural College, is looking up stray plants of the dangerous barberry, Mahonia Aquifolium, in Bay City and Saginaw, Mich. He found a few in both cities. Professor Taft says, "The state of Michigan is quickly getting rid of this dangerous shrub. The state department has the hearty co-operation of the people in this work, and except in isolated districts the work is almost over."

While mahonias are not so subject to the attack of the black stem rust as are some other species of barberries, they are a host of this disease, the flowers and fruits in particular being subject to attack. It is true that the disease is seldom if ever serious enough to cause any great injury to the mahonia itself, but even though the rusted spots are no larger than the head of a pin, the cluster cups may contain thousands of spores which will spread the disease to the grains and grasses.

The persons who assert that the common barberry only is covered by the prohibitions are mistaken. Last spring the Federal Horticultural Board had a hearing, at which it was established that certain species of mahonia, as well as about thirty species of barberry proper, are attacked by this disease, and at the recommendation of the board Secretary of Agriculture Houston gave notice of a quarantine (Quarantine No. 38, dated April 15, 1919) against the movement of such barberries and mahonias from the eastern and southern states into the north central states, in which an attempt is being made to eradicate the barberries and mahonias. The preamble of the quarantine notice reads as follows: "The fact has been determined by the Secretary of Agriculture and notice is hereby given that the common barberry, Berberis vulgaris, and its horticultural varieties, as well as other species of berberis and mahonia, are capable of harboring the black stem rust of wheat, oats, barley, rye and many wild and cultivated species of grasses." The quarantine notice specifically mentions the following species of mahonia as included among those which are subject to attack: Mahonia Aquifolium, M. diversifolia, M. glauca and M. repens. This shows the opinion of the experts of the Department of Agriculture, who have made a special study of the matter.

In Michigan the law provides for the destruction of Mahonia Aquifolium and such other species as are subject to the attack of the black stem rust. Several of the other states also have quarantines against barberries and mahonias. In Illinois, the eradication notice which covers the common barberry excludes the Japanese barberry and mahonias, unless actually infected with the rust.

varieties are still available, including Seidewitz, Chadwick in white and yellow, Whittier, Minnie Bailey, Eaton, Hamburg Late White, etc. Some good pompons in Baby, Golden Climax, Western Beauty and Hilda Canning and anemone-flowered varieties are in the market. The great abundance of previous weeks, however, is gone and, as a consequence, prices are stiffening.

Roses are not quite so plentiful and have been clearing quickly at prices ranging from $4 to $16.

Carnations are meeting with ready sale and are in fair supply at from $3 to $5. Calla lilies are available in limited supply at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. A few sweet peas are seen, but are as yet rather rare.

Potted plants are good property, but the variety of choice is rather meager. Jerusalem cherries, begonias, ferns, chrysanthemum plants and primroses compose the assortment.

Business has continued good. Chrysanthemums have sold unusually well this fall, while other stock has not suffered as in previous years. Prices have been fairly high.

Various Notes.

J. E. Hitz and David Kelly, of Franklin, Ind., were visitors last week.

Edwin M. Nelson, who has recently returned from France, is now with E. E. Temperley.

The next meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held December 9 instead of the first Tuesday in the month as usual. The Indianapolis party will go on the train leaving at 7:30 a. m. and arriving at New Albany about 11 o'clock.

O. E. Steinkamp attended the last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, which was held at the Statler hotel, Detroit. He exhibited Baur & Steinkamp's new carnation, Ruth Baur.

Rolf Zetlitz, of Dayton, O., visited here last week.

Guy C. Sharp, of Noblesville, Ind., is shipping some good sweet peas and chrysanthemums into this market.

Baur & Steinkamp had a good Thanksgiving cut in Seidewitz, Dolly Dimple, Fall Beauty, Hamburg White and pompons and seedlings.

The Indiana State Florists' Association is beginning to make preparations for the meeting of the F. T. D., which will be held in Indianapolis next October.

The Market.

Trade is as good as we can hope for at present, with stock a little on the decline. Mums are pretty well cleaned up; while there have been great quantities of them here, they have about all found a ready market. For a few days there was a little glut on the market, but outside of that they went readily. Carnations are arriving in fair quantities, with quality good as a rule; stems are getting better.

Roses are a little shy at present and there is no surplus at any time. Russell is improving in quality and other varieties are good. The warm weather of a short time ago brought on a heavy cut and it will be difficult for some of the growers to figure out another crop for Christmas.

Sweet peas move well, but there has been no great quantity so far. Violets move well and the quality is improving as the season advances. Greens are scarce and likely to be increasingly difficult to obtain. There are some fine cyclamens to be had and they have been moving well considering the date. There is also some good Primula obconica coming in. It looks as though the market here will not have to depend on out-of-town stock. Poinsettias are looking promising for Christmas.

Various Notes.

T. J. Ludwig reports good business, with stock a little scarce.

S. F. Stephens & Son are cleaning up their stock of mums as they are ready to cut and it takes a great many for their cemetery trade.

Herman Kropp reports business good, especially on funeral work.

James McKellar was laid up a week with a touch of the grip, but is on deck again. He has with him now his brother, Oliver, who has been in the army six years on the Texas border. J. M.

Primula Malacoides Rosea

Our stock is the pure, deep, rich pink so much in demand.

The Market.

When a market has to send out S. O. S. calls for stock during a chrysanthemum season, it is safe to say that there is something doing, and the growers ought to take the hint. Such was the case last week—especially the week-end. The principal shortage existed in white wedding roses and Ophelia.

Last month there existed a condition in the market which ought to be noted as remarkable. In the line of wedding flowers the trade has been called on to furnish some costly bouquets to shop laborers. In fact, some are reported to be at such prices that they would be unthinkable, even for the wealthy. It is difficult to imagine orchids and lily of the valley at today's prices for a workingman's wedding, yet such is the case.

The existing shortage is extended to all lines of cut flowers. Chrysanthemums, pompons, carnations, violets and narcissi are all selling clean. Carnations have advanced to $6, narcissi have lowered to $5 per hundred. In regard to narcissi the retailers agree that it is difficult to sell them above the $1.50 per dozen mark.

Advertising.

Much has been said and thought of our advertising, of what it has done, what it will do and what it might do. In the minds of those who have spent any amount of their hard-earned cash, the word "might" does not exist, for they know what advertising WILL do, if carried on as started. Our local chrysanthemum show two weeks ago impressed chrysanthemums on the minds of at least half of the city's population and those who saw it did not only think chrysanthemums, but talk them. This proved a wealth of advertising for little cost to the trade. Wallace Eiss rounded out the opinion of men who know that advertising pays when he said: "Believe me, boys, if we go into this thing right, we aren't going to be able to supply the demand for flowers and that is what we want—a trade that wants more than we can furnish." Leather Leaf Fern

(Polystichum coriaceum)

Last season we sold stock of this sterling novelty to more than 300 florists in the United States. We did not receive a single complaint, but, instead, many letters of commendation.

It is one of the most beautiful ferns in cultivation and undoubtedly the most valuable one for cutting. If you do any floral work at all you should certainly grow this fern. It will prove economical and add class to your design work. Also a good subject for pots, tubs and window boxes. A few thousand strong divisions now ready at same old price: $10.00 per 100; 25, postpaid, for $3.00.

ASPARAGUS ELONGATUS

(Cut-and-Come-Again) The best producer of good green in the Asparagus family

We are now harvesting our annual crop of seed and will have a few thousands beyond our own requirements. This small stock, however, will not half supply the demand. Order at once if you want some of this seed, at $1.00 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful also to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

IS HE HEATING ECONOMICALLY?

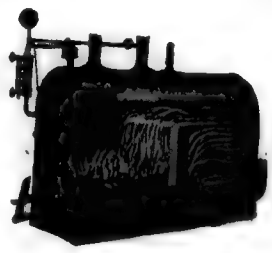
Will you kindly tell me whether or not I am burning too much coal? The average coal consumption in my houses is 16.65 pounds per square foot of glass. Half the houses are kept at a night temperature of 60 degrees, the other half at 45 to 50 degrees, with the outside temperature sometimes as low as 18 degrees below zero. Some of my neighbors tell me I am burning too much coal; others say I am heating with more than ordinary economy. What would be a fair estimate? F. E. K.—Mo.

The inquiry does not state the kind or quality of coal, the size of the range or the condition of the glazing, all of which would have an appreciable effect on the amount of coal used. We infer that some form of soft or bituminous coal, of the run-of-mine grade, is burned. In that case, we would consider that the heating is fairly economical for a range of not more than 5,000 square feet, using steam heat. With hot water the consumption of coal should be reduced twenty-five per cent, and a slight saving should also be made in larger ranges.

HOT WATER IS PREFERABLE.

I am thinking of putting up a greenhouse, about 25x50, and should like a little advice from you. My residence is 26x26 and is heated by a one-register, pipeless furnace in the center of the basement. Would it be practical to install a steam or hot water boiler, arranging it to take the place of the pipeless furnace without changing the hot air register or the cold air intake? My plan would be to utilize the heat radiating from the outside of the furnace for the residence, while conducting the steam or hot water to the greenhouse, which will be immediately south of the residence. I do not suppose such a boiler would furnish enough hot air through the one register to heat the residence, but it is my idea that this arrangement might be sufficient in mild weather and that a steam or hot water radiator could be installed for additional heat in severe weather.

Is it essential that a greenhouse run east and west, or would one of the size mentioned be satisfactory if run north and south? On account of other buildings, more space will be available if the house is run north and south. Which system, steam or hot water, will be preferable? C. R. D.—Ind.



It will not be feasible to use a steam or hot water heater in the place of the pipeless hot air furnace. While some benefit would be secured from the radiation furnished by the outer wall of the boiler, it would not be more than the

Help Save the "White Coal of Industry"

The boiling hot water resulting from condensation in your steam lines is worth money. You have paid for it in terms of coal. It contains valuable heat units. It is the "White Coal of Industry"—it should not be wasted.

And it need not be wasted. The Morehead Back-to-Boiler System will save it for you by returning it to the boiler at temperatures as high as 400 degrees Fahrenheit. It reduces coal consumption an average of 20%. At the same time your steam will be "drier" and more efficient; your production speeded up and profits increased.

Write today for facts and figures on what the Morehead System will do in your plant.

equivalent of fifty square feet of hot water radiation, while fully 200 square feet will be required to heat the dwelling and twice as much will be needed in the greenhouse. It would be possible, of course, to place a hot water coil in a hot air furnace, but even this would not supply more than fifty square feet of radiation.

Under the circumstances, we would leave the hot air furnace in place and put in a small hot water boiler. If the greenhouse is to be heated to 60 degrees, the boiler should have a rating for 600 square feet. In the greenhouse we would use three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. In case a boiler is put in to heat both residence and greenhouse, it should have a rating of approximately 900 square feet. For places of this size we prefer hot water to steam. While the house could be run in either direction without making any great difference, we ordinarily prefer to have even-span houses run north and south.

Retail Club Meeting.

The Toronto Retail Florists' Club decided at its meeting Monday, November 17, to invite the growers to its next meeting, December 8. The club now includes practically all the important florists in the city and it is felt that, if the retailers and the growers coöperate, a great deal can be done for the betterment of the business. It is hoped that the growers will meet with the retailers and evolve plans which will be to their mutual benefit.

The club decided to purchase a piano and it is hoped that it will be ready for use at the next social meeting.

Gardeners' Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Association was held November 18, when the following officers were elected: President, John Mills; first vice-president, Fred Clark; second vice-president, Frank Fletcher; secretary, Alex Simpson, 11 Queen's park; treasurer, George Hall; executive committee, the above named and Thomas Manton, P. Gentlemen: Please send me 25 record plates like the enclosed sample, and I want to say that the machine, bought a good many years back, is keeping up its good work right along. I think it a very useful adjunct to good plant growing, and it should be in every greenhouse, as reference to it may often tell what is wrong with a batch of plants. Very truly yours,

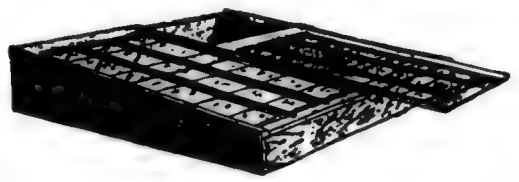
ALBERT M. HERR.



The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal, which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with.

The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

The Market.

Stock was scarce last week and advanced in price. Retailers report counter trade fair. Roses have shortened up considerably and it has been impossible to supply large quantities. Carnations are none too plentiful and clean up well at $4 per hundred. Chrysanthemums are about cleaned up and many of the varieties used for Thanksgiving in other years were cut two weeks earlier. Pompons are arriving in large quantities and are about the only flowers to offer after the morning rush is over. Violets have been clearing well. Calendulas are in demand. Daisies, sweet peas and other novelties clean up well. Asparagus and adiantum are in demand. Boxwood is available in large quantities.

The Market.

Business was brisk last week, with funeral work and several large decorations. The Shriners' initiation Friday, November 21, increased the demand.

Some fine Premier, Columbia and Shawyer have been coming in and bring prices of $3 to $6 per dozen retail. Chrysanthemums are still on the market and the demand is great. Flower Show.

Last week the retail florists held an exhibition of flowers such as Fort Wayne had never before seen. It was held at the Anthony hotel, November 22 and 23.

The Flick Floral Co. had an unusual display of Dolly Dimple, William Turner, Golden Chadwick and Eaton mums. This firm featured specially brides' bouquets and corsages. Many choice roses were displayed.

Ralph H. Tinkham's display was distinctive. It was a garden of flowers. In the rear of the display there was latticework covered with southern smilax and pompon chrysanthemums. Baskets of Premier and Russell roses and Dolly Dimple and Chadwick chrysanthemums were artistically arranged. One beautiful basket of cattleyas produced a wonderful effect, together with the picket fence, which was also covered with smilax and mums.

The Doswell Floral Co. featured some unusual basket arrangements of chrysanthemums, calendulas and roses. Some especially fine Cleveland cherry plants and poinsettias, which were the first of the season to be shown here, were also on display.

GREENHOUSE MATERIAL GREENHOUSE HARDWARE

KANSAS CITY NOTES.

E. A. Humfeld had a blanket, 4x7 feet, of Ophelia roses and violets, with a center of orchids, for the funeral of Mrs. Francis M. Black, November 22. After tiresome waiting for materials, Mr. Humfeld has at last completed three new houses near Independence, Mo., and they are now in running order. One house will be used for sweet peas, another for Easter lilies, hydrangeas and ferns and the third for sweet peas and snapdragons. Mr. Humfeld is devoting most of his time now to planting Holland bulbs for indoor growing.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. has ordered more glass for the pot plant house at Pleasant Hill, which is nearly complete. This firm had 7,000 cyclamen plants at the beginning of the season and has sold 2,000 thus far.

Herman Fisher, of Marysville, Kan.; J. W. Stokes, Springfield, Mo.; O. O. Boston, Tulsa, Okla., and L. H. Archias, Sedalia, Mo., were visitors last week.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a busy week, with plenty of nice stock in the way of mums, pompons and anemones and some especially good plants. Although roses are being held back for Christmas, there is a fair supply of these also.

Mrs. T. J. Noll has as her guest for this week her niece, Miss Doris Dagmar, who is leading woman in a sketch, "The Flattering Word," on the Orpheum circuit, playing in Kansas City this week.

A. Newell, Samuel Murray, Adolph Mohr and H. R. Fisher motored from Kansas City to Pleasant Hill, Mo., November 21, to visit the Pinehurst greenhouses.

Miss Hayden, of Samuel Murray's, says there is a great demand for artificial fruit baskets and baskets of strawflowers. The fruit is new here this season and has taken a great hold on the public fancy, but strawflowers, while selling in the past, have grown in favor of late.

Florence L. Gooch, representing Gen. A. J. Gooch, wholesale florist of San Francisco, Cal., called on the trade last week.

Henry Kusik & Co. ordered 175,000 mums for Thanksgiving.

T. J. Noll & Co. are receiving choice lots of mums from their growers and have a fine lot of perfect specimens in their own greenhouses. J. E. K.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business increased considerably last week, there being a good demand for almost all stock, but chiefly for chrysanthemums. There has been a larger number of funerals and weddings lately and these, with the social affairs, give the florists plenty to do.

Roses and carnations are quite plentiful and of good quality. Calendulas are appearing on the market. There are many mum pot plants, also Paper Whites in pans.

Various Notes.

Theodore Kuebler has opened a store at 420 Fourth street. The opening was Saturday, November 22. He had the store profusely decorated with mums and carnations, also potted mums, begonias, Paper Whites and ferns. He gave flowers as souvenirs. His store is on the street where market is held three times a week and thousands of people pass there.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting fine large mums, pompons, calendulas and bouvardia.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. is cutting roses, carnations and mums. The store is tastefully decorated with plants and flowers of various kinds at all times. Walter Laut, of this firm's force, has left for a few days' fishing at Footes lake, over on the Wabash river.

Karl Zeidler has gone on his annual trip as cook for the hunting crowd which goes each year at this time. They went down into Louisiana for a two weeks' stay. His sons are taking care of the business and say that trade is much better than it was a week ago. Their mums will soon be gone.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann completed her rebuilding by the addition of a new workroom with a concrete floor. Her establishment is now in good shape for the season.

Wm. Halbrooks & Son have planted their two houses in lettuce.

The Evansville Nurseries are doing a large landscape business all over the city.

O. S. Smith is cutting some fine large mums and pompons.

Royston & Fenton have a batch of about 2,500 Easter Greeting pelargoniums for December delivery, out of 2½-inch and 3-inch pots.

C. L. Niednagel is cutting fine Ward, Russell, Premier and Columbia roses.

E. L. F.

Burlington, N. J.—L. M. Beers is starting in the greenhouse business.

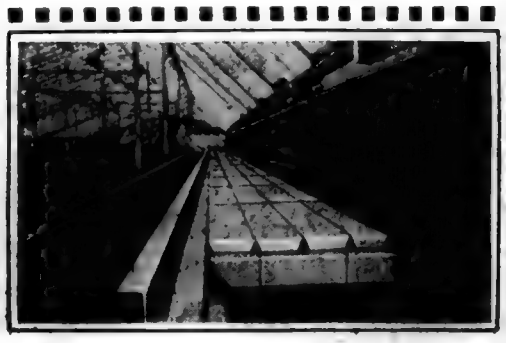
The Market.

With ideal weather for last week, business was good. There was a good supply of stock, but owing to the heavy demand there has not been a surplus. There are plenty of chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving. Dolly Dimple is now in bloom and it is indeed fine. It is no trouble at all to get $1 per bloom for it. The cut of roses has improved wonderfully, but owing to the unusual demand for them there is a scarcity. The carnation crop is also improving. There is a good crop of orchids and the demand for them is good; they bring from $1.50 to $2.50 per bloom. Narcissi are coming in and are unusually fine this season. Bulb trade remains good, despite the lateness of the season.

Various Notes.

Miss Edna Coram, saleslady at Baum's Home of Flowers, met with an accident November 19 resulting in her removal to the Riverside hospital for an operation. Her left foot was accidentally caught in the closing door of an icebox, with the result that the heel tendon was severed. She is progressing nicely, but will not be able to return to work for some time. R. E. M.

NEWARK, N. J.



The Market.

Better business was reported for last week. There was considerable funeral work, some wedding work and an increase in decorations for social events. Counter trade has increased slightly. The price of chrysanthemums is still rather high, but other flowers are reasonable in price.

Various Notes.

Henry A. Strobell, 931 Broad street, reports considerable funeral work and several big decorations.

Fred P. Wolfinger, 883 Broad street, reports that there is a good demand for flowers, which are of fine quality now. R. B. M.

A Glazing Putty of Real Value

In all our experience and investigation we had never found a preparation for bulbing over the outside of a greenhouse that was quite satisfactory, until we ran across PERMANITE. This was about four years ago. At that time we set about investigating the merits of PERMANITE and proceeded to watch the results of its application to greenhouse roofs.

Last year we were entirely convinced of its high quality and durability, and accepted the western agency for the sale of these goods.

We applied PERMANITE to hundreds of greenhouse roofs, over almost every part of the United States.

The results obtained were highly satisfactory indeed. Glass roofs of all kinds, both old and new, were made water-tight and air-tight, saving thousands of plants from being spoiled by water dripping on them and saving many hundreds of tons of coal by making the roofs proof against the wind and storms of winter.

We give PERMANITE our unqualified endorsement and recommend it highly for all kinds of glazing.

We have a very large stock on hand in our warehouse and can ship immediately.

SNAPDRAGONS

Snapdragons. We now have a large stock of fine healthy plants, topped and branching, just right to bench. This seed is from specialists and is the best winter blooming seed obtainable. We wrap each plant separately and pack in low open top boxes so plants will reach you in best condition possible. As long as stock lasts we have the following varieties:
Keystone, soft pink, very fine variety.
Nelrose, similar to Keystone, little deeper.
Enchantress, light pink, grand in every way.
Silver Pink, standard light pink.
Buxton's Pink, strong silvery light pink, fine.
Phelps' White.
Phelps' Yellow and Giant Yellow.
Bronze Beauty, very strong grower.
Garnet, beautiful shade red.
Seneca, creamy white, compact, strong grower, $4.00 per 100. Packing free. Liberal extras.
Geneva Floral Co., Geneva, N. Y.

Let Snapdragons follow Mums. Shortage of Carnations will bring big demand for Snaps. Very useful for decorations, designing, sprays and corsages, and pay big. They are of easy culture, require little heat. We specialise in Snaps, growing our own seed from carefully selected plants, continually improving them, especially in regard to color and winter blooming qualities. Strong, healthy, rust free plants like ours are scarce this year. Order now, delivery when you want them.
Colors, Silver Pink, Rose Pink, Enchantress Pink, lavender shades, garnet, Giant White and Yellow, 2½-in., $4.50 per 100; seeds, 50c per trade packet. Cash, please.

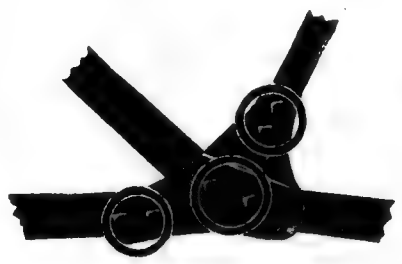
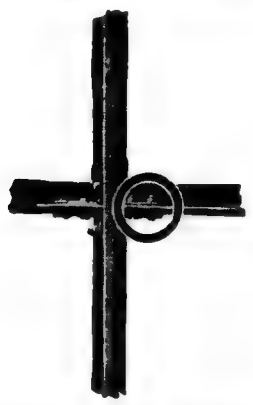
INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS--PAGES TWO AND THREE

Greenhouse Builders

The side truss member running between column and post is double bolted to the gusset plate.



The main center truss member is secured to the strut and tie fitting by two bolts.



The main truss is secured to the column cap by two bolts.

2 Bolts 1 and why

This truss-joining plate holds the four truss members rigidly in exact place. The two bolts prevent any twisting or turning.

The gable purlins are fastened to the gable rafters by double angle knees with double purlin bolts.

"Vibration," "Give-and-take," "Come-and-go," call it what you will, it's the very thing you don't want in your greenhouse.

With it your glass loosens.

Without it, it doesn't.

We build the house that doesn't.

The 2-bolt method is one reason why.

You can't make a framing joint of two or more members, and make that joint rigid by using only one bolt on each side of the joint.

No matter how tight you screw it up, there will be some "give."

"Gives" never grow less.

We are dead against "Gives."

Every important framing joint or connection on our Iron Frame house has two bolts on at least one side—sometimes on both.

Making twice the number of bolt holes costs money

Using twice the number of bolts costs more money.

Which would you rather do, pay less money for less bolt holes and bolts and have loosened glass, or pay more and have your glass stay tight?

Our stay-tight way may cost a bit more to start with, but a lot less to end with.

The cost of a house is not just what it costs to buy, but what it costs to buy, in addition to what it costs to keep it bought.

Ever think of it just that way?

When you are ready to talk building, say when and where and we'll be there.

A Chrysanthemum Show in Japan—Photo Obtained by Our Mr. Miller While in Japan to Select Your Lily Bulbs This Season.

Lily Bulbs

Lilies required for Easter would better be planted not later than the middle of this month. If delayed, it requires more heat, and extreme forcing often causes blasting of the flower buds. To wait longer means added expense, therefore order from us by wire and we will ship immediately from the nearest of the following points: Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, Minneapolis, Toronto or Seattle. Bulbs in stock in each city.

Remember, all our Lily Bulbs have been shipped from the coast, which takes from three to four weeks, in refrigerator cars, iced. Providing these cold storage facilities improves the quality of the Bulbs wanted for early forcing. We stop at no expense to improve our stock, and we know that our bulbs are the best selected from the finest fields in Japan. Order at once.

SPECIAL OFFER

Dock strikes and freight embargoes prevented early deliveries of some orders we held for our customers. A few canceled, thus depriving themselves of the opportunity of having Bulbous Stock for their trade for the spring season. But it gives us a chance to offer a Bargain to those who can still use a few Bulbs. In order to dispose of these Bulbs, which we guarantee will be in first-class condition when they reach you, we will prepay all charges, with a special 15 per cent discount on all orders mailed us or sent by wire.

This offer is subject to stock being unsold at time we receive your order.

Use Ribbons and Chiffons Liberally

Nothing adds more to the beauty of a Floral Design or a Bouquet of Flowers than an attractive bow of Ribbon or Chiffon. In fact no other trimming answers just the same purpose.

Invariably those Florists who use these fabrics in quantities are the most successful in their communities.

We are pioneers in the creation of Floral Fabrics. Being manufacturers, we are able to stand back of every yard of goods which leaves our establishment.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

RETAILING FROM ROOF GARDENS

Hunt for novel approach to buyers' purses and rising rents of ground-floor locations may lead retailers to favor roof-gardens on top of hotels and high-class office buildings. Now that telephone orders exceed personal calls the possibilities presented in this article may appeal to practical minds.

THE FLORIST of today is most certainly not a celestial in his mode of cerebration. He is no worshiper of things bygone. He looks up, not down; ahead, not behind, and he is eager to lend a hand wherever and whenever it will contribute to the advancement of his craft. So it is not too much to expect him to do the unusual, the startling, the bizzare, in his effort to lure the lucre.

The recent completion of the sky-garden on the roof of the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York's newest and most elaborate hostelry, lends a flavor to the foregoing remarks that lingers in a reflective mind. Time was when a florist could establish himself in a street-level store and cultivate assiduously whatever genius he had in arranging window displays and making profit commensurate with his investment. But with the increasingly forbidding main-floor rentals in the congested office building, hotel and department store sections of the city, his orientation becomes relatively complicated.

Lure Aloft.

The whole thing resolves itself into a question of objective. What is the caliber of the game he is after? If it is small fry, his troubles are virtually at an end, for he can retire to a basement or an upper floor and keep the wolf from the door. If, however, he is after something worth while in the way of customers, he finds himself under the necessity of maintaining an elaborate establishment on the street level or of finding an equally advantageous location elsewhere.

And right here the sky-garden comes in, for what is more natural than that he should make capital out of his quandary and retire to the roof, where with a well stocked sky-garden he has every bit of human psychology working for instead of against him? The advantage of light and fresh air is all on his side. The lure of an always fascinating panorama constantly draws buyers. In fact, he is right on top of hundreds of possible customers, whether his greenhouse tops a hotel or an office building. Then, too, it has the added attraction in the eyes of the big game of being out of the path of the rabble. Moreover, from such a vantage point the attention of the patrons would not be divided by some object foreign to the main issue.

Sky-Garden Worth Study.

The structure topping the Hotel Pennsylvania is worth study, altogether apart from the possibilities this erection has suggested. The main greenhouse is 60 x 90 feet, of what the engineers style the 3-hinged arched construction. It was figured to support a dead weight of ten pounds per square foot plus a wind pressure of twenty-five pounds per square foot. And when one considers that it is a steel and glass structure, that it stands 300 feet above the street level, that it passed the test of the lynx-eyed engineers of the bureau of buildings of the borough of Manhattan, it seems like a postulation to say that its builders, the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., have contributed something notable to greenhouse architecture. The main greenhouse is connected by a smaller one at right angles to it, 18 x 45, adding to the big roof garden dining room.

The original purpose of E. M. Statler, the famous hotel proprietor, in erecting this sky-garden was to have a promenade for banqueters, a place where they might stroll through majestic palms and strange, exotic flowering plants, undisturbed by the vulgar noises of the street. However, as the work of the erection progressed, the plans of the hotel management became more elaborate. The idea was conceived of lighting it by electric bulbs in the shape and color of butterflies, modeled and tinted as nearly like nature as possible, and Butterfly Conservatory was suggested as a most appropriate name.

Greenhouse atop New York Hotel may route Retailers Ambitions

Versatile Structure.

Whether the greenhouse will be merely a conservatory for the enjoyment of the hotel's patrons, or whether the Hotel Pennsylvania will follow the lead of a number of other hotels and establish a florists' business in connection with it, is not yet certain. The opportunity, however, is there for some enterprising florist with a big vision. Not only there, but everywhere. For in cities, as on the proverbial ladder, there is always room at the top, and as everything else obeys a natural impulse to go up these days, why not the florists?

A paragraph in the New York notes in The Review two weeks ago read: "The roof garden seems likely to become a feature in the future construction of large residential buildings in New York. Three large buildings are now under construction in which provision for gardens is being made: Holbrook Hall, at 100 West Fifty-fifth street; the Presada, at 50 Central Park, west, and the Town House Club, at the corner of Central Park, west, and Sixty-seventh street.''

Description of Greenhouse.

There are two buildings composing the greenhouse. The main building covers one of the four south wings of the hotel and is about 60 x 90 feet. The other building is 18 x 45 feet and covers a bridge which leads to the roof-garden restaurant on the Eighth avenue side of the hotel.

There are no interior columns in either of the buildings and the entire space is clear and free. The height of the main building, from floor to roof peak, is thirty feet and the height of the sides is twelve feet. The bridge house connects into the curved side of the main building and is provided with a removable partition at this point, so that it can be closed off as desired.

The walls are of pressed brick and the floor of red tile. Above the brickwork is a series of French windows, glazed with plate-glass and fitted with adjustable casement stays that hold the sash in any position desired. Above these are wall vents glazed with cathedral glass and operated with mechanical sash operators.

The roof is semi-curvilinear and is glazed with heavy ribbed glass laid in special putty. Ventilators are used on the roofs similar to the ones in an ordinary greenhouse and mechanically operated from convenient stations. The heating system is a vacuum steam system, made up with radiators and pipe coils around the walls.

There is a balcony outside of the main building and this is decorated with shrubs and plants. Staging is provided all around the sides for plants in pots or beds. Provision has been made for awnings and draperies for summer use and this framework is left in place during the winter.

Engineering Problems.

The height of the site for the greenhouse brought up the problem of wind pressure. The New York building department was consulted as to their views and two well known engineering firms, one in New York and one in Chicago, were asked to go over the designs for the steel frame. It was an easy task to design a steel frame to carry the load, but to get one that was suitable for greenhouse work and that would be light and attractive was a horse of another color. The first design was finally accepted, with slight modifications. The steel frame for these buildings had to be sixteen times as strong as the ordinary greenhouse steel frame.

To meet the rules of the city building department, no wood could be used in the structure; so each piece of woodwork had to be patiently covered with kalameined metal. The copper work for cornice and drainage work had to be insulated from the steelwork to prevent electrolysis. The result of electrolytic action of copper to steel in the Atlantic coast salt air would be the quick destruction of the building.

Where the main conservatory adjoins the central portion of the hotel, it was not possible to use a column to support the roof of the building. To carry this roof for such a span on a horizontal plane required a steel I-beam twenty-four inches wide and weighing 4,800 pounds.

The steel columns used to support the great roof of the conservatory are ten in number, but only eight of these are anchored into the hotel structure, the other two being the end columns, which are separately supported. The eight columns are anchored in the roof of the building and connected with two 24-inch I-beams, having a total weight of 160 pounds per foot. The weight of the steel frame in the big house is about 150,000 pounds.

Feats in Building.

The connecting fittings for the great arches at the ridge each weigh 420 pounds. It was a feat to get these up in place and join the five arches and the steel ridge girder together. The bolts used here were turned to an accurate fit on an engine lathe and are two inches in diameter. In some of the ridge connections the metal is one and one-half inches thick.

The only available means of getting material up on the roof was the hotel elevators and they could accommodate nothing over fourteen feet long, or weighing over 1,100 pounds. The rafters called for a length of nearly forty-six feet and weight about two tons! How could it be done? To put up a stiff-legged derrick and hoist the steel from the street would take too long and be too costly and to build a scaffold hoist alongside the building from sidewalk to roof, 300 feet, was out of the question. The problem was solved by moving the steel shop up on the roof and there putting all the necessary pieces together, fabricating most of it and riveting it into one rigid frame right on the spot. And so it was with the sash-bars and the giant hip rafters. The tinsmith and his shop moved to the roof and there he worked and wrought until the building was done.

BELGIAN GLASS PRODUCTION.

The inability of glass manufacturers in this country to meet the present demand has caused prices to advance so that quotations have lately been withdrawn in many cases. Should the advance in price continue, importations of Belgian glass may become a factor in the market, particularly at the favorable exchange rates.

All the window-glass plants in Belgium are now in full or partial operation and production is proceeding at the rate of 1,500,000 square meters per month, as compared with a pre-war production of 3,750,000 square meters per month. Exports have been resumed to the extent of about 10,000,000 francs per month, as against annual exports of about 50,000,000 francs before the war. The high value of current exports is partly due to the fact that wholesale prices are from five to six times the pre-war quotations.

Cost of production is not an important factor at present, because of the extremely heavy demand. While it is difficult to estimate the probable wholesale prices which will prevail after normal production is resumed, there is no doubt that they will continue to exceed greatly the pre-war quotations. At the present time labor costs have increased approximately 110 per cent since 1914; the price of coal for the ovens has risen about 500 per cent and other raw materials have advanced from 100 to 200 per cent. Most of the Belgian factories have not yet adopted blowing machinery and this under present labor conditions will make it difficult for them to compete with American plants. Blowers, who are, of course, highly skilled workmen, are now receiving 950 francs per month and the wages of gatherers and flatteners have also been largely increased.

FIGHTING FERN FOE

FLORIDA FERN CATERPILLAR.

Devotes Itself to Ferns Only.

The Florida fern caterpillar is a native of Florida and tropical America. But, alas, greenhouse conditions anywhere are sufficiently tropical to suit it to a nicety and it makes itself thoroughly at home in northern fern houses, causing great loss to the growers, as several of The Review's subscribers recently have testified. Ten or fifteen years ago it appeared in large numbers in the more northerly latitudes, notably in the District of Columbia, Ohio and Illinois. One grower, after a disastrous experience with the pest, pronounced it the fern grower's worst enemy and advised that the introduction of the insect be sedulously avoided by using extreme care in the purchase of ferns.

The fern caterpillar seems to be fastidious in this one respect, that it usually will eat nothing but ferns and it prefers the tenderest of the leaves, especially the growing tips of young fronds. The entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture say that the depredations of the insect "are apparently restricted to ferns."

Its Destructiveness.

But it is a glutton in regard to its one article of food. Nay, it is worse than a glutton, for it habitually "bites off more than it can chew." The entomologists say again: "Though not closely related to the true cutworm, it has the same habit as cutworms of cutting or severing portions of the fern plants, apparently destroying more than it requires for food." So it is true to its name; its United States headquarters are in Florida and its food is ferns.

The Latin name of the insect, according to government entomologists, is Eriopus floridensis. It is also known as Eriopus elegantulus and Callopistria floridensis, and it is frequently referred to as the southern fern-cutworm. The larva—that is, the caterpillar itself—varies in general color from apple green to velvety black, and when full-grown it is comparatively large and conspicuous, being about one and three-eighths inches long. Its parent, the moth, is about half an inch long and has a wing expanse of one and one-eighth inches.

It is stated by some growers that when a greenhouse is badly infested with this caterpillar, its presence can be detected by means of a peculiar, heavy, sweetish odor, which permeates the entire atmosphere of the house. But it is certain that so noticeable an odor would indicate that the insects were extremely numerous—so numerous as to doom the plants unless the swiftest and most effective remedies were used.

Many experiments have been tried in the effort to find a satisfactory means of combating this pest. One authority states that "the regular burning of tobacco papers, about twenty-five sheets to a house 30x100, will destroy the moths, which fly only at night." He also states that the same treatment will kill some of the smaller worms, but that the larger ones must be hand-picked.

How One Firm Conquered It.

Albert C. Oelschig, of Savannah, Ga., related some weeks ago, in The Review, how the pest was completely subdued by his firm. "For a number of years," said Mr. Oelschig, "we found it practically impossible to grow ferns, on account of the fern caterpillar, which was brought to our place, we think, on some Boston ferns obtained from Florida. But at length we discovered a real remedy. We found that we could clean up this pest by simply spraying with nicotine extract to which fish oil soap had been added. Our method is to dissolve seven or eight pounds of the fish oil soap in a barrel of water. Then, in diluting the nicotine to the proportions prescribed on the can, we use one-fourth soapy water from the barrel and three-fourths clear water. When we spray this on the plants, the soap makes the nicotine stick and it does the business. This is another case in which prevention is better than cure. Now we spray our fern houses every week or ten days, even though there are no fern caterpillars there. The spray will destroy the pests only in certain stages of their life cycle. Hence, when a greenhouse is badly infested, repeated applications are necessary to clean them out."

"The greatest enemy the fern grower has," is the way one grower characterizes the Florida fern caterpillar. "One experience will satisfy him that an ounce of prevention will save hundreds of plants if used at the right time."

Several years ago the United States Department of Agriculture, after conducting a series of investigations on the subject, issued a bulletin which contained a detailed description of the Florida fern caterpillar and suggestions about the control of the pest. The government entomologists seemed inclined to give their verdict in favor of hand-picking, but added that fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas might be effective if properly performed. The latter form of treatment, however, does not appear to have been fully tested.

The moth of this pest, says the government bulletin, belongs to a group of noctuids in which the forewings bear at the sides, above the middle, a projecting area or tooth. The hind-wings are rather broad and well rounded at the sides. The thorax and abdomen are wide, the latter especially so in the female. The color of the forewings is pale brown, marked with white scales, forming a peculiar and attractive pattern. The hind legs are dull buff, edged with dusky brown; the lower surface is paler.

Would You Recognize It?

The larva, or caterpillar, the bulletin continues, is slender, with forelegs and prolegs normal and well developed. The head is small, wider than long, greenish in life, or pale yellow in inflated specimens, with the V-mark strongly marked. While this species is extremely variable in general color, there is one characteristic mark which extends transversely across the anterior border of the thorax in a blackish line and abruptly backward under the spiracles to the second thoracic segment, and sometimes nearly to the anal segment. The thoracic plate is about twice as wide as long, and not strongly marked.

The general color varies from yellow to bright green to dark, nearly black. In the palest form the thoracic border may extend nearly to the third joint of the thorax and then cease, or reappear in short, longitudinal dashes just below each spiracle. In the forms which are a little darker these lines are more pronounced, and similar transverse dashes mark the dorsal surface of the last three abdominal segments. In the more strongly marked form, these transverse bands are of a maroon color and quite conspicuous. In most forms, and especially in the dark ones, there is a conspicuous longitudinal white line just above the stigmata or spiracles. This is almost lacking in the entirely grown forms. These two extreme color variants are so different that if observed separately they would not naturally be associated with the same insect, the last form pre-

TATE'S TIPS

BEGINNING IN BUSINESS.

Lessons in Others' Experience.

In gathering data for this column last week much material was procured which would be most helpful to those who are beginners or who anticipate starting in the retail florists' business. The facts that appear in this article are all the results of dearly bought experience. Indeed, I am convinced the best preparation anyone could have who anticipates launching out on his own account in the retail florists' business would be to act as correspondent for The Review in one of our large cities. Of course, when I say this I do not mean this would be all that is required, as actual experience is the only thing that is ever going to make a florist. What I do mean is that such a representative will hear the experiences of any number of florists, which will be most useful when it comes to conducting one's own business.

Now to begin at the beginning, the first thing to consider is just what class of trade you wish to cater to. A well defined plan along these lines is essential. There was a time, not so long ago, when the wealthy or aristocratic class was thought to be the only class that bought flowers. But today, in any of our large cities, you will find retail stores which cater to the middle class or the wage-earning class and would not exchange with their more exclusive neighbors. There is no doubt that this is a new feature of the business and one which should be encouraged and worked upon. Education in buying flowers should be carried right home to this class of trade.

Determining Location.

After determining what class of trade you are going after, of course the next step is to secure a suitable location. A good business street as near to a residential section as possible experience has proved to be the best; one's own judgment in this will be the best guide. But it will be well to study the location thoroughly before you decide, for a good location is half of the battle.

Now, assuming that you are well located, the next step is fitting up the store, and this is a most important step. Let good taste be displayed in every feature. Your business is looked upon as an artistic one; let this be displayed in your surroundings. Do not affect anything that will look cheap and gaudy; let what you may lack in store fittings be made up by your stock in trade until such time as you can get what you desire. In one starting with limited capital this will require patience and perseverance. Have nothing, however, but the best and you will find it will repay you in the end.

Securing Salespersons.

You are now ready for business and will need help. Again experience has demonstrated that the best one to handle the sales end of a retail business is a woman. The first and most natural impulse is to look around and try to get one who has been for a long time with some established firm, one who with her experience may bring some patronage to the new venture. This is a dangerous move, one that sometimes proves successful, but more often a failure.

There are three good reasons why a new venture does not want the services of such a person. The first is, such a person would demand a larger salary than a beginner could afford to pay. In the next place, if it is possible for you to entice her away from her former employer without her having good and sufficient reasons for the change, she will be no more loyal to the new business than she was to her former employer. In the last place, such a person, if she has the experience and commands the patronage, would be foolish not to start on her own account.

The better plan in securing a saleswoman is to look about and get a refined and ladylike person, even if she has not had the practical experience. You will find that most women have a natural instinct for handling flowers. Develop this and if she is taking an interest in your business, don't discourage her. Remember that while you may have had experience, she is a beginner and may make mistakes. But if you will, in a kind way, show her any mistakes, they will seldom happen twice.

At the beginning of your career install a system and see that this is carried out to the letter. At first it may seem that your business does not warrant this, but let your system grow up with the business. You are not always going to be small, and never was the old adage, "It is hard to teach an old dog new tricks," more true than in the case of a business which becomes large and tries to install a system. Have system in collecting and paying your accounts; system in buying and handling your stock; system in making deliveries; in fact, systematize everything about your establishment. You will find it just as easy to fall in with a system as it is to do business in a haphazard manner.

One of the hardest things a beginner will have to contend with is carrying a stock. Flowers are perishable and if they are not sold will be a loss, yet a new store must carry stock every day until it becomes established. Care alone can guide you in this, but in these days you are in close touch with the wholesale houses and can get what you require in a short time. Thousands have been successful and anyone who will work and persevere can do the same.

In closing let me give the experience of one of the most up-to-date florists in the city in which he lives. About thirty years ago he and his wife decided to open a store—they already had two small greenhouses. They had just $15 in cash to start on, but each had youth, health and courage to put into the business. Today it is a model. What one has accomplished another may, and conditions are better today than they were thirty years ago. Tate.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

HOW THEY GOT THERE.

I have had the pleasure of reading many interesting articles in The Review regarding the packing and shipment of cut flowers and would like to relate a little stunt that I have found successful.

Having a small shop in San Francisco, not being a member of the F. T. D. and building up a shipping business secured through a sign in the window reading "We pack and ship cut flowers to all parts of the U. S. A.," I had a customer ask me, "What condition are the flowers in when they get there?" and, to tell the truth, I didn't know.

The more I thought of this, the more I resolved to find a way to know, for if I was accepting money at this end for goods to be sent away, of all people concerned I was the one who should know.

I had printed on flowered cards the following:

> We take great care in the packing of cut flowers for shipment and, though our responsibility ceases when they leave our store, our interest in them still remains. Would you kindly inform us on the attached postal as to the condition in which these flowers were received?

This card I attached to a self-addressed postal and enclosed it in the box of flowers. I also d ted the card in the upper left-hand corner with a date stamp and kept track of all shipments. It was surprising how promptly the cards were returned and the words of gratitude written showed me that the public really does appreciate service.

Besides, I was able to tell "how they got there" and that certainly is an important matter with such perishable goods as fl wers.

I firmly believe that any florist, wholesale or retail, who sends flowers any distance, owes to himself and his customers enough interest in his wares to tell just exactly the condition in which his goods are received and this plan I have found inexpensive, to the point and good advertising. W. D. McMullen.

FLOWERS FLEW IN TEXAS, TOO.

We noticed in The Review of November 20 an item about airplane delivery of flowers at Toronto, Ont., as being the first on record.

We had the pleasure of selling several orders of cut flowers last year to customers who came forty miles in an airplane to get them. We had a store at Waco, Tex., where Camp MacArthur was situated, and we enjoyed a considerable patronage from the officers, so that occasionally our stock ran quite low. As our greenhouses were situated in another town forty miles distant, it was hard to get stock in a hurry. One day a captain of the air force suggested fetching the flowers from the greenhouse if he would have the order telephoned to the house; he got there about the time we got the call.

Then it used to happen that whenever they would have a dance at the camp one of the pilots would come down to the greenhouse for the flowers in order to get them fresh cut. It got to be a regular occurrence with us.

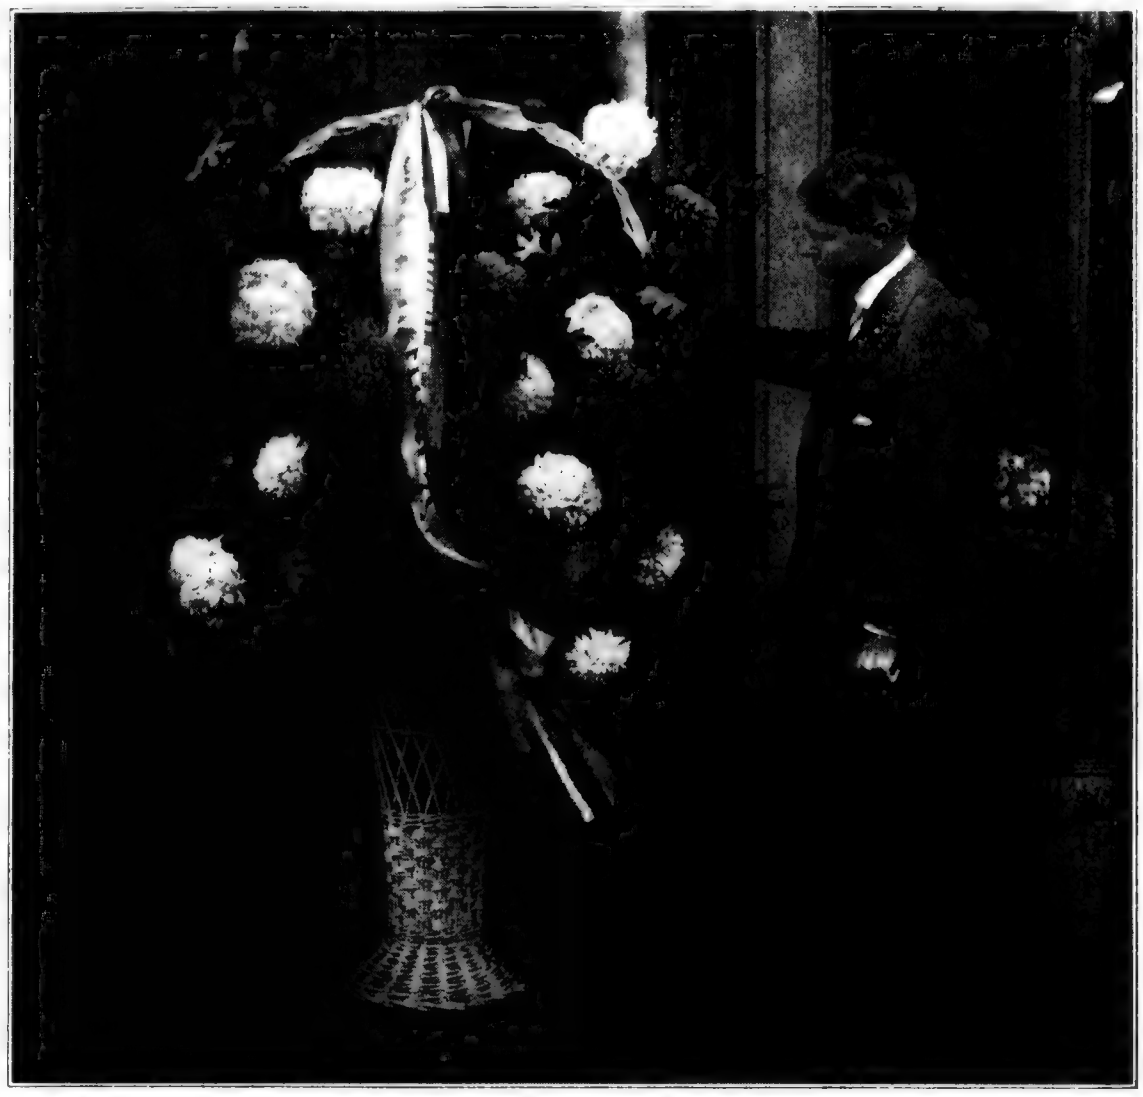
PHILADELPHIA CLUB MEETING.

At the dinner of the Philadelphia Florists' Club at the Adelphia Hotel Tuesday evening, December 2, there were about fifty persons present. It was followed by a fair-sized meeting. Charles H. Grakelow opened the evening by urging the loyal support of everyone for the publicity campaign here. A. L. Miller, of New York, president-elect of the S. A. F., spoke on the results to be accomplished by getting together. Frank H. Traendly and Eugene Daille-douze, of New York, also spoke. The meeting closed with a discussion of the use of oil for fuel.

From Buffalo the W. F. Kasting Co. sent an exhibit of Hamburg Late Pink chrysanthemums. Henry I. Faust, of Merion, Pa., exhibited cyclamens, poinsettias and ferns. William K. Harris had a display of foliage plants and Edward Towill showed a seedling rose. Phil.



ADVERTISING AT LOW COST.

In the celebration of "Say It with Flowers" week in Washington, D. C., the father of this movement, Z. D. Blackistone, gave further proof of the fertility of his brain by his methods of securing advertising in behalf of the florists' week at cost so out of proportion to the gain that it was insignificant. The two illustrations on this page show two ideas of Mr. Blackistone. One is the basket of chrysanthemums which Mr. Blackistone describes as the "first big gun of 'Say It with Flowers' week." It was presented at a mass meeting of 10,000 Red Cross workers at Liberty Hut at the opening of the week and linked up the florists' campaign with these workers' activities. The presentation speech was ably made by Wm. F. Gude, who was followed on the program by General Pershing. The value of this basket of chrysanthemums to the florists' week campaign was many times its actual cost.

In the other illustration is shown Z. D. Blackistone's store as it appeared during "Say It with Flowers" week. Mr. Blackistone said the exterior decoration was done at a cost of $25 and lasted two weeks. He further states that it was one of the best pieces of advertising he has made. In the windows were exhibited displays, staged by G. N. Prokos, for a Tom Thumb wedding, which constantly drew crowds of witnesses.

On Thanksgiving day Mr. Blackistone contributed still another advertising idea to the local florists' cause, that of sending flowers to the sick children in various hospitals of Washington by the Boy Scouts.

The publicity gained by such ideas as these is extensive, whereas the cost is small, extremely small if one compares it with the returns.

RUST ON SNAPDRAGON PLANTS.

Is there any known remedy or preventive for rust on snapdragon plants? At present our plants are free from rust, but last year most of our stock was lost because of it. P. F. C.—Pa.

The best and perhaps the only way to keep snapdragon plants free from rust is the use of clean cultural methods. Grow the plants well in a clean, light, well-kept house, giving plenty of ventilation on every favorable occasion. Avoid as much as possible any tendency toward a close, stuffy atmosphere. Do not syringe the plants and, when watering, water at the roots only. Pay particular attention to keeping the insects in check by vaporizing with the nicotine extract regularly about once every two weeks, since the green fly is especially troublesome on snapdragon plants. As the plants are now free from rust, there ought not to be any trouble from it this season if reasonably clean culture is given them. M. P.

PERSONAL GLIMPSES

MERCHANT PRINCES.

Max Schling.

The career of the self-made man is always intensely interesting. The humble beginning, the privations, the lean years of close and constant application, followed by a goodly measure of well merited success, lend hope and inspiration to them whose course is just begun. No other experience is so capable of developing the finer qualities of character or nourishing the nobler attributes of the human heart. Without this broadening influence it is practically impossible to become a master in the walks of men.

In this crucible was formed the life of the nationally known Fifth avenue florist, Max Schling. Success came to the temperamental Max simply because it could not elude him; he had chosen the right calling and hard work with intelligent direction did the rest. His originality and fertility in evolving new ideas give him distinction. He loves his calling and derives his greatest pleasure from pleasing his countless patrons. He is an indefatigable worker and expects his assistants to perform nothing that he is unwilling to do himself. The phenomenal growth of his business is the logical result of the well coördinated efforts of an able man. The memory of the distinctive personal qualities and kindly hospitality of Max Schling lives long after other features of a visit to the financial capital of the world are forgotten.

H. H. Battles.

Those present at the F. T. D. meeting in Buffalo last October will long remember the tribute paid to this prominent Philadelphia florist by the eloquent Charles H. Grakelow. We know not whether H. H. Battles has heard of the justly good things said of him at this gathering by his gifted fellow townsman, but we do know that the tradesmen assembled were given a true and splendid impression of the man.

Somehow or other, we must admire the man who gives himself exclusively to the exactions of his business. The world is full of men who—often to the detriment of their interests—give liberally of their time and attention to other affairs, but the man who has built his business upon the ideal of service and by untiring personal effort has advanced it to a state where he does not wish for more, is a distinguished exception and well worthy our regard. Trade organization is indeed a great productive force for good, but its burdens must be borne by men to whom the work is congenial. All should contribute of their substance, of course, which is generously done by H. H. Battles. The striking success of this man in the retailing of flowers furnishes a splendid example of what may be accomplished by a strict and undivided attention to business.

S. A. Anderson.

The attention of the entire trade has been directed to Buffalo by the marked enthusiasm of its florists upon the subject of publicity. A superb degree of coöperation exists there at present; broad plans for the increase of business by advertising are formulated and funds in support thereof are being subscribed with a liberality truly admirable. That the florists of the Queen City and its environs firmly believe in the merits of greater publicity for their product is amply borne out by the generous amount of the proposed annual fund.

One of the reasons for this activity is that Buffalo is the home of S. A. Anderson, who is justly reputed to be an exceedingly live wire. A successful business man is he, having the vision to see even better times ahead for his profession, a man of action and of the constructive type rare among florists. That every institution is the lengthened shadow of a man is proved by a visit to his places of business, which are models of neatness and efficiency.

Out of the 100,000,000 people in Uncle Sam's dominions only comparatively few are accustomed to the refining influence of flowers. Education is needed and this can be supplied alone by publicity. It is the means of tapping the vast reservoir of public sentiment, that augmented streams of gold may flow into the waiting coffers of the florists. Buffalo florists reason in this manner. There, as in every other community, successful men, well worthy of emulation, point the way and the interest of the humblest member of the trade dictates that he join the movement to the extent of his ability. Here's to the live wires—the men capable of generating the vivifying current and transmitting it to their fellow-craftsmen.

F. T. D. Window in Store Conducted by College Men in a College Town.

PIGSKIN AIDS COLLEGE SHOP.

Opening their shop in a college town in time for the football season this fall, the three college men who compose the BluMaize Blossom Shop, at Ann Arbor, Mich., have had a most auspicious beginning. After the names of the three men on the firm's letterhead appears the alma mater of each: Alex. Lurie—Cornell; W. S. Wells—Miami; H. W. Hawkins—Michigan. Alex. Lurie is well known to the trade. While at the University of Maine he organized the Maine Florists' Society. He was trustee of the St. Louis Florists' Club while he was superintendent of the Missouri Botanical Garden in that city. W. S. Wells was also at one time with the Missouri Botanical Garden and was instrumental in organizing the Missouri State Florists' Association in 1916, acting as its first vice-president and later as its secretary. He resigned his position as superintendent of the medicinal garden of the University of Michigan to open the flower store.

For the close of the football season the BluMaize Blossom Shop made thorough preparations for the big crowd's demand and used the opportunity to stage an F. T. D. window display, which is shown in the accompanying illustration. The annual football game between the University of Michigan and the University of Minnesota drew thousands of visitors to Ann Arbor. The apparently inexhaustible supply of yellow mums, chiefly Bonnaffon and yellow pompons, was disposed of so rapidly that many of the late-comers were forced to do without flowers, much to their disgust. Pompon corsage bouquets were snatched up as fast as they were made and many people were turned away either from lack of material or the time to make the bouquets. The day was perfect and all the florists enjoyed a splendid business. The BluMaize Blossom Shop got a large share by its clever and extensive local advertising. Its F. T. D. business is constantly growing.

BUYERS PASSING BY.

The sign shown in the accompanying illustration is located on the Cumberland range of the Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; this firm reports that the sign was inspired by a suggestion of August Poehlmann's in a recent number of The Review. It faces the national highway from Baltimore, Md., to St. Louis, Mo., and may be seen from the Interurban and Pennsylvania railroads.

In Automobile Time 200 Machines an Hour Pass This Sign on the National Highway.

On this highway the automobile traffic in season, states Bertermann Bros. Co., ranges up to 200 machines per hour.

The scene is here set for the growth of any amount of publicity. If we suppose averages of four passengers per machine and only 180 machines per hour for ten hours per day and 150 days in the year, then for that minor portion of the year 1,080,000 people read "Say It with Flowers" in conjunction with the firm's name and address. Add to that the result of the diminished traffic in the rest of the year and the much larger figures for the passengers on the two railroads and the annual total would be well over 3,000,000. Many of these readers and potential buyers are residents of that region, going to or from Indianapolis; they would patronize the local store. Others are travelers from a distance; they might easily become F. T. D. patrons.

FAIR BOOTH BRINGS TRADE.

One of the most successful of the booths at the farm, home and school festival at Mankato, Kan., last month was that of the Kramer Greenhouse. These booths were sold to various business firms for the display of their goods or products. That of the Kramer Greenhouse seemed to be a point of interest and many words of commendation were heard. The people evidenced a great desire to learn more of flowers and plants, and occasion was taken to remind them of birthdays and wedding anniversaries of friends and other times when the sending of flowers was appropriate.

In regard to the display, L. H. Cawthorn, manager of the Kramer Greenhouse, says: "Ours was the first florists' booth ever displayed at this festival or fair along with other lines of business. I think this idea a good one, inasmuch as it shows that the florists' business is one with which the public is beginning to deal as with other lines of business. Doubtless I can make the idea plainer by saying that wherever there is a trades' or merchandise or products display of a general nature, such as the fairs offer, there the florist must be with his display and his talk of flowers. In this way the public can be taught that the flower business is one they can patronize every day the same as any other business.

"I have no quarrel, mind you, with the so-called mum shows, horticultural shows and the various flower society meetings and exhibitions; they are excellent and should be supported by all means, as occasionally the florist or grower should occupy the entire stage. But they do to some extent exclude a certain part of the public and give an erroneous idea that cut flowers and plants are expensive and a luxury to be indulged in only on widely separated occasions. Mixing and showing with other lines of business will have a tendency to do away with this shyness of a part of the public toward the florists' business."

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Stimulated by the brisk demand for chrysanthemums during the Thanksgiving holiday, business last week was unusually good. The supply of mums of all sizes and grades was so plentiful that the shortage on roses was not generally noticeable and most of the dealers came through with satisfactory clean-ups. There were a large number of small weddings that called for a big lot of flowers, while family gatherings created an active call. Medium and small individual mums found the most demand, while sprays and clusters were quickly moved. Reports already received indicate that Thanksgiving business this year exceeded that of any previous year. One noticeable condition that has been becoming steadily more and more apparent is the custom of wearing orchids. The demand for them at the downtown stores is said to have more than doubled this fall.

Horticultural Society Meets.

A largely attended open meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society was held Tuesday evening, November 25, in Music hall, a lecture on "The Strawberry" being the principal feature. The lecture was given by Louis Graton, of Whitman, Mass., who told the history of the strawberry, described methods of growing it and discussed the best varieties. Following the lecture a question box was conducted by Mr. Graton.

BUD-ROT OF CARNATIONS.

Some of my carnation buds, when beginning to show color, rot in the center. Can you tell me what is the cause of this? The trouble has appeared among the Matchless, Enchantress and White Enchantress and is confined to stock that was shipped in. There has been a great deal of cloudy weather during the last six weeks and the plants are not growing as they should. I am syringing them on bright days about twice a week. Is that often enough?

H. L. U.—Kan.

Your carnations are troubled with what is known as bud-rot. This is due to a tiny insect, which causes the petals to stick and rot during periods of slow development. Toward spring, when the buds develop faster, this pest will not give much trouble. Cut off and burn all buds which are in this condition. Then spray or fumigate regularly with one of the nicotine preparations. Make semi-weekly applications until the trouble disappears, after which one application each week will suffice. Frequent syringing would aggravate the trouble; therefore, if there are no signs of red spider, I would dispense with syringing for a time or at least reduce it to once a week and be sure to select a bright day. A little sulphur on one of your steam pipes will help to dry up the moisture in the evening.

A. F. J. B.

BUDS INJURED BY FROST.

Under separate cover we are mailing you a sample of our carnations, which are badly affected with some disease. We should like to know whether there is any remedy for it. We rebuilt two houses in the fall, but failed to get the glass in before a hard frost came. Both the houses were open and the plants exposed, with the temperature down to 10 or 12 degrees below freezing point for two nights, so that the plants on the entire seven benches were injured more or less. Our cut for October and November was not more than ten to twelve per cent of that of previous years. On the mornings after the frost we sprayed the plants thoroughly with cold water before sunrise, to take the frost out. We had fire in the boiler during the night, but this did little good, owing to the absence of the glass.

B. F. & S. C.—Ore.

There is nothing you can do to resuscitate these blooms, which have been severely frosted in the bud. Their condition seems to be entirely due to the freezing. I would suggest that you cut away all the stems on which the buds had reached any size at the time of the frost. Those which were quite small might develop into good blooms. If the plants were in vigorous condition at that time, it will not require a great while for them to come into crop again. Do not go to extremes in applying fertilizers or heat for the purpose of hurrying them along. Rather the reverse treatment would be preferable. A thorough application of Bordeaux mixture might prevent an attack of leaf-spot, which might result from the ordeal the plants have passed through. The Bordeaux would do no harm in any event.

A. F. J. B.

PLANTS MADE POOR START.

I am enclosing some foliage from carnations which I purchased from a well known firm. They have been planted about two months, but I am unable to do much with them. It seems that a person should have some redress or grounds for damage against firms that send out this kind of stock. In the same bench I have plants that were grown by myself and some that I bought from other firms, and all of these are doing well; the disease does not seem to spread to them. Can you tell me what the trouble is and how to remedy it?

C. A. R. & S.—O.

Your carnation plants do not seem to be suffering particularly from any disease. The plants seem to have failed to take hold for some reason, after being benched. It is not at all strange that plants of your own growing should have started off well, whereas these shipped plants failed to take hold. That merely proves that there is nothing seriously wrong with your soil and that probably the trouble is due to the shipping. Perhaps the plants were dug during an extremely dry spell, or they may have heated in the boxes. Possibly they did not get the extra care required by plants that are shipped. I would hesitate to condemn the shipper, unless you noticed that they were not right when you received them. His control over them and his responsibility cease when he delivers them in good condition to the transportation company. There is little you can do with plants in this condition. They will give you practically no returns during the winter months and you could probably get much more out of the space by replanting with some other crop. Snapdragons, benched now, will give you a fine crop in early spring and until midsummer.

A. F. J. B.

TEMPERATURE FOR CARNATIONS.

How warm should one keep his greenhouse in order to grow good carnations? What is the usual temperature? What is the reason that the shoots on my carnation plants do not break, or only with difficulty?

C. T.—Ont.

Carnation houses are usually kept at a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees at night, with a rise of 6 degrees on cloudy days and 15 to 20 degrees on bright, sunny days. You are not quite explicit in the other part of your inquiry. If the young leaves curl and unfold with difficulty, this condition is probably due to excessive nitrogen in the soil. Until the plants get to growing freely, the trouble will probably continue. It is not serious and will disappear in time if you will follow a moderate course in your culture. Give abundant ventilation when weather conditions permit. Water carefully and apply no fertilizers for a time.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Old Boreas swept down the Mohawk valley Thanksgiving eve, playing havoc with transportation and consequently causing loss and disappointment to both shipper and receiver. The trolley system was practically put out of business and flowers transferred to automobile trucks suffered. It remains to be seen who will pay the bill. There is evidence that the retailer delays to the last moment in placing definite orders with the wholesaler, who in his turn does his level best to accommodate and therefore feels that the risk really does not rest with him. In no other line of business is the necessity for coöperation and reciprocity so evident.

• • • •

• • • •

The Rosendale Flower Shop, Schenectady, N. Y., had the finest stock and received prices in proportion; there was little left over and that will soon be used up. Henry Eberhardt, the proprietor, is sick and his wife and Walter Dunning, the manager, were rushed to the limit.

Julius Eger, Schenectady, N. Y., is already anticipating the Christmas season by a show of immortelles, following what was almost a clean-up at Thanksgiving.

• • • •

The Mohawk Greenhouse Co., Schenectady, N. Y., which furnishes plants and flowers for the Barney department store, made a special run and is now getting in shape for the Christmas business, which is expected to exceed previous experience.

• • • •

Manager Grupe, of the floral department of the Carl Co., Schenectady, N. Y., says that he is having better business as the result of larger publicity; the only trouble is the scarcity of good stock, as prices have seemed to cut less figure than formerly.

• • • •

The Albany trade were equally satisfied with the returns from Thanksgiving. One of them, W. C. Gloeckner, observed that he had never had finer stock at his greenhouses and only wished that the production was trebled.

• • • •

H. G. Eyres, Albany, N. Y., in a complacent mood predicts a banner season, basing his judgment on the business up to date.

• • • •

F. A. Danker, Albany, N. Y., sent in a fine lot of stock from the greenhouses. The store carried a line of combination baskets of fruit and flowers that found ready sale. The condition of the store was described by a local paper as "a blaze of glorious riot of color."

• • • •

Manager Tracey, of the Albany Bulb Flower Exchange, reports a good run on choice stock. Owing to the sharp weather, extra care was essential for safe delivery.

• • • •

W. W. Hannell, of Watervliet, N. Y., cut Wm. Turner and Chadwick mums that averaged 50 cents each at wholesale and were welcome locally.

• • • •

Sambrook Bros., of Troy, N. Y., note that choice stock sold far ahead of anything else, which proves that quality and not quantity is the desideratum.

• • • •

J. G. Barrett, of Troy, N. Y., observed that extra help is exceedingly difficult to get at this time.

• • • •

A. D. Carpenter, of Cohoes, N. Y., gave the usual chrysanthemum show preceding Thanksgiving and had one of the best periods in the history of this time-honored business. The venerable founder is still able to share in the congenial work. W. M.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Business continues to be brisk. Production has been retarded somewhat by lack of sunshine, but demand, too, has been hindered by the disagreeable weather. If we should have a week of ideal weather, a hunt for stock would still be in order.

The general report for Thanksgiving is that a satisfactory amount of trade was done by all. While the chrysanthemum supply appeared short at first, it proved to be ample for everybody. The plant trade was good, perhaps better than ever before, and about the only thing short of the demand was roses. The rose supply at this time is off.

Various Notes.

F. J. Baum has the best batch of azaleas in the city.

C. T. Guenther's chrysanthemum, Hamburg Late White, is a wonderful success for Thanksgiving and later flowering.

The coal shortage will not menace local growers, since most of them are well stocked. F. P. A.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Practically all of the florists report an excellent Thanksgiving business, many of them cleaning out their stock entirely. Prices were high, but people paid them. Chrysanthemums cost $8 and $9 a dozen wholesale and retailed at $1 per bloom. Roses and carnations were scarce and high-priced; they are off crop now, due, it is reported, to the fact that the early part of the season was so warm that the buds developed earlier than usual. As a rule, as soon as mums begin to disappear there is a good crop of carnations and roses to take their place. Some rose growers who are cutting but little now report that they will have other varieties arriving in time for the Christmas trade and will have more still later in the winter. A larger supply of carnations is expected later in the season also.

Various Notes.

Charles E. Maillard, 516 Orange street, reports a fine Thanksgiving business, notwithstanding the high prices. He states that business has been good all the fall, though there has been no rush at any time.

Charles Trauth, Orange street, reports that the Thanksgiving trade cleaned out his stock entirely. Business since Thanksgiving has been better than he expected, as usually there is a little dull spell following a big holiday trade.

Harry I. Stein, proprietor of the Public Service Terminal flower store, sees some danger in the present high prices of flowers. With such high prices many people who at other times are steady customers purchase flowers only on special occasions. Under such conditions it is harder to plan purchases. It is also harder to use up stock that is a little past its prime. A steady trade at somewhat lower prices is a healthier business condition, he thinks. R. B. M.

MRS. RUTH DAY.

BREAKING precedents last July, the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen chose as its president a woman—one might say a girl, since she is but 24—Mrs. Ruth Day, manager of Overman's Nursery, Spokane, Wash. The selection seems less unusual when one considers her ancestry and experience. Her mother's uncles, Nathan and Cyrus Overman, founded the Mound Nursery, in Canton, Ill., over fifty years ago and Cyrus Overman was president of the Illinois State Horticultural Society. Her uncle, Leigh Overman, had been in the nursery business for twenty odd years when she and her mother moved to Spokane from Pasadena, Cal., where she had been born March 13, 1895. She at once went to work in her uncle's office. Although not yet 17, she soon became his first assistant and after his death, four years ago, she took over the business, retaining the old firm name. She married Mr. Day four years ago and for the last two years he has been her copartner in the business. There are three "little Days," aged 3, 2 and 1 years.

MIDGE ON MUMS.

We are sending you some mum cuttings. Please tell us what is the trouble with them and what is the remedy for the trouble. Will they do for cuttings for next year? M. & B.—N. C.

The chrysanthemum cuttings are so badly infested with midge that the best thing that I can suggest is to destroy the plants and purchase clean stock from some reliable grower. These are harsh measures to advise, but to propagate cuttings from this stock will mean more trouble next season and greater loss. M. P.

AGAIN MIDGE CN MUMS.

We are sending you the stem of one of our chrysanthemums, which are affected with some disease that we have had no experience with heretofore. We grew them on ground benches this year, contrary to our usual custom. Will you please inform us what the trouble is and whether it will be advisable to use any of the stock. K. M. J.—Wis.

The chrysanthemums are badly affected by midge, which when once it gets into the stock is difficult to exterminate. I would advise destroying this stock and making a fresh and clean start by purchasing plants from some reliable grower and isolating them from the chrysanthemum plants you now have on the place, giving them a clean house and fresh soil. Do not treat them to any forced conditions. M. P.

PINK MUMS.

Please tell me the name of the true pink mum that is on the market and that blooms about the same time as Chieftain or Turner. O. R.—Ia.

I am unable to say just what variety is referred to. There is a lovely pink mum which is being sold in the stores today and which is simply Wm. Turner, the white variety, dyed pink. This is done by dissolving a package of pink dye, made for flowers only, in water and allowing the bloom to stand in it ten or twelve hours and take up the water through the stem. In this way the pink dye runs up into the flower and a beautiful, clear pink bloom is the result. In fact, in many places they were selling it as the "new Pink Turner." This may be what you refer to.

This year there is a fine pink sport of Wm. Turner, which will be distributed in the spring of 1920. This variety would come into bloom at the same time as Wm. Turner and is known as Mrs. J. Leslie Davis. Other good commercial pinks that bloom at the same time are Nerissa and Elberon, both of which are excellent, and if you have not grown them you should investigate them.

SOLANUMS DO NOT FRUIT.

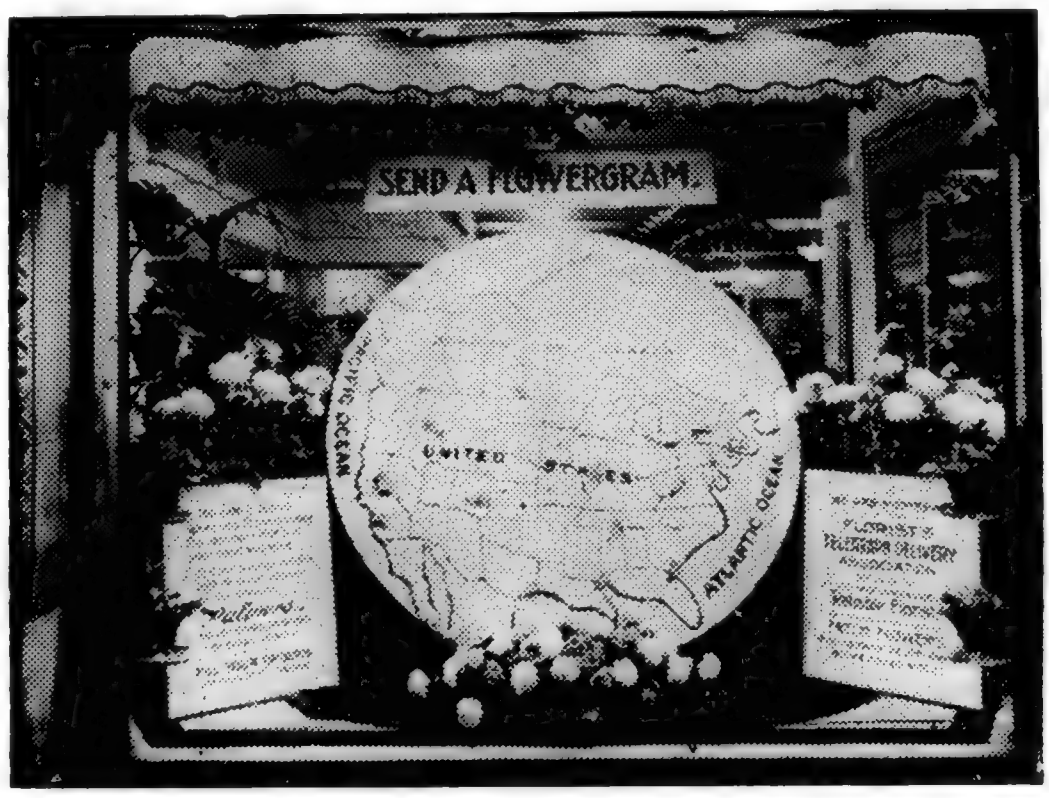
I grew 1,000 Cleveland cherries from seed sown in February and shifted them to 4-inch pots later. The plants grew nicely, but did not have many berries. They have been in the house for some time and the blooms that have come have dropped off. I have been told that the plants should have been set out in the field first and potted after having the berries. Kindly advise me in this regard. W. C. H.—Pa.

All the solanums, or Jerusalem cherries, as they are more popularly called, will grow and fruit much better if planted out during the summer and then lifted and potted about the middle of September. Any flowers which might set on your plants at this late date would be of little value. I have tried pot-grown solanums, but have obtained so much better results when they are grown outdoors from May 15 to September 15 that I have entirely restricted myself to field-grown plants for some years. Give the plants a soil not too rich, or they will become of unwieldy size. My outdoor stock always has berried heavily and a little shade and spraying after lifting prevents any serious wilting. I would certainly counsel you not to grow in pots through the summer another year. C. W.

WESTERN UNION USES WINDOW.

The Ellicott Square office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., in Buffalo, has been taken for a florist's shop of late, on account of the display staged in its window. Thousands of passers-by, it is said, have stopped to watch the big circular bas-relief map of the United States and Canada slowly revolve, sending along wires strung between cities thereon tiny yellow cardboards labeled telegrams.

This map was the invention of Mark Palmer, of W. J. Palmer & Son, which won the second prize in the window display contest of the F. T. D. at the time of its convention last October. The local manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co., who sought permission from W. T. Palmer & Son for the use of the display, is enthusiastic about its educational value and says, "This is, without a doubt, the most novel idea to show the speed of telegraphy that has come to my notice."



DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade lacked the spirit and snap of a year ago and, though a few of the trade reported good business, on the whole it was disappointing, especially with the retailers. The wholesalers fared somewhat better. There were plenty of flowers. Chrysanthemums and pompons were in big supply and of good quality, with enough roses for the demand, while carnations, sweet peas and Paper Whites were to be had. Potted plants were slow sellers. The average for the month was satisfactory and showed a good volume of business.

Mansfield, O.—This is proving an exceptionally good season for Stuhldreher Bros. At the greenhouses at Cline street and Lexington avenue, where George H. and Leo D. Stuhldreher are busy, stock is coming along nicely, but not fast enough to meet all the needs of the store at 32 West Fourth street, where Clarence H. Stuhldreher is manager.

Akron, O.—A 3-story building with a conservatory is being erected at 283 South Main street, for Grossberg & Cahill, who are soon to open an up-to-date retail flower store, the opportunities for another florist being thought better here than in any other manufacturing city in the United States. A contract has been made with the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, for a 14-foot display refrigerator and a complete outfit of fixtures and furniture.

Booneville, Ind.—Lutz & McConnell have moved from their temporary quarters, at 117 East Main street, to their recently completed houses adjoining Maple Grove cemetery. Give the plants a soil not too rich, or they will become of unwieldy size. My outdoor stock always has berried heavily and a little shade and spraying after lifting prevents any serious wilting. I would certainly counsel you not to grow in pots through the summer another year. C. W.

WESTERN UNION USES WINDOW.

The Ellicott Square office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., in Buffalo, has been taken for a florist's shop of late, on account of the display staged in its window. Thousands of passers-by, it is said, have stopped to watch the big circular bas-relief map of the United States and Canada slowly revolve, sending along wires strung between cities thereon tiny yellow cardboards labeled telegrams.

This map was the invention of Mark Palmer, of W. J. Palmer & Son, which won the second prize in the window display contest of the F. T. D. at the time of its convention last October. The local manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co., who sought permission from W. T. Palmer & Son for the use of the display, is enthusiastic about its educational value and says, "This is, without a doubt, the most novel idea to show the speed of telegraphy that has come to my notice."

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade lacked the spirit and snap of a year ago and, though a few of the trade reported good business, on the whole it was disappointing, especially with the retailers. The wholesalers fared somewhat better. There were plenty of flowers. Chrysanthemums and pompons were in big supply and of good quality, with enough roses for the demand, while carnations, sweet peas and Paper Whites were to be had. Potted plants were slow sellers. The average for the month was satisfactory and showed a good volume of business.

Lovell, Wyo.—Mrs. John A. Green has postponed the construction of a greenhouse for a few months in order to patronize a local glass factory, which is being erected.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

Mankato, Minn.—The Windmiller Co., one of the progressive concerns of the northwest, now runs a chain of five stores and is doing a big business.

West Webster, N. Y.—Henry E. Wood has just started with two greenhouses to grow flowers for the Rochester market, also vegetables and plants in season.

Anderson, Ind.—William Klus recently suffered a loss estimated at $3,500 when the heating system in his greenhouse failed to work and thousands of mums were frozen.

Williamsport, Pa. — The Collins-Rhoades Co. has been organized by H. C. Collins and R. D. Rhoades and has taken over the greenhouses formerly run by the Williamsport Floral Co.

Helena, Mont.—During the "Say It with Flowers" week in this city November 3 to 8, the feature flower was the chrysanthemum, particularly at the store of the State Nursery & Seed Co.

Massillon, O.—J. F. Myers, proprietor of Springbrook Farm, is erecting three houses, 36x200 feet, with which he plans to add the growing of greenhouse products to his raising of cattle and hogs.

Lincoln, Neb.—Frey & Frey report that business has been excellent from the start of the season, with prospects for a big Christmas, as all growers here have fine lots of plants and promise for good cuts of roses and carnations.

Blackwell, Okla.—The Hart Floral Co. recently had a disastrous fire, which destroyed the office and most of the business records, the workroom and part of a greenhouse, together with about half the stock. Reconstruction is under way.

Minneapolis, Minn. — The Lakewood Cemetery Association has awarded the contract to the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, for erection next spring of four houses. One is to be steel-frame, 56x320; two pipe-frame, 36 x 150, and one pipe-frame, 29 x 100.

Alexandria, Va.—The Dunbarr Floral Co. has opened a new store on King street, where Mrs. Thomas M. Dunbarr will be in charge. The Braddock road range, under the supervision of Mr. Dunbarr, has been improved by the installation of two new pressure boilers and by the tearing down of two small houses to make room for one house of modern construction.

Sioux City, Ia.—The Growers' and Retailers' Association, of which A. Albert, superintendent of the J. C. Rennison Co., is president, will hold its next meeting December 15. This association was formed October 20 of this year at the establishment of the J. C. Rennison Co. to bring about better growing conditions and closer coöperation within the trade.

Paris, Tenn.—Mrs. S. J. Routon has purchased a Moninger greenhouse, 21x100 feet.

Anderson, Ind.—J. S. Stuart & Son gave their thirty-first annual flower show November 13 to 15. The plants and mums exhibited were excellent. The weather was favorable and the attendance large. Both visitors and hosts were well pleased with the show.

Darby, Pa.—The dwelling, store and greenhouses of Mrs. J. Carroll, Eleventh street and Cedar avenue, were destroyed by fire November 19. The store was on the first floor of the 2-story brick dwelling, to which were attached the two greenhouses; in one of these the fire is believed to have started.

Madison, N. J.—John F. Piper, foreman for the C. H. Totty Co., sailed for England on the Mauretania November 29. He expects to visit W. Wells & Co., H. J. Jones, of Lewisham, J. Cheal & Sons, the Royal Horticultural Gardens, where he gained the society's diploma, and other large firms where he served his apprenticeship.

Mansfield, O.—This is proving an exceptionally good season for Stuhldreher Bros. At the greenhouses at Cline street and Lexington avenue, where George H. and Leo D. Stuhldreher are busy, stock is coming along nicely, but not fast enough to meet all the needs of the store at 32 West Fourth street, where Clarence H. Stuhldreher is manager.

Akron, O.—A 3-story building with a conservatory is being erected at 283 South Main street, for Grossberg & Cahill, who are soon to open an up-to-date retail flower store, the opportunities for another florist being thought better here than in any other manufacturing city in the United States. A contract has been made with the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, for a 14-foot display refrigerator and a complete outfit of fixtures and furniture.

Hutchinson, Kan.—J. Ralph Souder has sold his retail business to Harry L. Smith, who conducts Smith's Flower Shop. He will continue the stand formerly operated by Mr. Souder in the Rorabaugh-Wiley building. Mr. Souder will confine himself entirely to growing flowers, most of his output being used by Mr. Smith. A joint advertisement of more than two-thirds of a page announced the change of ownership in the Hutchinson News November 11.

Charleston, S. C.—T. T. Bolger has recently been featuring in his store an attractive display of large chrysanthemums, brought there from the flower show at Philadelphia.

Vancouver, B. C.—E. H. Peace is erecting a range about four miles from this city for growing flowers for the wholesale trade only. The range will be ready about January 1, 1920.

Tyrone, Pa.—Glenn Meloy has opened a store near the Pennsylvania railroad station. On the day of his opening, Saturday, November 8, he gave away 1,000 roses to the ladies who visited the store.

Marion, Ill.—Mrs. Minnie Lilley Copeland, proprietor of the Marion Greenhouses, has added to her range a greenhouse 21x100, built by Lawrence Clary, who with his mother, Mrs. E. J. Clary, owns the Clary greenhouses in Coshocton, O.

Lakeland, Fla.—E. R. Giddings, formerly owner of the Tulsa Greenhouses, Tulsa, Okla., has moved to this town, where he is starting business under the name of the Westmoreland Greenhouses. J. W. Scharfenberg is manager and Nettie C. Giddings is store manager and designer.

Grinnell, Ia.—The Kemble Floral Co., which has a chain of stores and greenhouses in various Iowa towns, has been making extensive improvements in the Hazelwood Greenhouse. Paul Kinsman, who is in charge of the Hazelwood Greenhouse, was with the Kemble Floral Co., in Oskaloosa, Ia., for ten years and his three assistants are all experienced workers in the trade.

Booneville, Ind.—Lutz & McConnell have moved from their temporary quarters, at 117 East Main street, to their recently completed houses adjoining Maple Grove cemetery. There they have 7,000 feet of glass, which will be devoted to the culture of lettuce, sweet peas and pot plants. The installation has just been completed of a Lalley lighting system and a Gould pressure pumping system. Lutz & McConnell have added nursery stock and landscape planting to their business.

Marquette, Mich.—E. R. Tauch held the opening last week of the new greenhouse and sales and office building recently completed. The range now comprises 16,000 feet of glass. The salesroom has two large display windows, forty feet long, in one of which is a fish pond. An electric aeroplane fan circles in the store. A new hot water heating plant has also been installed. In the front of the building, worked into the concrete, is the title Tauch Greenhouses and also the slogan, "Say It with Flowers."

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

POT plants for Christmas are snapped up when and where available.

PROPHETIC vision is not needed to see large profits in the coming holidays.

ONE of the necessary qualifications of a florists' helper now is ability to drive a ford.

PRODUCTION costs prohibit liberal margins and careful management is needed to return an adequate percentage of profits.

COLLECTIONS are not so hard as they have been in some other seasons, but they will bear systematized watching just the same.

LACK of fuel and the customary holiday pressure will reduce train service after mid-December. Supplies for the holidays should be obtained now.

NOVELTIES are slow in appearing after war-time. Perhaps two or three years will be required for resumption of raising new varieties on the former scale.

C. L. Washburn says that the trade as a body has learned the power of advertising just as it becomes necessary to redouble our efforts to sell our merchandise. We predict that the volume of florists' advertising will increase for many years.

THE October number of the S. A. F. Journal has been delayed by the printers' strike in New York city. The issue, which has now been sent to members, contains the third installment of the Detroit convention proceedings and publicity campaign articles.

IT is asked by those responsible for the advertisement of the song, "Say It with Flowers," which appeared in The Review for November 27, that it be stated that the name of the publisher should have been Artmusic, Inc., instead of Broadway Music Corp., as the ad writer made it.

MOST florists have their Christmas boxes now in stock, but will be compelled to replenish the supply right after the rush. They may find difficulty in getting what they want and are almost certain to find prices higher, because one of the first effects of the coal strike has been to close the boxboard mills. Manufacturers of boxes, of course, have more or less stock on hand.

HOLIDAY HAS BUMPER SALES.

Thanksgiving business is generally reported to have surpassed previous records for the holiday. Here and there florists state that sales were not up to expectations, but from others come glowing assertions, such as that Thanksgiving sales exceeded those of previous years by fifty per cent, that they rivaled Christmas and Easter records for other seasons, that the limit of business was imposed by the supply of stock rather than the ability to sell it. As The Review predicted, the people of the United States, in celebrating a prosperous Thanksgiving, spent more liberally than before for flowers.

To the forehanded florist there is a tip in these reports, for they augur what is in store for Christmas and New year's. "If I had anticipated such business," says a florist, "I could have been prepared and made more money." Post-mortems are not profitable in the business world unless they supply a lesson to be heeded in future. The moral of the Thanksgiving sales is that florists should form preparations fully adequate for the coming holidays. Buying in luxury lines is heavy; Christmas will be extravagantly celebrated this year; flowers will be in strong demand.

GET YOUR SUPPLIES.

Paradoxical as it may sound, the coal shortage may affect retailers more seriously than the growers. The latter, as a whole, have adequate stocks of coal to insure continued production of flowers despite the miners' absence from the pits. The former, however, face prospects of further rising of already high prices on supplies and even the possibility of curtailment altogether.

Manufacturers of the supplies the retail florist needs to carry on business are not held "essential to the urgent needs of the people" when the fuel administration doles out coal. Makers of box board used for florists' paper boxes have closed down, and increased prices on these are predicted as the supply on hand diminishes.

Other manufacturing lines may be compelled to cease operation also as conditions become more serious. The critical state of each industry varies with location. Some states are taking urgent measures regarding coal restrictions now. The retailer will do well, therefore, to inquire as to the continued availability of his various lines of supply.

COAL RESTRICTIONS TIGHTER.

Closer application of the revived war-time rules regulating the distribution of coal to industries followed the secession of the miners' representatives from the conference at Washington. The fourteen per cent increase in wages proposed by the administration was regarded by the strikers' leaders as the last straw. So they returned to their homes to carry on the fight for their demands by means of the strike.

In some cities, such as Indianapolis and Kansas City, strict rules are now in force, curtailing the number of hours stores and offices may be open and otherwise affecting the trade, particularly the retailers. Such limitations are being applied in other communities, where the closing of theaters, clubs, schools and churches will seriously reduce the purchase of flowers for social activities.

Growers who have not their necessary supplies of coal face a severe situation. Already various industries have been crossed from the list of those who may obtain coal when their present supply is exhausted. Of course, the greenhouse owner confronted with the possibility of losing his whole investment by freezing will no doubt be able to secure enough coal from the fuel administration to avoid such loss. Should present supplies decline, however, to the point that public utilities need to be restricted, there will be little chance of private industries securing fuel.

There is a ray of hope in the calculations of government officials that coal production is increasing. Last week was, they stated, nearly fifty per cent of normal in bituminous fields. Should the administration's measures to operate the mines meet with increased success, the crisis may not be so severe as at present anticipated.

BUILDING SUPPLIES SCARCE.

The steel strike and the present coal miners' strike, added to the difficulties under which most industries labor now, have shortened the available supplies of greenhouse building materials seriously. The fact that the scarcity comes at the winter season renders it less critical than it might be at a more active period of the year. It is hoped that the condition is only temporary and will alter SOON.

Prices have been withdrawn by the manufacturers of glass and the steel makers. The former have been producing under difficulties for some time, on account of the scarcity of capable workers and other industrial hindrances. The steel fabricators have not yet recovered from the strike. The mills are now operating at from fifteen to twenty per cent below the average capacity when the men went out. One reason for this is that thousands of men during the period of enforced idleness sought occupation in other fields and cannot be readily replaced. It is hoped, however, that the high wages paid by the mills and fabricators will in time lure them back.

The fuel question at present is more vital and is causing considerable apprehension. If a shortage of coal necessitates a rationing of supply to the industries, it will mean a serious curtailment of production, and many thousands of men will be thrown out of employment. All efforts are being made to avert the possibility so far as possible.

WORKING OVERTIME.

You hear a lot of talk these days about industrial slackers, about those who "lie down" on the job, just because skilled help is scarce, but Review Classified Ads still work early and late —no 44-hour week for them. Like this:

In reply to yours of some time ago in regard to a display advertisement, will say that it looks like I will not have much excuse to advertise at all, as the little Classified advertisement of a year ago seems to be working overtime to beat the band. I am practically sold up on gladiolus bulbs by getting increased orders from last year's customers and also some new ones who must have referred back to last season's copy of The Review.—C. M. Grossman, Petoskey, Mich., November 28, 1919.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Henry J. McGrady.

Henry J. McGrady, a stockholder of the Boston Coöperative Market, died November 25, after a short illness with pneumonia. The deceased was in his seventy-sixth year and had resided and operated greenhouses in Newton Center for many years. Recently his daughters have had charge of the business. The deceased leaves a widow and three daughters. Funeral services were held November 28 and a number of his market confreres attended. There were some beautiful floral tributes from friends in the trade and others.

Mrs. W. C. Lawrence, wife of the owner of the Lawrence Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga., died November 25. She is survived by her husband, one son and four daughters.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The market has been brisk since Thanksgiving and everyone reports business good. The mum supply has been good and there is a demand for all stock available. Stock is all bringing fair prices. Out-of-town business has shown a large increase in the last two weeks.

Various Notes.

All of the local florists are busy preparing for the Christmas rush. They have placed many orders already, to be sure that the stock arrives on time.

Fred Leapley is booked right up to Christmas with wedding orders. The store is attractively decorated and he has a large variety of seasonable flowers in stock. Mr. Leapley has a fine icebox, which is attracting much attention; it was designed and built by him.

The Louise Flower Shop has adopted a quite unusual way to deliver near-by orders. It is a small automobile which is propelled by the driver and can carry a number of orders at a time. It is brightly painted and attracts much attention while making its daily deliveries.

J. A. Phillips has gone out of the florists' business and he and his wife are preparing to go south.

George H. Cooke has been doing a large amount of funeral work and also has booked a number of good Christmas orders.

George Prokos, of Z. D. Blackistone's force, is carrying out his plans for a series of impressive window displays and the public has been greatly interested in the clever arrangement of his work. Z. D. Blackistone's store is crowded most of the time and he has a large amount of work on hand.

George C. Shaffer took on extra help to cope with the Thanksgiving rush. He has booked a number of large weddings for this month, in addition to the large amount of funeral work which he has been doing.

The Du Pont Floral Co. has been doing a large amount of funeral work. It has several weddings on hand this month.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was an eventful one for the florists. The Thanksgiving day business was especially heavy, the volume being much greater than ever before for this day, and the prices of flowers in all lines advanced materially. The market was, with the exception of one or two items, liberally supplied, but the clean-up was quite satisfactory. Some late arrivals on Wednesday afternoon fared less favorably than the early morning arrivals, with a decline in price, affecting particularly carnations, which early brought 10 cents to 12 cents and went down to 6 cents. There was also a decline in violet prices, which had been strong at $2.50 to $3 per hundred.

This week opened with arrivals rather light and prices strong. Chrysanthemums are shortening in supply and prices are firm at $2 to $12 per dozen.

Roses are not so abundant as they have been in the last few weeks and short-stemmed grades show a marked advance in values. American Beauty is much less plentiful and the best specials bring as much as $1.25 each, with cheaper grades in proportion. Teas and hybrid teas are also short in supply and prices much advanced in consequence; the shortest grades bring $5 per hundred. Two or three days of dull weather have not helped the rose situation.

Carnations are also on the short side in point of supply and the best of today's arrivals are bringing $10 to $12 per hundred. The quality of stock is improving and some really fine flowers are available.

Orchids continue quite scarce and the best cattleyas command $2 each, with some of the hybrids bringing 50 cents more. Spray orchids are especially scarce. Cypripediums are fairly plentiful, the insigne variety bringing $4 per dozen, with Sanderæ $6.

A few Easter lilies are to be had, the price running from $20 to $25 per hundred. Rubrum are much shorter in supply and the price of the best has gone up to $10 per hundred. Albums are plentiful and hard to move at $5 per hundred and less. Lily of the valley is scarce and 50 cents per spray is being asked and obtained, although buyers are vigorously protesting. Gardenias are in good demand, but there are not enough to go around; such as are available bring $1 each and most are sold before arrival.

White bouvardia is almost out of the market, but a good deal of the pink is arriving. Paper Whites are plentiful, but move well at 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen. Stevia is selling well at 25 cents to 30 cents per bunch, with selected stock as high as 50 cents. Snapdragon arrives in small quantities and brings 25 cents to $1 per bunch. Sweet peas are abundant at $1 to $2.50 per hundred sprays. Violets today move at 75 cents to $1 per hundred.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held Monday evening, December 8, in the club's new quarters in the Engineering Societies' building, 25 West Thirty-ninth street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues. It will be election night and an unusually large attendance is expected. A. M. Henshaw and I. S. Hendrickson are candidates for the office of president and the contest should prove quite interesting.

The flower show committee will hold a joint meeting with a committee from the American Rose Society, December 8, at the New York Florists' Club's office, 1170 Broadway. Details of cooperation on the work of the spring show will be settled at this meeting.

A. Kottmiller, of 426 Madison avenue, had the decorating of the ballroom for the ball given November 24 by Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Rogers. Oak trees of considerable height were a feature of the decorations. Chrysanthemums were chief among the floral adornments of the big room, while orchids were prominent in the centerpieces provided for the tables in the supper rooms.

Charles Thorley's store, both interior and exterior, was featured last week in a film at the Broadway theater, where Elsie Janis was the star in "A Regular Girl."

A page advertisement in the New York Tribune November 22 and 26 was carried by the Associated Retail Florists of New York.

Miss Grace LaRue is singing "Say It with Flowers" at the Alhambra this week. C. C. Trepel, of Bloomingdale's, is assisting in the floral decoration.

J. H. P.

S. B. Wertheimer has returned from a vacation trip south, the first time that he has been away from his office in many months.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Summing up the Thanksgiving business at the end of last week was a most satisfactory process. Never in the history of the Chicago market has there been so great a demand for flowers for the feast day. Nor has there ever been so large a supply of stock. Almost without exception, every wholesale house which caters to the shipping demand had total sales exceeding last Thanksgiving, and every other Thanksgiving. In many cases the increases were phenomenal. But it was due to the tremendous supply of stock rather than to high prices. The supply turned out to be much larger than had been expected. Where all the flowers came from is a mystery, especially because nearly everything was of first-class quality. There was so large a supply that it held prices down, even though the demand was so great. Nowhere in the list was there a shortage which justified a material increase in prices and on the whole values were much below those of last year, perhaps one-third below on the average. The greatest difficulty was experienced in getting fair prices for the pompons. Thanksgiving never saw half so many of these flowers in any other year. They were so abundant that some of the growers actually peddled their stock from store to store instead of shipping it to a commission house. The result was that the prices realized varied widely; on this item there was no market basis to guide either seller or buyer.

Mention The Review when you write.

On the rest of the stock conditions were much better. While the supply was extremely large, the demand was great enough to take nearly everything that was offered without sending prices either up or down. The extra call was least for the longest grade of roses and these in many cases had to be sold below their true value. When the shipping orders had gone out the market in general was well cleaned up. City trade did not prove to be as strong as had been expected, probably largely due to bad weather, and wholesalers who depend principally on city buyers were disappointed; the call Thanksgiving morning was much less than had been expected in view of the great activity in the preceding days of the week. Consequently, when the market closed for the holiday there was a considerable quantity of unsold stock.

Most of the retailers report a record business for Thanksgiving, in spite of the fact that many of the wholesalers were disappointed in the volume of late city buying. The market conditions were much more favorable for the retailers than they were a year ago. Good flowers were abundant and could be had at prices which the trade has grown to consider moderate. At the same time, the public was buying freely and paying first-class prices.

Since Thanksgiving, business has continued fairly brisk, interrupted by a cold wave and blizzard, but comparing favorably with last year. The supply of chrysanthemums and pompons is the largest ever known after Thanksgiving. While many growers are cut out, others will be able to prolong the supply till Christmas. Beauties are not abundant, but are fine. There is so large a supply of roses that prices are maintained with difficulty. The longest blooms are most difficult to sell if an attempt is made to realize their true value. Short roses are least abundant. Practically everything else is equal to the present demand, though that is large. Carnations are in greater request now that the supply of pompons is smaller. The price has moved up a notch. Paper Whites, yellow narcissi and stevia are abundant.

Violets continue scarce, but the curtailment of consignments from New York has drawn California stock here in small quantity. There are only a few sweet peas of good quality. Cat-

November Business.

At the end of last season few were so sanguine as to believe that it would be possible in 1919 to duplicate the sales records of the autumn of 1918. But it has been done. Quite a number of wholesale houses did more in October than in the month last year. November has turned out even better. Nearly all the houses which cater specially to the out-of-town trade have enjoyed a record business for November. Prices were not nearly so high as last year, but the quantity of stock has more than made up the difference, the out-of-town demand being the greatest ever known during chrysanthemum time.

The Fuel Situation.

The serious turn in the fuel situation has resulted in many unfounded rumors concerning the growers; none of them seem actually to be in want.

Nearly all the growers heeded the many warnings last summer and filled up all covered storage space, while some erected huge piles in the open. At Plant B of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, there is a supply sufficient to keep the whole place going from two to three months. If cars stop coming to Plant A's sidetrack, the big 6-ton truck will haul coal back over the route it carried it last summer. Bassett & Washburn have a month's supply stacked in the open.

Nearly all the growers who had cars in transit last week have failed to r - ceive them; they are not confiscated, but merely held up awaiting developments. Charles Bond, the Naperville orchid profiteer, was in town December 1 looking for means of getting a car released, although not yet in need, but could find no one who would agree that cattleyas at $3 per bloom are an essential.

Amid all the talk of confiscation, there seems little probability that any coal which has been unloaded will be taken away and it looks as though all the large growers are safe for a month or two.

Where There's a Will There's a Way.

November 26 every express pick-up man in Chicago was supplied with a copy of the following notice:

EMBARGO ON DETROIT.

Embargo all business for Detroit except perishable food products, live stock where service is arranged ahead of time, seeds, nursery stock in lots of not over 300 pounds, drugs, medicines and surgical supplies. M. P. Rugowski.

When it is considered that Detroit is one of Chicago's largest customers for cut flowers, florists' supplies, bulbs and plants, the importance of such an unexpected order, on the eve of Thanksgiving, can be realized. The embargo was maintained strictly for three or four days, but then its severity gradually was relaxed. In the first four days considerable quantities of stock were shipped to Ypsilanti, where they were met and carried to Detroit by motor truck. When a florist wants flowers he gets them.

Ferns Are Spoiling.

There is consternation in the ranks of the storers of ferns—much of the stock put in the warehouse in October already is in such condition that it scarcely is worth picking over. A wholesaler who last spring dumped 235,000 spoiled ferns, after paying storage on them for nearly six months, says the present experience leads to the belief that it is time to stop taking such risks, because the shippers, having had their pay, refuse to share the responsibility and even seem to imply that the losses are exaggerated in the telling. That the condition is not local, however, is shown by the condition of some of the cases now coming from the first hands—they show that they have already been picked over.

The probability is that good ferns will be worth real money before spring.

Labor Troubles.

For a number of months a few em-establishment that successfully grows 40 to 50 varieties of plants to cut from? Yet that is just what the CHICAGO MARKET offers every day, IN and OUT of SEASON, to fill orders for the retail florists in Chicago and in other cities.

The QUANTITY and QUALITY of the stock is beyond comparison.

The EXPRESS SERVICE from CHICAGO is the BEST.

It is because of our large supply of cut flowers with that of the larger supply in the market as a whole that thousands of retail florists operate a Retail Store without the investment and expense of operating a greenhouse of their own.

CHICAGO rightfully claims the distinction as THE GREAT CENTRAL MARKET.

ployees of north side growers have been trying to organize a union. The leadership has been of the amateur variety and without connection with the recognized labor organizations in the vicinity. Within the last two or three weeks there have been several small outbursts which have revealed the fact that the majority of the employees are content and have not joined the "union." Where complaints were just, the men have been met in a friendly spirit, but where the aim seemed merely to take advantage of temporary conditions, the agitators simply have been told to move on. As some of them lived in the employers' houses, moving proved less simple than it sounded.

Mr. Ammann to Speak.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago will meet Thursday, December 11, at 2 p. m., at the Randolph hotel. Several vases of the new roses to be introduced to the trade in 1920 will be on exhibition. The special subject for discussion will be publicity. President J. F. Ammann, of the S. A. F., and other speakers of note will address the meeting. All members will find this meeting exceedingly interesting and instructive, and by President Kohout and Secretary Amling are urgently requested to attend.

The first part of November was unusually warm and sunny, so the cold, stormy weather of the closing days of the month only brought the mean temperature for the month down to normal, with the percentage of sunshine, fifty, still three points above normal. Except for the few cold, windy days at

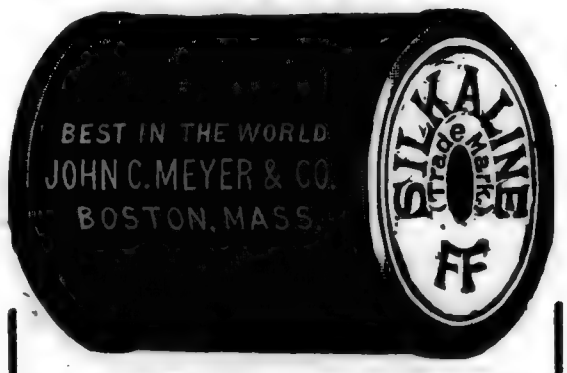
Why Wedding Work Is Booming.

Many comments are heard on the continued strength of the call for wedding work and, particularly, on the way florists in the factory districts are buying 20-cent valley and 3-dollar orchids. But the marriage license clerk in the county building explains it by offering this record of licenses issued:

Year	October	November
1917	2,755	2,848
1918	1,961	2,080
1919	3,489	3,600

"I'll tell you how it is," said Joseph Stastny, who writes and stamps wedding permits from dawn till dark. "We used to call them 'poor people' or the 'masses.' Believe me, if the wealthy people—the millionaires, the brokers and bankers—could see the 'poorer people' lining up in front of my window every day they would rush from their mahogany offices and learn a trade.

"It's the working people who are lining up out there and the working people today are wealthier than ever before. Most of them are young—boys from 21 to 25 and girls from 18 to 23—but they're getting married and they laugh when you mention high cost of living."



Various Notes.

A. M. Anderson, chief of the purchasing department of the A. L. Randall Co., who spent April, May and June of this year on a trip to England, France and Italy (Germany was not then open), says it will be many years before Europe can again compete with America on the general line of florists' supplies. "There are some natural products, like ruscus and immortelles," says Mr. Anderson, "on which Europe has a monopoly, but the manufacturing progress made in America during the war puts the florists' supply trade in a self-reliant position; our goods are moderately abundant, superior in quality and not higher in price."

The E. Wienhoeber Co., on Elm street, reports the best November in the history of the concern, made so by the number of debutante affairs in the neighborhood of the store. It is said the month's sales were practically double those of November last year.

The Florists' Club's annual meeting for the election of officers is the first Thursday in December. Paul Klingsporn stated that he had withdrawn his name for the presidency, leaving Otto H. Amling as the only nominee.

Peter Olsem has the Nepper place of fourteen houses on the edge of Rogers Park. Most of the glass is in vegetables, but Mr. Olsem is not happy even with good crops and high prices—he wants to grow flowers. He has a small stock of carnations, enough to give cuttings to plant the whole place next summer, which will take about 70,000 plants.

He began putting them in the sand this week.

R. B. Howe, of the W. W. Barnard Co., has returned from a fortnight's trip to the eastern holly district. He says he can see nothing to justify selling holly below $7.50 to $8. Not only does it cost more than ever before, but the supply is small and there is a possibility of a freight embargo which will tie up shipping without notice.

Bassett & Washburn have an interesting record going back many years, showing the amount of space given to each variety of rose on the place and the annual income, figured from the total down to the foot. With such a system the old varieties have short shrift when something better offers. Killarney went long ago and Brilliant retired last spring. Rhea Reid held out here long after it disappeared from other ranges, but last planting time it followed Richmond into the discard; the only red here now is Hoosier Beauty. Shawyer could not stand the income-per-foot test and White Killarney is in danger. Russell is the leader, Columbia and Ophelia following. Premier, planted for trial only, is doing so well that all the wood will now be used for propagating.

J. E. Pollworth, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is away on a trip preparatory to Christmas.

N. J. Wietor has a robust son and Henry Wietor has two of them, so there are five good men who can turn a hand to anything at the greenhouses, whenever a hand is needed.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner, who are conservative in everything they do, say they count on 1920 being an even better year than 1919 has been for florists.

The American Bulb Co., having disposed of most of its giganteums, unloaded two cars of hardy lilies December 1.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report the arrival, in time for Thanksgiving, of the first pussy willows of the season.

Leonard Kill, Mrs. Kill and Miss Elizabeth are with Henry A. Zender and family, adjoining the Reinberg greenhouses, until they can get into a new home of their own. After Mr. Kill's absence of ten years, his old friends are glad to see him back in the market.

Those who have made the rounds of the market in years gone by encounter a landmark when they visit the new Weiss-Spandikow range at Maywood. It is the big refrigerator which held the stock in the former store of Percy Jones, Inc., now used for cooling the rose cut before shipment.

W. W. Barnard Co. received 400 cases of giganteums from Japan December 2.

The first 1920 calendar to reach The Review is that of Andrew Kolke, who has built up a nice business, especially in pot plants, at 5442 North Western avenue. His calendar carries a reproduction in colors of Frank H. Desch's well known painting, "When Peggy Goes to Town."

Visitors.

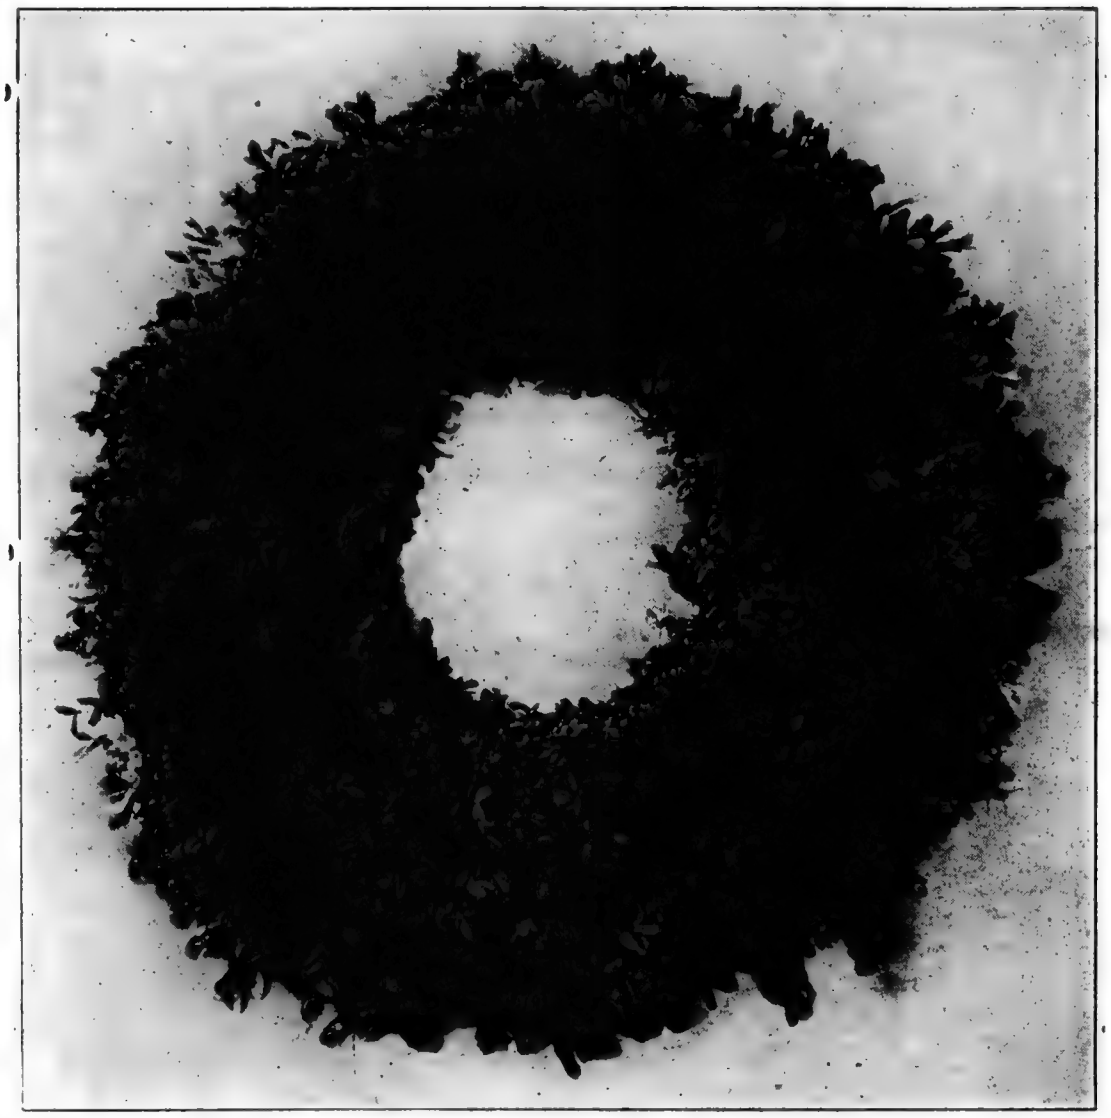
T. M. Cahill, of Akron, O., was a Thanksgiving visitor here. He is of the firm of Grossberg & Cahill, who are about to add zest to competition in the flower business in Tire Town, opening a new store at 283 South Main street. Mr. Cahill purchased fixtures, furniture and supplies. He is well known in Chicago, having worked for a number of leading retailers here.

Albert Barber, who has come to be known as the Woolworth of the florists' trade, arrived from Cleveland December 1, in quest of things he can sell in his chain of stores.

Blaine Wilcox, of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, appeared in the market December 1.

Paul M. Palez is here this week, looking as though prosperity extends at least as far as Little Rock.

Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., is here, returning from the west. He says that if business was any better it would be bad for all of us.



J. W. Davis, of Terre Haute, Ind., was a recent visitor.

Ralph M. Ward, who has located at Lawrence, Kan., was here a few days ago and placed an order with the Lord & Burnham Co. for two iron-frame houses each 40 x 200, to go up as soon as possible.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

From all reports gathered from retailers, wholesalers and growers, this year's Thanksgiving business was the best ever experienced by the local trade. The market was in a splendid condition, especially in the cut mum supply. Not in any of the recent years were chrysanthemums so plentiful as this year and it was well they were, as the demand was large from both local and shipping orders. There were grand specimen flowers in all varieties. Bonnaffon was in greatest demand, with Seidewitz, Chadwick, Eaton and Dr. Enguehard next in order. All pompon varieties sold with a rush at prices not out of reason.

There was a big shortage in roses, although the supply was good, considering that the local growers were off crop. The many weddings caused a heavy demand for white roses, which were in shorter supply than the colored varieties. The clean-up on these was noticeable early both Wednesday and Thursday. Carnations are also off crop with the local growers and the demand was much greater than the supply. The shortage in these helped to clean up the big supply in mums. The growers expect to be in full crop again in roses and carnations at the end of the mum season. Fancy violets brought as high as $2 per hundred; these, too, were short of the demand. Sweet peas were in big demand and the wholesalers had not enough to fill advance orders. Sweet peas, too, promise big crops after the mum season.

There was a good supply of Paper Whites, snapdragons, stevia and calendulas. Pot plants of any variety in bloom sold well at high prices. Begonias, cyclamens and mums were the only plants offered; ferns did not attract buyers to any extent. There was a great demand for wild smilax during the whole week and asparagus, smilax, adiantum, in fact anything in the green line, had a big call.

A Record Thanksgiving.

The leading west end florists say they never experienced a better Thanksgiving than this year's. F. C. Weber, Joseph Witek, F. H. Weber, Sanders and John Boren had admirable window displays, which repaid in good sales at good prices. M. S. Newman, Waldbart's and the Ayres Floral Co. all had a busy Thanksgiving.

Mullanphy Florists, Grimm & Gorly and Fred Foster had all they could handle with an extra force.

Windler's Flowers, the Schoenle Floral Co., the Eggeling Floral Co., the Bergstermann Floral Co. and Carl Beyer, in the south end, also experienced a great run of trade in all lines.

Vandervoort's floral department disposed of an immense stock, as did Young's and Ostertag Bros. So, judging from these satisfactory reports, this Club to Meet.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club held a meeting at the home of Vice-president Cerny, in Kirkwood, and laid plans for a big get-together meeting December 11, which will be held in parlor A, Planters' hotel. The meeting will be made especially interesting to all in the trade. George Asmus, president of the Chicago Retail Florists' Association, will speak for the retailers and J. F. Ammann, president of the Society of American Florists, will speak for the growers. All in the trade are invited to attend. The secretary was instructed to send out specially strong notices to all members, urging them to attend and learn something to their advantage from the talks from two of the best informed speakers in the trade. Therefore all members reading this notice should reserve December 11. The meeting will be called at 2 o'clock.

The florists' publicity committee held a well attended meeting November 25 at the store of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. and transacted a great deal of business. Chairman Bourdet has called a meeting of this committee for December 9, when Christmas advertising will come up for discussion.

Henry Durenberg, of Grimm & Gorly, was held up by robbers last week on his way home. He lost all his money and received a bad scalp wound, but he was back on the job next morning, as he could not miss the big Thanksgiving rush.

consists of seven acres, a residence and seven greenhouses; these will be used for growing plants and cut flowers for his own use. A new Kroeschell boiler is being installed.

As the hunting season is now in full swing, Frank Windler, W. A. Rowe, Al Gumz and Jules Bourdet, all noted experts with the gun, will be off on hunting trips this week; game is plentiful and a big killing is expected.

Of the various meetings to be held this week, those of most importance are the national flower show committee, of which Jules Bourdet is chairman; the state fair premium committee, of which H. C. Irish is chairman, and the Missouri State Florists' Association, of which Frank A. Windler is vice-president. J. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

A street merchant, a courteous chap, stopped Phil in the wholesale district to ask from whom he could get violets in California. When told that the flowers would be dead when he received them, he replied, not at all, that they lasted fifteen days and that he knew because a man at Thirteenth and Market streets had 250 bunches of these wild violets from California. Whether the story was true or whether it wasn't is not the point. It is told merely to show the condition of the cut flower market. The out-of-town shipping orders and the orders from the local stores are using all the flowers, good, mediocre and poor, at good prices. There are none left for the street merchants. All last month the chrysanthemums were the mainstay of the market. The mainstay is being withdrawn and there is nothing to take its place and winter is here. To make the market condition even clearer, it may be added that many florists and others who have been producers are now consumers. They helped load the market with chrysanthemums and pompons. Now they are cut out and they are buying other flowers for their orders or for their own use.

The jump that prices took at the close of the week before Thanksgiving was fully maintained until the holiday and until the close of November. In some cases these prices were further advanced. The market is now practically bare. The chrysanthemums are nearly cut out; so are the pompons, although there will be some chrysanthemums and some pompons for two weeks to come. They will be more than a side show. Carnations, roses and other flowers are slowly increasing in numbers and their quality is improving.

Christmas Greens.

Philip Freud knows a lot about Christmas greens. He gives it as his opinion that this is going to be a good year. Mr. Freud says that it is possible once more to get holly wreaths made up, now that munition plants no longer tempt the workers away. He says, most important indeed, that the holly is well berried and green. He thinks that the use of boxwood is rapidly increasing, that lycopodium and mistletoe will be good and that there is only one grade of laurel wreathing worth handling—the best.

for Peter McKenzie. He was an extra good florist. He often worked from 5 a. m. to 10 p. m., with short intermissions for meals. He kept the books, in addition to his work in the greenhouses. He received $1 a day and supported a wife and five children on this "sum." The men under him received 75 cents a day.

Fifty years ago William K. Harris, who was one of the ablest florists Philadelphia has ever produced, worked in winter for the city. There was no way of getting to his work except to walk. It was a long walk every morning and every evening. He did not like it, but he stuck to it until spring because there was nothing else to do. Work was scarce.

Thirty years ago—to be exact, July 11, 1899—William J. Baker, doing business at 1518 Chestnut street, sold to Pennock Bros., so the record reads, seventy-five carnations for 50 cents. As Pennock Bros. stand for quality, it is probable that this was select stock and that the ordinary stock brought 50 cents a hundred.

Now.

It is Frank M. Ross who is speaking. He is one of our most progressive florists of today. Better listen to what he is saying: "We have been doing more business this fall than we did last fall, in spite of the fact that last fall had the extraordinary demand of the flu and that this fall we have been rebuilding one of our three stores. People have money and they are spending it. We are now buying fancy roses that we must sell at $7.50 per dozen and we are selling them. Two years ago buying such stock would have been suicidal. I think that the next three months will witness the greatest shortage of stock that the flower business has ever seen. No, I do not think that high prices will seriously hurt the business. We have a sign in our stores that reads, 'Quality Is Remembered When Price Is Forgotten.' I believe this and aim to give people a good article. I think that the Florists' Telegraph Delivery will be a great thing in five or six years. I expect to keep right on at it even if I do so at a loss at first. Few things pay at once."

The Park Show—Not.

There was a trolley block that caused a long delay, so it was almost dark before Horticultural hall was reached, away out on Belmont road—so dark that the hall should have been closed, but the regular hour of 5 o'clock was still thirty minutes away. There was no show as in pre-war days. It was just light enough to see that the chrysanthemum flowers stood out from among the dark green foliage, the whites and yellows quite clearly displayed in the twilight gloom. Many people were there, strolling around the big building with the same uncencern they would have shown in the daytime, apparently enjoying themselves. Evidently war economies had not affected the big 40-year-olders planted out in the beds. They looked to be in robust health. Only the absence of that wealth of bloom plainly told that there were reasons. The crowd showed as plainly that a show was desired.

The headline? Why, it is in the style of a chap who always puts the word "not" after each sentence he utters, conveying his meaning in negatives. How do you like it?

The Rose Premier.

E. Gurney Hill usually selects a rosarian of note in this district to test his introductions. He is called upon, shown the blooms, invited to Richmond, Ind., to see the novelties growing and induced to plant them largely. The requirements for such a rosarian are that he be a commercial grower of unquestioned ability, that he have confidence in the introducer and in his introduction and that he have nerve to take a quantity. Joseph Heacock held this position of trust for years. His mantle now appears to have fallen on Stephen Mortensen, of Southampton, Pa.

Mr. Mortensen has 3,800 Premier that were in solid beds in one of his greenhouses last April. They fill half of the house and are a sight worth seeing. The plants are six feet high and promise a heavy crop of special blooms for Christmas. They have produced freely all summer and look as though they would make a splendid record for themselves by New Year's. From all appearances, Premier is the most free-blooming rose of the size ever introduced. Its drawbacks—every rose has its drawbacks—appear to be that it takes spot easily and that it is not a good shipper.

Mr. Mortensen is to be congratulated on the way he has handled this remarkable novelty.

The rest of the place looks well. Columbia is doing finely. One house planted a year and a half ago is still producing freely. It has not been rested. This variety is highly esteemed. Hadley, Russell and Ophelia are excellent. Hadley is thought to be at its best in its first and second years, declining after that. The Killarneys, pink, White and Brilliant, are being closely watched. They may be dropped for some of the newer sorts. They have done well, but every dog has his day.

The orchid house and the little cyp house are features of the place at Southampton that are extremely interesting. When Mr. Mortensen talks about them time has wings, so absorbing are the accounts of their doings, their habits and their history.

The Market.

Business for Thanksgiving proved to be exceedingly good and both in volume of sales and prices it went well ahead of a year ago, even though the influenza scourge, with its attendant death roll and call for flowers, made a large demand in 1918. Weather conditions were anything but cheerful or favorable, a steady rain falling from the evening of November 25 until Thanksgiving morning, with the remainder of the holiday dark and gloomy. Chrysanthemums were easily the leading flowers and never sold in such numbers or at more satisfactory prices at this season. Bonnaffon was the leader and sales of this popular variety exceeded those of all other sorts combined. Sales varied from $16 to $32 per hundred, with some fancy stock going at $50 to $75. Pompons went well at 40 to 60 cents per bunch. Roses, which were in short supply, sold at from $8 to $25, with fancies somewhat dearer. American Beauties sold at $75 to $100. Carnations varied from $4 to $8; whites dragged as usual and were in oversupply. Violets were scarce at $3 and sweet peas of good quality sold at $3 to $4, with grandifloras at $2. Cattleyas sold at $18 per dozen. Plant trade was not large, cyclamens, begonias and fern dishes having the greatest call.

Prices are well maintained since the holiday. Chrysanthemums are rapidly waning. Good flowers make $16 to $32 and a nice supply of pompons and singles is available. Roses continue scarce and prices equal those made for Thanksgiving. Carnations also sell well at an average of $6, some whites lower and fancies higher. Violets continue scarce and those who have sweet peas can dispose of them at fancy prices. Bouvardia is fine and meets with a quick sale. Snapdragons are scarce. Some good mignonette is arriving and sells at $6 to $10 per hundred.

Yellow marguerites, bachelor's buttons in several colors, calendulas, cosmos and French marigolds are among miscellaneous flowers coming in. Stevia is more plentiful and there is a fair supply of Paper White narcissi. Callas sell quickly and lilies are scarce. Cattleyas are becoming quite scarce and command $18 per dozen. Asparagus and adiantum have sold well of late.

An abundance of fine pot plants is being offered, such as cyclamens, which are easily the leaders, begonias, solanums, oranges, ericas, primulas and a fine assortment of ferns and foliage plants.

Orchids.

A. C. Burrage, of Beverly Farms, is rapidly acquiring fame as an orchid specialist. On a recent visit I found several houses filled to their limit. Several new ones were nearing completion and foundations were being laid for still more. There are already 22,000 plants here and the number is being steadily increased. Special houses are devoted to cypripediums, odontoglossums, phalænopsis, cymbidiums and seedlings, in addition to the cattleyas. Of these latter there are some magnificent big specimens and all are in the best of health. Seedling raising is being gone into heavily and within two years 15,000 of these will be potted off, all crosses being of the best varieties and types.

In the near future this promises to be not only the most extensive but the Center wire can be measured before Festooning is wound, which eliminates measuring of Festooning. Type No. 2: Fine wire or string is used for the center, one turn with handle gives one wrap on Festooning. Does equally as good work as Type No. 1. We furnish machines ready for work, with enough wire to make 500 yards. Three days' trial allowed. Money refunded if machine is not what you want. Prices: Type No. 1, $12.00; Type No. 2, $6.00. Decorative Evergreens, Fern Roots, etc.

For fourteen long years we have been handling green goods, and feel that we are entirely safe to guarantee satisfaction in every instance.

We learned long ago that A GOOD QUALITY OF STUFF is what the trade wants, and that is what we promise to supply; not only good quality, but considering labor conditions and cost of living, even for the most humble picker of wild decorative evergreens, we feel that our prices are very reasonable.

Our goods are absolutely FRESH FROM THE WOODS, not like cold storage galax, neither green nor bronze.

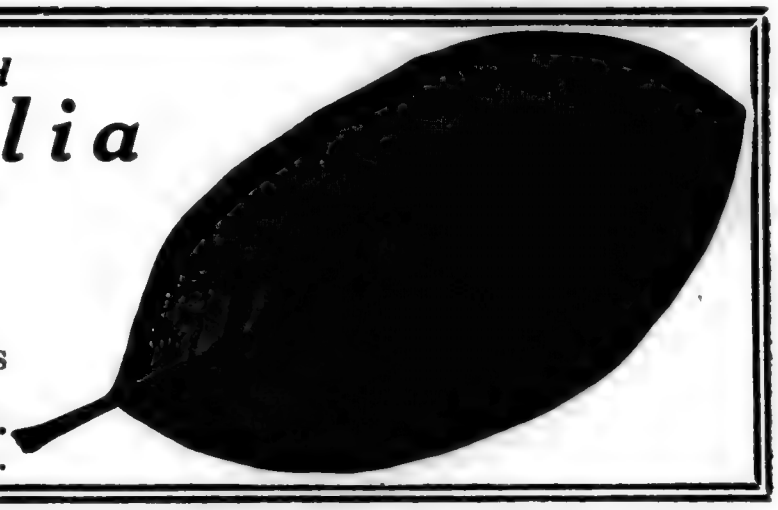
choicest collection of orchids in America, and it is worthy of note that nothing is commercialized, all flowers not used by the owner and his friends being donated to charitable institutions. In March, 1920, at Boston's big orchid show the entire lecture hall of Horticultural hall will be filled with orchids from this collection. Douglas Ecclestone is superintendent here and such noted growers as George I'Anson and J. Pocock are included in the staff.

A Plant Grower.

The most noted plant factory near Boston is that of Thomas Roland, of Nahant. There are always eye-openers to be seen here, and just now there are thousands of wonderful cyclamens, grandly flowered, with superb foliage just in the pink of condition for the holidays. It is a revelation to see house after house of these grandly grown plants of the finest Christmas colors in the pink of perfection for the coming great holiday. In one house were to be seen many thousands of thrifty young seedlings in flats for 1920. Several houses are devoted to begonias, principally Melior and Lorraine, with some Mrs. Peterson and other varieties.



A house of heavily fruited oranges showed how well these popular Christmas plants can be grown at Nahant. Large numbers of Cleveland cherries were heavily fruited. The newest and largest house is almost entirely filled with ericas, large quantities of beautifully flowered and shapely melantheras being included. Large standards of Acacia Baileyana are planted down the center of this house and will soon be in flower. The acacia house contained a large assortment of these popular plants in a variety of sizes, from the big pubescens to small stock in 4-inch pots. Mr. Roland's exhibits of these plants have given him national fame. Camellias were remarkably well budded and many already flowering.

Cattleyas filled one roomy house and were a fine, healthy lot. Quantities of Trianæ were in bud or sheath and a fair number were in bloom. A long bench of cypripediums contained some choice sorts and batches of Oncidium splendidum, dendrobes and other orchids all looked happy. In other houses were to be seen quantities of the best nephrolepis, dracænas, crotons, ficus, bougainvilleas and other plants. Special mention should be made of a long bench of nerines, mostly hybrids, including numerous flats of seedlings, which, in a year or two, will give Mr. Roland an imposing lot of these lovely fall bulbous subjects. In coldframes and elsewhere were thousands of ramblers and other roses, hydrangeas and other stock, which will soon take the space now occupied by Christmas plants. No one interested in pot plants should fail to visit Nahant and see the grand houses of plants Mr. Roland has.

Various Notes.

The Welch Bros. Co. reports a much larger Thanksgiving trade than a year ago. It is receiving large consignments of roses and other flowers from A. N. Pierson, Inc., for which firm it is sole Boston agent. Columbia and Premier both prove popular, as well as the newer Crusader and Pilgrim. A fine lot of cyclamens from R. & J. Farquhar & Co. were also noted here.

Thomas Capers, of Wellesley Hills, is sending in some handsome giant mignonette. He has a large house of carnations, principally Enchantress Supreme, Matchless, Benora and Beacon.

Louis E. Small, of Tewksbury, always has some flowers out of the beaten track. He has been a great specialist in bachelor's buttons under glass and now has fine flowers of these in several colors. In addition he has calendulas, French marigolds, yellow marguerites and other interesting flowers.

John A. Nelson, of Framingham, never had his carnation houses in finer shape at this season than now. He has a great crop of Matchless, Ward, Benora, Pink Delight, Beacon and Morning Glow in sight for the holidays and also fine Spencer sweet peas.

The Boston Horticultural Club will hold its December meeting at the Parker House, with an illustrated lecture by the president, E. H. Wilson.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 16, in addition to the lecture, the annual election of officers will take place. There will be exhibits of Christmas plants and other features. The club is planning to hold a midwinter flower show in February, and its annual banquet during the same month.

A heavy motor truck plowed into one of the greenhouses of W. W. Tailby, of Wellesley, November 26, having failed to make a proper turn. Being driven at a high speed, it continued on its way through a good portion of the house. Mr. Tailby estimates his damage at $3,000.

Paul F. Brigham, of Westboro, had the finest Seidewitz mums I saw for the Thanksgiving trade. He is also cutting an excellent sweet pea crop.

A. M. Beckwith, of South Sudbury, is our newest carnation specialist, this being his first season, and he certainly is making good. He has 25,000 plants, chiefly Ward, Matchless, Beacon, Pink Delight and Benora.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley, in addition to his staple crop, carnations, has some handsome mignonette this season.

Alexander J. Montgomery, of Natick, keeps up the record of his late father, Robert Montgomery, as a successful rose specialist. He has unusually fine Russell, Columbia, Double White Killarney, Hadley and Ophelia and thinks Premier will also make good.

November proved to be a mild month. The closing day with a maximum of 68 degrees was the warmest and the minimum for the month was 20 degrees. Rain fell on eleven days to an amount far in excess of normal. There were thirteen clear, seven partly cloudy and ten sunless days.

Harold A. Ryan, of the Mount Auburn Greenhouses, Cambridge, is a successful grower of Strelitzia Reginæ, the bird of paradise flower, as it is commonly called, and has a fine crop of flowers at present. He has fifty tubs of it and the flowers are always in good demand by the retailers.

Market, November 25, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

W. N. C.

At a dinner reunion last week of the advertising men who formed the first Ad Men's Club in this city, each guest wore a fantastic paper cap bearing a legend of his particular business. Henry Penn, wearing a paper hat bearing the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," was greeted by the master of ceremonies with the words: "Henry Penn, I can not tell how strongly we feel about you, so we will say it with flour," and deluged him with a paper bag full of flour.

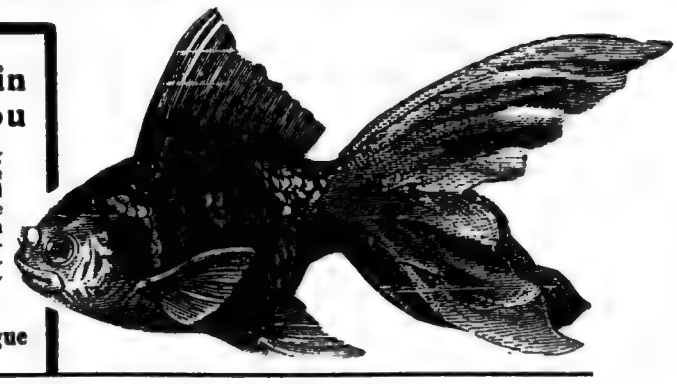
The Market.

The weather turned much colder two days before Thanksgiving and continued cold all through the week; consequently plants and cut flowers took a great deal more packing to keep out the frost and to get them in first-class condition to the customer. The Thanksgiving trade was good, the heaviest day being Wednesday, although Tuesday was heavy on shipping orders. The chrysanthemum stock was excellent and sold well. Enguehard was especially fine, but the flower seems too heavy for the stem and easily breaks when handled. Yellow and white Chadwick were fine specimen blooms and brought a much better price than any other variety. The yellows and pinks were the best selling lines and a little lagging was seen in the whites, owing perhaps to the oversupply of white varieties. Pompons in all colors were plentiful and sold well. Roses were good stock, with no trouble to make sales. Long-stemmed Russells were in nice condition and brought good prices. Columbias and Beauties were fine stock. Cecile Brunners were poor stock and seemed to have no color in them; consequently Wards were used more for corsage work. Single violets were plentiful and a great many were used in corsages worn at the Thanksgiving festivals. Carnations were fairly good stock, though sales are not so large while pompons are to be had. Good flowering plants were scarce. The few cyclamens and primulas that were to be had were not much in bloom. The few pompons in pots sold well. The supply of greens was plentiful. Paper White narcissi and Grand Soleil d'Or are nice stock and give a little more variety when making bouquets.

Various Notes.

The Duluth Floral Co. made a large casket cover for the Fay funeral; it was composed of many hundred Ophelia roses. With this firm the Thanksgiving trade was excellent and extra help was hired. Many large orders were shipped to the range towns, which kept the staff busy Tuesday and Wednesday; the retail trade was quite satisfactory. Funeral work was brisk all last week.

Business was good with J. J. Le Borious for Thanksgiving. His cut of chrysanthemums was at its best and he supplied most of the florists in Duluth and Superior and many mums were shipped to the range towns. His retail business was about double that of last year and nothing is left of his chrysanthemums but one house of late varieties, which are not yet ready to cut. He is cutting a lot of Paper White and Grand Soleil d'Or. Poinsettias are showing color and will be in fine shape for Christmas.



William Japp, of the Lester park greenhouses, did a large business in potted plants for Thanksgiving and could have sold many more had his cyclamens been more in bloom. He is a little too far out of town to expect much retail business; consequently he has to depend upon the wholesale trade of Duluth and Superior.

The Alpha Florist made a good showing of chrysanthemums and roses for the Thanksgiving trade. He has large show windows, in which he made a decidedly effective display. J. E. S.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Aided Thanksgiving Trade.

Reports generally as regards Thanksgiving day business are to the effect that it was of record character. Never before was the volume so great. He would be dull indeed who would not give our publicity campaign credit for being a factor in the promotion of this condition. Our magazine advertising was timed just right and millions of people saw the splendidly illustrated advertisements pertaining to Thanksgiving. The importance of flowers in the general observance of the day was emphasized in the text embodied in the advertisements: "Let flowers express your thankfulness for those friendships you hold dear. Send Thanksgiving day greetings of flowers. Chrysanthemums were never so gorgeous, such glowing tokens of prosperity and peace, as this year. In fact, all flowers seem to anticipate this season's wonderful message."

Flowers were not cheap—they were really much higher than usual at this season—yet the public bought, and liberally.

priate." Every advertisement carries a paragraph to remind readers that deliveries of flowers in distant cities and towns are easily made through the telegraphic delivery system in vogue among florists generally.

Now, isn't work of this kind worthy of your support, Mr. Non-subscriber? Can't you see that the more we accomplish, the more you benefit? You may say to yourself, "Well, conditions are better and the business would have come anyway." Then on sober reflection you must come to the conclusion that you are merely "kidding" yourself. Our publicity is working for you and to your great advantage. Then why should you not contribute to the cost? You are not asked to give more than it is known you can afford. If every florist in the country were to contribute but $5, we could place our business where it ought to be. That slogan of ours, "Say It with Flowers," is invaluable. What if we were obliged to stop its promulgation? We should have something to mourn over.

with rain the latter part of the day. In spite of unfavorable conditions, business in cut flowers for the holiday was quite satisfactory. Carnations sold for $1 per dozen and up. Chrysanthemums, of which varieties were few and blooms not large, brought from $3 upwards. Stevia is making its appearance. Paper White narcissi were to be had for several weeks, but they did not find a ready sale.

The college football games for several weeks have created a demand for mums. At the Harvard-Princeton game blooms of this popular flower sold for $2.50 each and were in great requisition.

Various Notes.

There appears to be a general inclination among the florists to curtail the number of hours which the stores are open. Several are in favor of closing all day Sunday now that they are open Saturdays till 9:30 p. m. Mr. Morse, of Morse & Beals, says that for a considerable period his firm was only open sufficiently long to get out stock that was actually ordered.

James J. McManmon says that he would be happy to have coöperation among the florists to regulate prices of stock, business hours and all matters for the general good of all concerned, also for the florists of this city to meet at certain periods for social evenings.

Harvey B. Green had the decorations for a large banquet held in Lowell last week. This called for the greatest number of flowers that has been used for a considerable time. This firm was well prepared with stock for Thanksgiving. The greenhouses are equipped with hot water and steam boilers; in moderate weather the hot water is sufficient and can be left for a longer time, whereas in severe weather both boilers are used.

At Frank Edgar's establishment, at Waltham, there are now about 4,000 cyclamen plants in splendid condition. A large house is entirely devoted to their culture. Mr. Edgar is finding a ready sale for his cyclamens at good prices. One buyer from New York visited the range and promptly gave an order for $1,200 worth. senting a decidedly velvety appearance.

The pupa is robust, of the usual shining mahogany-brown color, the posterior apex ending in two minute outcurved spines. The wing-pads are prominent. The length is five-eighths inch, and the width about half that.

Its Life and Habits.

July 10, 1907, this caterpillar was reported as a pest in the vicinity of Orlando, Fla., where it was attacking the fronds of potted maidenhair ferns. It was noticed that the larvæ usually fed at night, although sometimes found feeding during the day. They concealed themselves in the daytime at the base of the ferns or were found resting low on the stems, and they appeared to have a habit of crawling up the stem and eating off several leaflets on one side, thus spoiling the beauty of the plants. The larvæ observed began to transform to pupæ August 1.

During September of the same year several growers at Anacostia, D. C., made complaint that this caterpillar was injurious to several species of ferns in greenhouses. September 24 a government entomologist was detailed to obtain additional specimens and make observations on the habits of the insect and the conditions of the greenhouses. Larvæ were obtained in different stages, chiefly between half-grown and nearly grown specimens. They were feeding in the afternoon on the upper surface of the leaves. The usual method of attack, as observed, consisted in biting off the midrib leaf one-half to one-third the way up. Maidenhair or adiantum ferns were attacked either by biting off the leaflets at the tips of the fronds or by biting off the entire frond about one inch above the ground. The majority of the larvæ observed were resting either near the tip of the frond of the midrib or were concealed in the stems at the base of the plant.

An All-the-Year Pest.

An entire house of adiantums had been completely stripped of the leaves by the larvæ, and one grower stated that his fern crop had been damaged to the extent of $1,000. It was stated that the larvæ would cut the plants entirely bare, and each new leaf would be attacked by two or three larvæ as soon as it appeared. The same grower stated that these worms had troubled his ferns the previous year and that larvæ, pupæ and imagos were seen throughout that winter and preyed on the ferns the whole year.

The larva spins a loose cocoon by drawing together dead leaves and particles of earth next to the ground. It sometimes draws together green leaves to spin the cocoon. Though not strictly a nocturnal feeder, it shuns bright light and is most often found feeding exposed in the early morning.

The moth is seldom seen by day and when aroused it usually flies down under the benches to seclude itself. Thus many moths are caught in spider webs that abound in dark corners in the greenhouses.

The caterpillars seem to do the greatest damage early in the year, especially during May, but owing to the uniformly warm temperature of the greenhouses, winter as well as summer, there is no time when they are scarce enough to allow the ferns to put out a full head of fronds. They attack the tender leaves, especially the growing tips of young fronds, thus checking any attempt on the part of a plant to replenish the dying fronds with a new growth, and so far stunting it as to render it of no commercial value.

From larvæ obtained in September the moths began to issue October 26, continuing to emerge until November 19. The pupal stage was ascertained to be in three cases twenty-three, twenty-five and twenty-seven days, respectively, in cool October weather.

Tests with Various Poisons.

In January, 1910, the caterpillar was reported to be a serious pest on greenhouse ferns in Illinois. The twenty-seventh report of the state entomologist of Illinois, dated 1912, mentioned injury to ferns near Chicago, and stated what had already been learned, that arsenicals can not be applied to ferns in sufficient strength to kill this so-called cutworm, because they are likely to adhere to the surface in such a way as to make it difficult to handle the plants.

Many remedies were tried by the growers at Anacostia. Naturally, says the government bulletin, some of these remedies, which were not advised by entomologists, did not produce the desired effect.

One grower sprayed his entire crop with a strong decoction of hellebore. This was successful in driving away the larvæ, but it scalded the foliage of the ferns so badly that many of the plants died. He was advised to use arsenate of lead. This same grower employed a bait of poisoned bran and molasses, about as advised for cutworms, but without material effect, the caterpillars preferring the ferns.

Fumigation with carbon disulphide was tried, but was said to be of no avail in the destruction of this pest. In the same greenhouse, strips of cloth were saturated with carbon disulphide and placed on the ground about the plants, but although this remedy was sometimes successful, it was not entirely reliable, since the caterpillars had necessarily to be where they would receive the fumes if they were to succumb.

Controlled by Hand-Picking.

The laborious, but, if properly pursued, effective remedy of combating the insect by hand measures was employed by numerous growers. One of these reported that the numbers of the caterpillar had been materially reduced by hand-picking and poisoning. Another grower made a practice of going over the ferns every day and picking off all the caterpillars that could be seen, thus reducing the numbers of the pest in his greenhouse. It seemed to be the general opinion that the average grower would obtain the best success by hand methods, one of the best methods consisting of shaking each individual plant over the ground and trampling upon the caterpillars as they fall.

Arsenate of lead was advised, and a government entomologist was detailed to an infested greenhouse where this remedy was employed, to determine the extent of injury and to advise measures for the possible extermination of the worms. On his arrival he was informed that several thousand had been hand-picked from the ferns a day or two before and that over 200 had been picked from a space only five feet square. The plants had also been sprayed with arsenate of lead at the rate of two and one-half pounds to fifty gallons of water, applied twice, but the final result was not reported. Some of the growers complained that lead arsenate, when used in a solution strong enough to kill the caterpillars, would at the same time leave a white deposit on the plants which destroyed their commercial value. Owing to the delicacy of ferns, a spray of Paris green strong enough to kill the caterpillars would also burn the foliage. Paris green, properly combined with Bordeaux mixture, should not produce this effect.

Some of the local growers were advised by a government entomologist to fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas, but it was not tried, so far as can be learned. If fumigation by this method, says the entomologist, were employed several times at about the time when the insects are hatching from the egg, or undergoing their molts, it should assist materially in reducing the numbers of the pest.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market last week was short on all lines of stock. Mums, which had been the mainstay of the market for several weeks, were scarce, even in the best varieties. Medium-sized stock was quite scarce and small stock was not any too plentiful. The Thanksgiving rush was responsible for this, as every wholesale house was up on everything it could get for the holiday.

Roses are still off crop and now that the mum crop is nearing an end more could be used. Those coming to the market are of fine quality. Double White Killarney is especially fine, as are also Premier and Columbia. Carnations are still on the short side and, owing to the general shortage of stock, are cleaned up as fast as they come in. Sweet peas and violets were at a premium, owing to the demand for corsage work. In this line the demand was much greater than the supply; in fact, when we sum up the market for last week the demand in all lines of stock was greater than the supply. But this condition will be only temporary, as the mum crop is pretty well over and other lines which were being held back on their account will now be pushed for all they can stand, so that the market will in a short time be normal.

with a dance by the Harmony Circle at the Belvedere hotel. This was the first function the society has held since before the United States entered the war. This is the occasion for their young women to make their debut. There was a large attendance, and it was a most successful affair. The floral decorations were especially elaborate, many palms and cut flowers being used. Although there were not so many bunches used at this as at the Bachelor's Cotillion, which was held December 1 at the Luric, every florist was busy with bunches and corsage work. The dinner was served at small tables, the decorations being pink and yellow. For these, great masses of mums, roses and sweet peas were used.

A visit to the retail stores Thanksgiving eve found everyone going to capacity; advance orders were reported by everyone to equal, if not exceed, previous years. At W. J. Halliday's the only complaint to be heard was scarcity of stock. This store makes a leader of orchids, most of which are procured from their own range, and as these were not in crop they found it hard to secure sufficient to meet their requirements.

At John Cook's one heard the same complaint, "Good stock is scarce." This firm also produces most of its own stock. Since roses, carnations and, in fact, all lines of stock which they grow had not as yet struck their proper gait, it was hard for them to keep up with the demand. As I stood talking to Miss Cook our conversation drifted to prices. I asked if the proper advanced prices were being obtained for stock and if there was any trouble in securing them. Miss Cook, who is most practical, gave me a demonstration which was more convincing than anything I have heard for some time. There was a large vase of fine Seidewitz mums near where we stood. She said, "We have sold many finer flowers than these for $3 per dozen in the past and at that time thought we were receiving a good price. Now we are getting $12 per dozen for these mums. This is a fourfold increase and the significant point about it is, have you seen any of this quality go to waste this fall? Or take medium-sized mums; there have been times when they were impossible to get and the increase in price has been in proportion to these larger flowers. When we get into the matter, chrysanthemums are only an example of all lines of stock." Thanksgiving was a happy day in the Cook home, for the doctors let Mrs. Cook, who has been ill for some time, come down to her old place at the foot of the family table to enjoy dinner with the rest of the family.

At Samuel Feast & Sons' everyone had all he could attend to. This firm had a fine collection of blooming begonias, and they certainly made an attractive window among ferns and palms. In a few minutes' conversation I managed to get with Mrs. Hill, she told me that between the dance at the Belvedere and the holiday their sales were beyond anything she had ever experienced on Thanksgiving.

At Mary Johnston's I was told business was just a repetition of previous years, except that stock was scarce and the Harmony dance made it harder to meet all demands.

As I went from place to place and heard about the same thing, I could not but feel how like this Thanksgiving was to every occasion where there is a large demand for flowers. Yet one never heard of a time when florists failed to take care of all the business that came their way. But as one goes about the retail stores from week to week, he cannot help seeing the rush is on. Christmas is less than a month off. Stock may be more plentiful for this flower day than it was for Thanksgiving. There is no doubt that increased demand

The Howe Flower Shop, in the Steinfeld-Pizzini building on North Stone avenue, reopened its doors Saturday evening, November 15, after a four months' suspension of business to give time for extensive alterations. Delay in the receipt of building material had postponed the reopening, which had been scheduled for the middle of September. The floor, wainscoting and stairs have been tiled in ivory and the upper walls and ceiling have been finished in the same tint. A circular fountain, with a pool containing goldfish, is a feature of the main room, the east end of which is entirely occupied by the glass-fronted refrigerators and cases. A mezzanine floor has been introduced, opening into the room of the art department, where pottery and needlework are displayed. Behind the main room the workroom extends eastward sixty feet and in the rear of this is the lath house. On the evening of the reopening, corsage bouquets of violets, Cecile Brunner roses and long-stemmed carnations were distributed by two flower girls, Louise Howe and Betty Riggs, to all visitors. John Howe and Mrs. Howe have recently added to their staff F. H. Burns, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa.

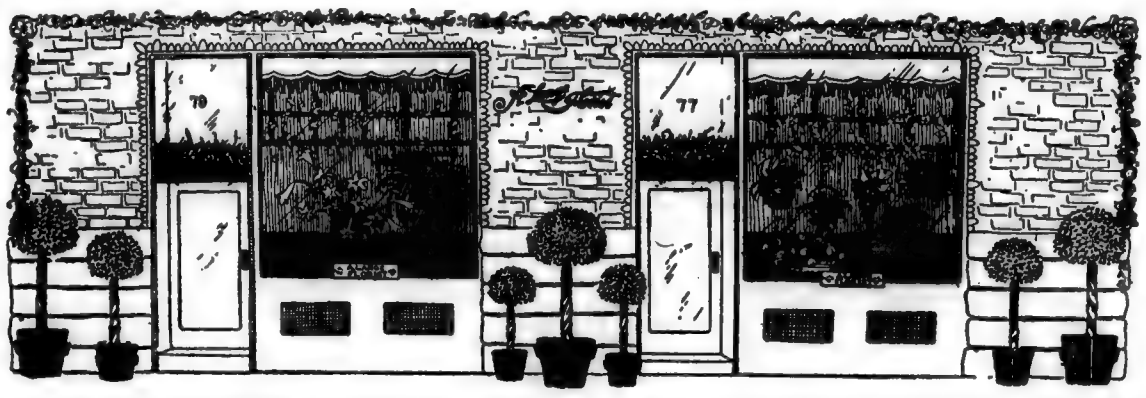
TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

All the trade is well satisfied with Thanksgiving business. Retailers and growers all cleaned up. Business was better than last year's. Good mums will be scarce for a few days, until Chadwick and other late varieties come in. Pompons are still in quantity in good selling varieties. White roses for Thanksgiving were scarce, owing to the number of weddings, which were well distributed among the trade. White mums were used instead.

Various Notes.



George Bayer made a shipment last week to Detroit of 6,000 Bonnaffons and 500 bunches of pompons. Every mum was perfect and of good size.

Street cars are still tied up, and in the snow and sleet and wind here the last three days and the congested condition of traffic, several of the trade's cars have been in smash-ups. The delivery system just now is a problem with some of the florists.

Max Spanner worked until 3 a. m. Sunday, November 30, so as not to conflict with the Sunday closing rule. Several of the other florists gave him a hand.

COURSE IN FLORICULTURE.

At Amherst, Mass.

The winter course at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., begins December 30 and continues for a period of ten weeks. The course offered in floriculture is designed to furnish those who have not the time to devote to a longer course with the theoretical and practical considerations essential to success in floricultural work. The course covers as thoroughly as time will permit those aspects of the work which are of especial interest to the commercial florist. Some of the topics considered are greenhouse construction, greenhouse management and methods used in growing important commercial crops. Part of the course will also be devoted to a consideration of gardening and garden flowers. Special trips are taken to inspect various ranges in Massachusetts. Courses in soils, plant diseases and insect pests accompany the work in floriculture.

Further information concerning the course may be obtained by writing for an announcement either to the depart-

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Thanksgiving brought splendid business, probably surpassing that of any previous season in the history of the trade. While a few of the smaller firms did not find trade quite up to their expectations, these minor disappointments were undoubtedly due to the weather for two days before, which, because of a steady downpour of rain, could not have been worse. Prices held firm and have continued so.

Chrysanthemums are just about done, but there are plenty of the later blooms to take their place. Paper White narcissi of fine quality are coming in and selling quickly at $6 per hundred. Here and there the retail trade is handling the so-called Christmas flowers, primulas, cyclamens and the earlier pink Mexican poinsettias.

Various Notes.

In the heart of downtown Cincinnati the McCallum Co. has established a branch store, which is under the management of Frank T. Smith. Mr. Smith, who was formerly in the paper box business in Cincinnati, was coached by George C. McCallum, who went there for the purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Edgar, who have been on the road for the McCallum Co. for the last two months, have returned to the city to remain until after the holidays.

year or more, was quietly married to George W. Bentley Tuesday, November 18, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Anne E. Houtz. The young couple expect to go into housekeeping shortly, although Mrs. Bentley will remain with the McCallum Co.

H. Z. Malo was a recent visitor in the city, representing Leo Heuman, the Chicago importer and mills agent.

John Murchie, of Sharon, was a welcome visitor in town last week, calling upon trade friends with whom he has been associated during the last forty years. Although Mr. Murchie has been active in business for sixty years, it has been by no means a life of all work and no play, and his real object in coming to Pittsburgh last Saturday was to see the big football game.

James J. Higgins is arranging to establish a center for the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago, at Harrisburg the first of the year, and to this end will add two assistants to his staff, which now comprises Norbert Huttinger and Hugh Potter.

Randolph & McClements had a most effective wedding decoration for Thanksgiving eve, with white and nile green as the dominating color note. The bride's bouquet was formed of cypripedium, dendrobium and vanda orchids, lilies of the valley and Farleyense ferns, caught with white satin and maline. Instead of the customary shower attached to the ribbon was a cluster of cypripediums, nile green and silverine ribbon.

Many of the older florists attended the funeral service for Mrs. Walter S. Harvey Sunday evening, November 23, at the old homestead now occupied by her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Zuck, 902 James street, north side. The interment was Monday morning. Mrs. Harvey, who died Thursday night, November 20, was 96 years of age. She was the widow of Walter S. Harvey, who for many years was active in business circles on the north side. Twenty-five years ago he was identified with Ludwig & Richter, then engaged in selling cut flowers at the corner of Federal and Isabelle street. E. E. S.

The death of Councilman Enoch Rauh brought into prominence in the local papers his custom of always wearing a white carnation in his coat lapel in memory of his mother. Every day it appeared there, from morning till night.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was the best ever experienced, being over fifty per cent better than that of any previous year. Thanksgiving trade is getting to be as large as that of Christmas and Easter of a few years ago. There was a shortage of stock, or sales would have been even better than they were. There seems to have been a shortage over the entire country, as it was impossible to get stock anywhere. Everything that looked like a flower was sold, even such stock as usually goes into the trash box. There was a good demand for plants and every one that could be obtained was sold. There were a few good cyclamens, begonias and pompon chrysanthemum plants. The supply of chrysanthemums was good, but the demand for them was better; Dolly Dimple was the leader and sold as high as $1 each for the best blooms. Roses were scarce and the few that were in stock moved quickly at good prices. The demand for carnations also exceeded the supply. There was a good crop of orchids, and owing to the heavy demand for corsage bouquets they sold fast at good prices. Funeral work has been heavier during the week than at any time during the season.

Various Notes.

The executive committee of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, consisting of H. G. Bramm, president, of Bristol; Prof. G. M. Bentley, secretary-treasurer, of the University of Tennessee; A. H. Thursday morning found everyone scurrying around for enough stock to fill belated orders. Some retailers had an unfortunate experience in receiving out-of-town shipments at noon on Thursday, too late to be of much use, except for the following day.

Mums dropped out suddenly and the unexpected jump in price to the retailer was the cause of much explanation to prospective customers. Roses of all grades sold out early, short-stemmed stock being in unequal supply to the demand for corsage stock. The loss of the shipments of carnations from the Joseph H. Hill Co. to this market was a great inconvenience to the trade and necessitated shipments being sent here from other points to meet the demand. A large per cent of these shipments arrived in an unsalable condition. Pickling may be all right for immediate home consumption, but it is bad business when the stock is shipped out of town.

Among the miscellaneous stock, calendulas, baby primroses and sweet peas were quickly disposed of at good prices. In blooming plants begonias and cyclamens sold unusually well. Taken as a whole, business was a little better than last year. A year ago we had the flu and flu prices, so there ought not to be any cause for complaint now.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports business the best in the history of the firm, with many shipping orders cut in half on account of the scarcity of stock.

The Wm. Murphy Co. handled large quantities of rose stock, also mums and Nelrose snapdragons, which sold out quickly.

T. W. Hardesty & Co. were rushed to capacity with holiday business and debutante work.

Julius Baer reports a heavy run in all lines of stock. Begonias, cyclamens and Cleveland cherries are moving fast.

Robert Kelly's store, opposite the Hotel Sinton, attracted many customers and caused much favorable comment by timely window displays.

H. W. Sheppard finds this year's business even ahead of last year. This firm is having many opportunities to display its artistic resourcefulness and originality in arranging baskets, corsages and old-fashioned bouquets in the rainbow shades. H. E. K.

The Market.

Thanksgiving day this year was one of the most satisfactory that florists have ever recorded. Had the weather not changed Wednesday night to a cold rain followed by sleet and freezing temperature Thursday, it is probable that retail business would have been heavier. Wholesalers cleaned up completely and most of the retailers cleaned up on mums, which were plentiful. Growers were prepared for an emergency this year, profiting by the demands of last fall, and some had more than twice the number of plants they had in 1918. There was such a large crop of mums, in fact, that a survey of the greenhouses early in October caused some dealers to fear there would be losses later unless everything went just right. Fortunately, these fears were not realized, for everything did go just right. Business has been good for two months. Mums are finer than they have been in years and Thanksgiving, considered the opening of the real flower season, was a big day. The mum crop will be good for fully two weeks to come. Prices were not advanced for Thanksgiving, because there was plenty of stock. Mums range from $3 to $5; pompons sell at 50 and 75 cents per bunch; carnations are going at $5 and $6. The better grades of roses are from $8 to $20 and other grades from $6 to $12. Narcissi are coming in and will be in greater demand as soon as pompons are gone.

Coal Orders Strict.

The following orders were made by the local fuel administration to go into effect in Kansas City at midnight Sunday, November 30:

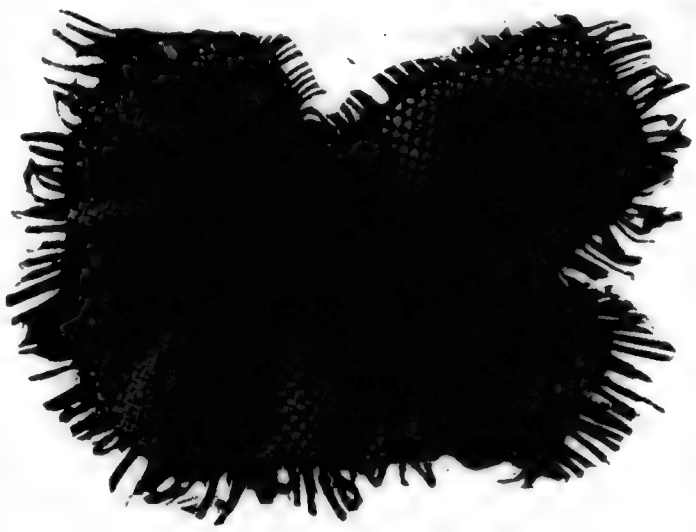
1. Motion pictures, theaters, dance halls, pool parlors and all places of amusement must close.
2. All stores, whether wholesale or retail, and all office buildings must open at 9 a. m. and close at 4 p. m. Grocery stores, restaurants and drug stores open for the filling of prescriptions are excepted.
3. Public meetings of every description, including clubs and lodges, must be discontinued; also weekday services in the churches, funerals excepted.
4. All schools in greater Kansas City, both public and private, day or night, must close.
5. In the homes only those rooms necessary to health should be heated and only such lights as are absolutely necessary should be burned.

"These rules," states C. H. Markham, of the fuel administration, "apply to everyone and they must be obeyed. Otherwise all electric current and all coal will be shut off from violators. Many persons believe they can operate after hours, provided they do not use light or heat. They cannot. I appreciate that it seems unfair to them, but if one does it the rest will insist upon doing it and the effectiveness of the order will be destroyed."

Florists, of course, like all other business men and women, will come under the ruling of the above order. The country clubs have been closed for two days, and orders for table decorations for various affairs have been canceled. No ruling has as yet been made concerning greenhouses, most of which have still sufficient coal to run for a month or two. One or two have coal enough on hand to carry them through the entire winter, a few burn oil and one grower has gas on his property. Just how these will be affected, whether the coal will be taken to supply families who have no fuel whatever, or how the situation will work out, remains to be seen. Growers hope, however, that they will be protected and that the strike will soon be settled.

Various Notes.

T. J. Noll & Co. handled a little over 60,000 mums Thanksgiving and the day before. So completely did they sell out that they had no stock to ship on wire orders Friday.



The 9-room residence of Allen A. Ackerson, Independence, Mo., was destroyed by fire last week. Nearly all the furniture and clothing of the family was saved. Mr. Ackerson's greenhouse, which is a short distance from the residence, was not damaged, as the wind was blowing in the opposite direction.

Mrs. R. C. Hinz, Leavenworth, Kan., was a visitor last week.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. is cutting stevia. It sold a good many roses on Thanksgiving orders.

There was a football game in Kansas City, Kan., Thanksgiving day, so that the call for mums was augmented on that side. Mrs. T. A. Moseley had a big day in mums.

be mums until Christmas and that they will be a great help, as roses are off crop now.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop has received a large quantity of fancy china and art ware and has sold a number of Christmas orders from these lines. This firm sold 1,500 mums November 26 and 27 and had a big decoration Friday night.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was good, but not exceptional. Stock cleared well, but there was no great abundance to dispose of.

Stock is scarce. Mums have been letting down fast and few remain. Eaton, Chadwick, Seidewitz and Hamburg Late White in limited amount are the only large varieties available, while three or four varieties of pompons are all of that type now in the market.

All flowers have been in good demand. Roses have been short, due to the cloudy weather. They are of good quality and clear quickly. Carnations are good property and have been selling at prices ranging from $4 to $8; however, December prices have risen a little and are now $5 to $9.

Various other offerings include calla lilies, which are coming in a little more freely, but are quickly utilized; orchids, a little stevia, some violets, calendulas, pansies and narcissi. The latter are just beginning to appear and sell at from $5 to $8.

Attention is again called to the next meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association, which will be held Tuesday, December 9, at New Albany. Announcements have been received of the marriage of Allan Humason, of the Raedlein Basket Co., of Chicago, to Miss Carrie Barz, Thursday, November 27.

A terrible wind storm swept through part of Indiana last Saturday and did considerable damage. With the exception of a few broken lights, Indianapolis florists were not affected. In Newcastle, however, the storm was more severe and badly damaged the old Heller Bros. range, now run by P. J. Lynch. The smokestack was blown down, causing considerable other loss. The Hartje & Elder range, southeast of the city, is for sale. This is a good-sized place of 48,000 square feet and is in fine condition. E. E. T.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A rain just before Thanksgiving made it difficult to get stock dry enough to ship and wholesalers had a good deal of trouble with their long-distance orders. Every year sees a decided increase in shipping business for Thanksgiving and this year was no exception. At the moment of writing it is too early to say how all the retailers fared, but there is every indication of a good holiday. Roses shortened up unaccountably just as they were needed, the outdoor stock being badly bruised, owing to high winds, and the indoor being off crop. Indoor carnations were about level with the demand, but more good field stock could have been sold. One grower was in with some fine late Hunter mums, but otherwise these flowers were in poor condition, the season being past. Appleton was the only yellow that was at all worth while as a shipper, J. anne Nonin the only good white. Small flowers are plentiful with the exception of sweet peas, which are scarce. A large demand is found for strawflowers and other everlastings for eastern shipments. Plumosus is short and higher in price. Other greens are about as last reported. In plants there are good cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias and primulas, but with the exception of cyclamens they are not plentiful. Ferns are of better quality and more plentiful. Stevia is in fine supply. Orchids are still scarce.

Frost on Thanksgiving night reduced the supply of stock here considerably. No severe damage was done to crops in general, but prices are much higher.

Various Notes.

Another horticultural landmark has been swept away in the march of progress. A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., has sold his property at Hollywood, having first removed the greenhouses. This is the same range that was formerly run by Mr. Borden and Mr. Dekema, the latter previously of Jensen & Dekema, carnation growers, in Chicago. Bassett & Washburn also used the greenhouses here for a time for propagating purposes and growing small kentias in preparation for their Sierra Madre place. But the property had been much too valuable for these purposes and Mr. Borden wears a broad smile when he thinks of the big addition to his bank balance.

Oscar Paishman, formerly with Morris Goldenson and more recently with Miss Hosp, of Riverside, has been out of the business for some time, but is coming back. He intends opening a store in a new building now being built in Long Beach, the largest in town and centrally located. He should do well.

P. J. Miller & Co. have their place fitted up in nice shape now and report good business, necessitating an addition to the staff already.

S. Murata & Co. are busy with the shipping end. Mr. Murata's little daughter is in trouble with her eyes, but all hope it is not serious. Miss Rohr is back at her place here, but still walks with a slight limp.

J. Dieterich has got over his troubles and although not looking at his best, yet is around the place attending to business.

Shipping business has been heavy with the L. A. Floral Co., several orders for long-distance work having to be turned down owing to scarcity of stock fit to ship. It is the policy here to turn down orders when the stock is not likely to carry well. Several carloads of humus were shipped last week and this material is gaining favor wherever tried.

T. Yakas, formerly of Oakland, helped with the Thanksgiving rush at the store of the Broadway Florist. Mr. Yakas intends locating here and will probably open a retail store in the near future.

A fine cut of Beauties is coming to W. Armacost & Co., and the demand is good. The new store arrangement is perfect and everything is running smoothly now.

The Superior Nursery is getting out large quantities of plants and C. Gutting, back from his hunting trip, is working like the proverbial Trojan. The stock of cyclamens is excellent and good blocks of such stock as Ficus pandurata, crotons and others are grown.

Frank Lichtenberg was in San Francisco last week purchasing stock. At the store a great display is made and all are busy. A wedding order last week wherein American Beauties and pink mums were leaders ran into big figures.

Paul Ecke reports that his poinsettias were not damaged by the frost Thanksgiving night. His stock is coming along well.

H. R. Richards.

Active demand and plenty of stock sums up the situation which existed last week in the local flower market. Thanksgiving shipping orders proved a heavy drain on the supply of stock here for several days before the holiday and the local demand was sufficiently strong to effect a close clean-up of supplies after out-of-town business was taken care of. There were many more or less elaborate dinner parties planned for the holiday and unusual liberality was evinced in preparing the decorations in conjunction with many of them. As far as business is concerned, the local florists had much to be thankful for on this Thanksgiving day.

J. A. AXELL, WHOLESALE FLORIST 461 Bush Street, San Francisco

Stock was all that could be desired. There were plenty of roses, carnations and a big supply of violets, as well as other seasonable stock, and a nice showing of chrysanthemums. Owing to the lack of rain and the little frost, chrysanthemums are having an unusually long season. Some years they are off the market before Thanksgiving, but this year they figured prominently in the special displays for this holiday and with a continuation of mild weather much good stock will continue to arrive for some little time. Hopes are even entertained that San Francisco will have chrysanthemums for Christmas. Large mums demand high prices, as does good stock generally.

A nice shipment of cut poinsettias arrived from the southern part of the state for Thanksgiving and found ready purchasers at the local stores.

In potted plants some nice azaleas were offered from near-by nurseries and begonias and cyclamens made a fine showing. Plants had a good call, as well as cut flowers. Large quantities of California red berries and pepper berries were shipped out of the city on Thanksgiving orders and the local demand took care of its full quota. These items show good quality this year. Greens are plentiful, but not in excess of the demand.

About the only stock shortage at present is in orchids. These choice blooms are still hard to get in large enough numbers to fill the requirements of the trade. Their scarcity is reflected in a particularly strong demand for gardenias, the latter being more plentiful than orchids and of particularly good quality.

Various Notes.

One of the busiest mornings on funeral work the local florists have had for some time came Wednesday, November 26, when former State Senator C. M. Belshaw, his wife, J. D. Sherwood, of Spokane, Wash., and his wife, all of whom met death together in an automobile accident Sunday, November 23, were buried. Many telegraphic orders were handled from other parts of the country and the aggregate of the floral tributes made a wonderful showing.

Mrs. Teresa Avansino, in whose family are several florists, died at her home in this city, November 23, leaving the following sons and daughters to mourn her loss: Louis, David, Henry, J. R. and John Avansino, Mrs. Kate Antonini, Mrs. Mary Capurro and Mrs. Lena Orero. Funeral services were held November 26 at her late residence on Green street, thence to Sts. Peter and Paul church. Mrs. Avansino was a native of Italy.

The growth of J. A. Axell's new wholesale business has been so rapid that he is compelled to provide larger quarters within two months after starting. A lease has been secured on the remainder of the ground floor of the building at 461 Bush street, part of which is already occupied, and the additional space has just been made ready for occupancy. This gives the Axell business a floor space of 30 x 125 feet, with a full basement of the same size. Here a fine showing of roses was seen last week, including fine Hadley and Ophelia and choice long-stemmed Russell. In commenting upon the latter, Mr. Axell said that there is no rose on the market which he thinks comes up to Russell and he believes growers would do well in devoting more space to it in this vicinity. ness was all that could be desired at this establishment, a success which augurs well for the year-end holidays, according to Mr. Axell. Mrs. Axell's services have been recalled, owing to the rush in business and lack of time to break someone in.

The day before Thanksgiving Joseph's had a rush of funeral orders in addition to the extra holiday business. This firm made two orchid palls for a man and his wife that morning. George Wagner, decorator for this firm, received many compliments upon a banquet decoration which he arranged in the Italian room of the St. Francis hotel, during the recent convention of Shriners in this city. The guest of honor was from Pennsylvania and Mr. Wagner took as his theme for the centerpiece the signing of the treaty in that state between the Quakers and the Indians. Quantities of large bronze chrysanthemums were used. Joseph Thomas, formerly identified with the trade in Oakland, Cal., and more recently with the MacRorie-McLaren Co. in this city, has taken a position with Joseph's.

A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., says there is plenty of good stock and plenty of business.

Domoto Bros. are bringing in some fine specimens of azalea plants and expect to have a nice lot of potted poinsettias, cyclamens, heather, etc., for the Christmas season. They are filling a big demand for a new baby rose which was produced at their range and is proving popular on account of its rich pink color.

The United Flower & Supply Co. has just received a large new stock of baskets and other florists' supplies for the holiday season. Shipping business continues brisk at this establishment.

Mrs. Copeland has been busy with Thanksgiving decorations and funeral work. The first poinsettias of the season attracted much attention at her store in Sutter street.

The E. W. McLellan Co. reports a splendid Thanksgiving shipping business. Henry Avansino, manager for this company, was away on account of the death of his mother and his force was rushed just that much more in taking care of the orders.

A new catalogue has just been issued by the H. A. Hyde Co., of Watsonville, Cal. The book contains a full list of fruit trees, ornamentals, bulbs and house plants.

C. Kooyman has no complaints to make about business, as the shipping demand is strong and local sales keep up well.

Enomoto & Co. had a big shipping business in violets for Thanksgiving.

The Market.

Turner chrysanthemums are better than ever in both quantity and quality, especially the yellow, and sell readily at $1 each. White and yellow Mensa and pompons are finding a ready sale and prove more popular each year. California mums are off the market now, as local growers can meet all needs. Carnations, Spokane's special pride, are in excellent condition. Roses are also of good quality and more plentiful this year, as most of the growers have planted an extra house of them. The market has always been short of local stock to meet the demand. The California violets are arriving in first-class condition and are of good quality; the demand is brisk. Cyclamens are coming to the market and prove as popular as ever; according to all indications there will be some wonderful stock for Christmas to take the place of azaleas.

Florists' Club the table decorations were unusual, being the famous Glenrose Greenhouse beans, which have now reached the size of vegetable marrow.

Peters & Sons, of Hillyard, Wash., have lost their boiler house by fire. Several of the greenhouses were burned on the ends, but owing to the mild weather no damage was done to the growing stock. At present they are moving a large crop of lettuce, which is grown as a side line.

Mr. Lozier, of E. S. Eugene's store, reports large sales of the Lozier flower basket.

Miss Sadie McInnis, formerly with Donart's House of Flowers, has accepted a position with the Hoyt Bros. Co.

The remodeling of Donart's House of Flowers is completed and A. Boehning is expecting big business.

A. J. Burt reports much funeral work.

Jack Burt, of Jack Burt's Flower Shop, has had a fine display of mums.

Harry Saunders, of Donart & Louis, Coeur d'Alene, Ida., has been calling on the trade. His firm has recently been shipping some fine blooms of white and yellow Turner.

H. E. Reimers has had many sales of the concrete flower pot machine.

Davenport's, of which E. A. Hedger is manager, continues to have a large amount of corsage work. H. H.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The market conditions are all that could be desired. There is a large showing of first-class flowers and the demand for them cleans them up about as fast as they arrive. We have never seen a finer lot of first-class stock at this time of the year than is being shown now. Chrysanthemums, especially, are the finest that have ever been shown in this market. Possibly business will not come up to that of last year, on account of the influenza epidemic, which swept over the country last year and which required everything in the way of flowers for funerals, but business is a great deal better than it was two years ago.

Among the potted plants being offered are primroses, cyclamens and ferns. The newer arrivals in flowers are ericas, Paper Whites and sweet peas and the trade is being well supplied with fine orchids. L. T. S.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, R. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

MANY seed houses find the Dutch bulb season tailing over into the month devoted to Christmas greens.

THE giganteums are cleaning up rapidly. There will be few for cold storage, or for forcing on a partnership basis.

PENDING the establishment of a wages board, British seedsmen may formulate standards of pay, in order to anticipate government action.

IT looks like a clean-up for the Dutch bulbs in spite of the delay on the dock. Those who have advertised their surpluses to the trade have found prompt takers.

"WHENEVER you come across a man everybody likes, you will usually find a glass cover over his face and floral wreaths in the room," says Robert Nicholson.

THE Missouri Seed Dealers' Association held a meeting at Jefferson City November 24. President D. I. Bushnell, of St. Louis, presided over the meeting, during which many important matters were disposed of.

IT was the seed season of 1917 that Patrick O'Mara, general manager of Peter Henderson & Co., offered the opinion that it had set a record which will stand until there has been a material increase in the population.

IF wages are so high that they have increased absenteeism to a point never known in the history of American industry, why should it be expected that men who will not work for money will bend their backs over beets and beans?

THE fall in the price of most kinds of seeds has not solved the problems of the commission box people. After having decided to go back to the 5-cent packet they find the rising cost of doing business, particularly of labor, is upsetting their calculations.

FROM the British seed firm, Hurst & Son, London, comes the report of a season favorable, on the whole, to harvesting operations. "Most descriptions of seeds have been well saved and are in good condition, although in some cases deficient in quantity."

THE firm of Segers Bros., Lisse, Holland, one of the most widely known bulb growers, is being turned, January 1, 1920, into a limited liability stock company under the name of Segers Bros., Ltd. A. Schravendeel will represent the concern in America, arriving this month.

THE end of the printing trades' strike in New York did not come a day too soon for the seedsmen who look to that center. Not a few of the books usually produced there have been placed in open shops in other cities, but making a catalogue in a print shop that doesn't know the trade's language is not wholly a joy.

IN a front-page announcement in the London Times the British Horticultural Trades Association warned the public against purchasing cheap bulbs and seeds from unknown Dutch or British advertisers. "For its own protection against fraud," read the notice, "the public is earnestly advised to deal with reputable seedsmen and nurserymen only." The editor of the Times commented on the advertisement in the news columns.

AN increased number of seed catalogues will price everything by weight for 1920. The cental system has justified its adoption.

THERE will, of course, be a big seed season in 1920, but to figure on a record demand is to fail to recognize the fact that people fully employed at high wages do not garden strongly.

VILMORIN-ANDRIEUX & Co., Paris, have given notice that H. Frank Darrow Co., New York, no longer represents the French house in America. It was a connection of more than twenty years' standing.

Plant Quarantine Inflexible.

While chambers of commerce, merchants' associations and other progressive bodies are trying to boost foreign trade as a means of insuring prosperity for the American people, such autocratic government boards as that at present controlling horticultural commerce are doing their best to kill the business—at least so it seems to those most vitally interested.

As an example of the inflexibility of the regulations, McHutchison & Co., New York, recently addressed the following letter to the representative of the Federal Horticultural Board in their city:

Following the visit of our Mr. C. B. Knickman, we state the situation in writing and request that you lay the facts before Washington and advise us of decision as soon as possible. The facts are these:

Owing to the sinking of the S. S. Yoten Maru off Yokohama, which was bringing our earliest large consignment of lily bulbs to New York via Panama canal route, and the holding back of 1,000 cases in Seattle due to lack of refrigerator cars, we are short of lily bulbs here, and the 8 or 10 carloads now en route cannot arrive in time.

You can understand that this will be a big loss to us. But, on the other hand, we have a small surplus in London, Ont., Canada, which we would like to bring to New York by express, but your regulations prevent this being done—unless you are willing to strain a point to meet the situation.

The Canadian shipment went through in bond from Yokohama to London via Vancouver, and while we have not yet received shipping documents from Japan, we assume that no certificate of inspection is attached to the documents, nor health certificates or sterilization certificates on the cases—as these are not required by Canadian laws. This, of course, is merely conjecture on our part, but we must assume there are none. What we would like to bring from London are the following cases:

50 cases Lilium Giganteum, 7 to 9-inch.
10 cases Lilium Giganteum, 8 to 10-inch.
25 cases Lilium Giganteum, 9 to 10-inch.

As the soil in which these are packed comes from the side of a mountain taken many feet from the surface, there can be no danger of insect pests or plant diseases being introduced through this medium; but we are willing to confine shipments to points around New York, so that you can arrange for the disposition of the soil used as packing material if you so desire.

Stumpp & Walter Co

30-32 Barclay Street, NEW YORK CITY

Kindly take up this matter promptly with Washington, for we expect to receive at least 1,500 cases within three weeks, so that there would be no advantage in getting this small lot from Canada unless we could get them in by express ahead of the freight shipments en route. Thanking you in advance for your decision, we remain.

The reply came from Harry B. Snow, pathological inspector in charge, room 305 Custom House, New York, as follows:

Reference is made to your letter of the 19th instant, in regard to shipments of lily bulbs from Japan which have been routed to a Canadian point and which you surmised to have been packed in unsterilized soil because the shipper was under the impression that they were intended for the Canadian market and not for that of the United States. In reply to your query as to whether the board will allow such bulbs to be shipped into the United States, I have to advise you that the board considers it impossible to permit the entry of such bulbs into this country and that strict compliance with the soil sterilization requirements must be insisted upon. Doubtless you will be able to dispose of the bulbs in Canada.

Apparently no assistance can be looked for from the authorities unless it can be shown that the proposed importation is for the purpose of establishing American production.

INVESTIGATIONS OF SEEDS.

Seed Importations.

Activities regarding investigation of seed supplies last year are described in the recently issued report of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, as follows:

"During the last year comparatively few lots of seed have been offered for entry which did not comply with the requirements of the seed importation act. The most striking exceptions have been certain lots of Canadian alsike-clover screenings which have been imported for the purpose of recleaning.

"Of those seeds covered by the act the importations during the fiscal year 1919 have been few as compared with 1917 and the preceding year, with the exception of alsike-clover, of which 7,000,000 pounds were imported, as compared with 3,500,000 pounds last year and 4,500,000 pounds the previous year, these three years being those of largest importation of this kind of seed. It is evident that practically this entire quantity of alsike-clover seed was put into consumption, so there will be little, if any, carry-over of the seed imported during the fiscal year.

"There was a remarkable falling off in the quantity of rapeseed imported, 639,000 pounds this year as compared with more than 11,250,000 pounds last year, both years' importations coming principally from Japan.

Seed Testing.

"During the year, 18,820 samples of seed were received for test at the Washington laboratory and 10,252 at the five branch laboratories maintained in cooperation with state institutions.

"Following a conference with seedsmen in the summer of 1917, representatives of the seed trade associations and a large number of individual seedsmen agreed to label all lots of field and forage-crop seeds sold in quantities of ten pounds or more with the percentage of pure live seed, the date of the germination test and in certain cases the country of origin. In the spring of 1918 seeds of redtop and red clover were purchased and examined to determine to what extent this agreement was kept. This examination showed that only ten per cent of the lots of seeds purchased were found to be fully labeled in accordance with the agreement.

"Practically all of the larger seed dealers now have facilities for testing seeds and know the quality of the seeds they are handling, but apparently most of them are not passing on to the farmer this information, which is of vital importance to him.

Congressional Seed Distribution.

"During the fiscal year 1919 there were distributed on congressional and miscellaneous requests 8,072,791 packages of vegetable seed and 883,136 packages of flower seed, or a total of 8,955,927 packages, each containing five packets of different kinds of seed. There were also distributed 12,122 packages of lawn grass seed and 10,368 packages of imported narcissus and tulip bulbs. The seeds and bulbs were purchased on competitive bids, as heretofore. Each lot of seed purchased was thoroughly tested for purity and viability before acceptance by the Bureau of Plant Industry and tests of each lot of seed were conducted on the trial grounds of the Department of Agriculture to determine its trueness to type."

TROUBLE BREWING.

Demand for Warranty of Seeds.

"In the majority of cases it is undoubtedly far cheaper for the gardener to buy his vegetable seed than to attempt to grow it," said E. R. Bennett, of Boise, Ida., at a recent convention of veteran truckers. "It is probable, too, that the average garden seed sold by seedsmen is from better stock and more carefully rogued than is home-saved seed. Notwithstanding this fact, it is believed there are great possibilities for improvement in crops for the man who understands plant breeding, in growing his own seed. One of the large market gardeners of New England, who grows his own onion seed, told us that he could buy the seed for less than half the cost to grow it, but that because of the uncertainty as to the variety and quality of seed bought, he did not care to take the chance.

A Claim for Damages.

"A more recent case is still more to the point. A gardener in Idaho with whom we have been in rather close touch, experienced a severe loss last season from securing poor seed. One and one-half pounds of cauliflower seed were planted on about two acres of ground. The plants started well, but soon began to diverge in type and habit of growth. We saw this field in early August. At that time the grower had great hopes of a profitable crop, although we called his attention to the fact that the plants were not uniform and at least a large percentage of them were off type. Later we were called upon to make a written statement as to the conditions as we saw them. The crop eventually not only proved to be off type, but was a total loss, as there was hardly a head of cauliflower in the whole field. The seed alone cost $75 and this was only a small part of the loss, as the crop was expected to bring at least $1,000 per acre, which it would have done had it been high-grade Snowball cauliflower as represented. This case may have been the result of an error, but it looked much more like crooked work somewhere along the line, as the product of the seed ranged all the way from cauliflower through brussels sprouts and cabbage to kale.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

Japanese Lilies, French and Dutch Bulbs

90-92 West Broadway NEW YORK

"In such cases there should be some way of fixing the responsibility and punishing those guilty of the fraud. As it is practically impossible for the gardener to produce his own cauliflower seed, the only safe procedure is to secure such seed from firms who are reliable and responsible in case of mistakes."

SEED-TESTING IN CANADA.

The Dominion of Canada seed branch, with laboratories at Ottawa, Winnipeg and Calgary, reported over 35,000 seed tests for the year ending June 30. The growth of seed testing in Canada is indicated from the fact that only 5,775 samples were reported in 1909. The great bulk of the work in the seed laboratories is done between September and June, when each laboratory may handle up to 200 samples per day. Only ten samples are tested free of charge for any farmer or seed merchant during the season. Over this number, the service is charged for at cost.

Official seed testing is the basis of government seed control, which in older European countries is rated as a leading government service to agriculture. The Canadian system is frequently referred to in other countries as being the most practical and efficient. It is now being required that imported seeds be not released from bond until they have been approved at the seed laboratories.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE nursery trade never had a better fall business, but the quantity of stock stored for spring is not so large as would be liked.

BRITISH nurserymen are required to pay a certain standard of wages according to the law by which they are grouped with agricultural industries.

"THE Orchards of France" will be the subject of an address by Lloyd C. Stark, of Louisiana, Mo., at the Tennessee State Horticultural Society's meeting at Nashville December 9.

AT a recent joint meeting of the agricultural and forest preservation committees of the Chamber of Commerce of Lawton, Okla., it was decided to plant 40,000 seedlings in the 2½-acre plot of land given by the city for a nursery in North Addition.

IT would seem that conditions in the trade justify a further advance in nearly all lines of nursery stock. Prices are not up to the level of other commodities, but production has been so reduced by labor shortage that first-class stock should be salable at a fair profit.

TENNESSEE NURSERYMEN.

The Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association will hold its annual convention at Nashville December 10, with its headquarters at the Hotel Hermitage. It will be called to order by President George W. Poague, of Graysville, who will deliver the address of welcome and the president's annual message, followed by the report of Secretary-Treasurer G. M. Bentley, of Knoxville.

The program of addresses to be presented before the convention is as follows:

"The Value of Publicity in the Form of Advertising to Nurserymen," by L. A. Niven, Birmingham, Ala.

"What the Members of the American Association of Nurserymen Are Doing and Planning to Do," by John Watson, executive secretary of the American Nurserymen's Association, Princeton, N. J.

"Roses," by Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.

"Fruit Tree Stocks Used in Propagation," by H. P. Gould, pomologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture.

"Ornamental Nursery Stock," by Bruce Howell, of Knoxville, and C. H. Twitschler, of Nashville.

"Broad-leaved Evergreens," by George B. Moulder, of Nashville.

"The Importance of Soil Selection and Fertility," by Harry Nicholson, of Winchester.

"June Buds," by Willie Shadow, of Winchester.

"Field-grown Roses," by S. W. Crowell, of Roseacres, Miss.

"Propagation Methods," by A. A. Newson, of Knoxville.

"Our Association," by W. Y. C. Grant, of Columbia.

"Nursery Salesmen," by Gilbert Marshall, of Winchester; W. E. Potter, of Smithville; W. M. Roeder, of McMinnville, and Joe Shadow, of Winchester.

"Timely Precautions for Nurserymen," by J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, Tex.; E. N. Chattin, of Winchester, and Henry B. Chase, of Chase, Ala.

TACKLING PROBLEMS ON COAST.

Mrs. Ruth Day, president of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen, who appears under the heading "Who's Who in the Trade and Why" on another page this week, says regarding the work of the Pacific Coast Association:

"We hope to accomplish big things this coming year. Our biggest problem has been and still is to obtain coöperation among the nurserymen. They are almost as hard to unite as the farmers, but we have made great strides in the last few years and feel much encouraged.

"The biggest current problem we have to tackle is publicity. This has been sadly neglected by the nursery trade in the past, and we have to take our hats off to the florists for realizing the value of it in advance of us, or rather, putting their realization into practice. The campaign they have so successfully carried on the last two years has been an eye-opener to the nurserymen.

"Our work in this line will be founded upon education, for lack of it regarding trees and plants is the cause of much disaster to the average planter. We shall aim to teach the public the best methods of planting and caring for nursery stock after purchased, as well as the wise selection of varieties and location; how to beautify the home grounds with a moderate expenditure when it is necessary, and to clear up many points about tree and plant life which have been mysterious to the layman. We expect to accomplish this through coöperation of our state agricultural colleges, lectures, newspaper and magazine articles and possibly moving pictures.

"There is much preliminary work to be done before we can make any definite announcements of our program, but we hope to report progress shortly."

REDUCING LIST OF VARIETIES.

Leading in the movement to reduce the number of varieties grown by nurserymen, Harrison's Nurseries, Berlin, Md., are pruning the list in their catalogue, making extraordinary efforts to weed out the varieties superfluous and unprofitable to nurserymen in the general run. In their special price list of fruit and ornamental trees, Senator Orlando Harrison makes this statement:

During the last few years my brother, George A. Harrison, and my son, G. Hale Harrison, as well as myself, have visited most of the fruit-growing sections of the United States. The purpose of these journeys was to secure first-hand knowledge of the varieties and of the largest and most profitable orchards.

At various times we have visited the peach orchards of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Texas, Missouri, New York and other large fruit-growing sections. In all of these places we found that four varieties stood first and foremost—Carman, Hiley, Belle of Georgia and Elberta. Of course, we found a few other varieties, but these seem to be sorts with a local reputation, and in no case did a grower have large plantings of these without regard to the variety.

Nor is the choice of apples much wider. In West Virginia, Maryland, Maine, in the Atlantic coast states and in the extreme west a limited number of varieties furnish the great crops. In these sections the principal varieties grown are Grimes, McIntosh, Jonathan, Stayman Winesap, Winesap, Wealthy, Yellow Transparent, Williams, Oldenburg, Northwestern, York Imperial and Delicious.

These investigations confirmed the tests in our orchards in and around Berlin, where we have over 1,000 acres of fruiting trees about equally divided between apples and peaches. We have the "Big Four Peaches" and our fifth is the Ray. Likewise we have the chief varieties of apples.

We know the varieties that are the money-makers in commercial orchards and the desirable sorts for home planting; and from now on we purpose to propagate, to recommend, to sell only such varieties.

Other sorts may be valuable in certain sections, and we shall continue to propagate and sell such local varieties, but let me emphasize the fact that the twelve varieties of apples and the five varieties of peaches listed above are unquestionably the cream for most sections.

IMPORTATION OF SEEDLINGS.

With regard to the importation of ornamental seedlings under Quarantine No. 37, the Federal Horticultural Board has ruled as follows:

"The admission of fruit stocks and certain rose stocks under regulation 3 of Quarantine No. 37 has led to inquiries as to the possibilities of admission of similar stocks of ornamentals. These inquiries have reference chiefly to seedlings, i. e., lining out stock to be imported and either grown to salable sizes and then sold or used as stocks for budding or grafting, the plants thus produced to be sold. Such importations are entirely distinct from plants imported to furnish buds, scions or other needs of plant propagation and not for the sale of the plants actually imported, provision for the entry of which when not available in the United States has already been made in regulation 14.

"Importers are advised that the importation of ornamental seedlings for the purposes indicated is not permitted under Quarantine No. 37. It is expected that such ornamentals will be ultimately produced in this country to meet essential needs and provision is made in the quarantine for the entry of seeds of such plants both for direct production and to supply necessary stocks for grafting, etc. This may mean in some instances a delay of a few years before adequate supplies will be made available, but in the meantime the essential needs of this country can be met by the substitution of other and American-grown plants. It should be noted that finished fruit trees, namely grafted or budded plants, and finished rose plants are placed in the same class with ornamentals and are not permitted entry.

"One exception may be made to this ruling, namely, if it should become apparent that any ornamental for which there may be a substantial horticultural need can not be successfully grown in this country from seed, the board is willing to give special consideration to such cases and if such condition is demonstrated to the satisfaction of the board and confirmed after experimentation or otherwise by the experts of this department, entry under regulation 14 of a reasonable quantity of such seedling plants may be authorized.

"The provisions for the importation of new varieties and propagating stock not available in this country for reproduction purposes are detailed in a circular letter of this board (HB-105), and in the form of application for special permit under regulation 14 (HB-107). These documents will be supplied on request."

NEW FRUIT STOCKS.

"One of the big problems of American fruit growing," states the report of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture for the last year, "is that of stocks resistant to diseases and insects and suitable for our wide range of soil and climate. Promising new stocks of pear, apple, peach, cherry and plum have been assembled from foreign countries, chiefly the orient. Nearly 150 pounds of seed from pear trees supposed to be resistant to fire-blight have been secured through exploration in China. Seedling stocks are being grown at widely separated places and distributions are being made to nurserymen and others in order to determine their disease resistance, congeniality and adaptability to varying soils and climates. About 75,000 new pear stocks have been distributed."

Englewood, N. J.—The Meadow Brook Nurseries has been incorporated in 1919 as successor to John M. Hunter & Son, who established the flower and plant business in 1870. The officers are: President, E. M. Carman; vice-president, Robert F. Greene; secretary and treasurer, B. T. McGill. The company provides anything wanted, from a bride's bouquet to plowing a field or building a road. The headquarters are at 275 Grand avenue.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful also to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

MAINS IN HOT WATER SYSTEM.

I am building two houses, 21x75 and 25x75, to be heated by hot water. The houses run east and west and are well protected on all sides from the wind. The boiler is a large tubular boiler and has three outlets, one 4-inch, one 3-inch and one 2-inch, and two returns, a 4-inch and a 3-inch. I have on hand about forty feet of 4-inch pipe, 160 feet of 3-inch pipe and fifteen feet of 2½-inch pipe. I have also four runs of seventy-five feet each of 2-inch pipe and twenty-six runs of seventy-five feet each of 1½-inch pipe. The temperature desired is 55 to 60 degrees and the outside temperature seldom drops below zero for any length of time. I had planned to use the 4-inch pipe for a main flow, feeding two 3-inch pipes which would hang under the ridge in each house. Then on each side wall I had planned to place the 2-inch pipe. Then the 1½-inch pipe was to be used under the benches. I hardly think it will take all the pipe that I have listed above.

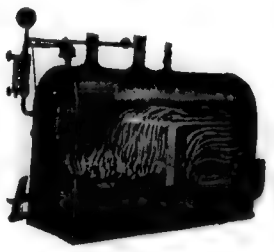
Please tell me how to pipe the houses with the pipe that I have on hand, not using any more than is necessary. I intend to build on each side of these houses some day and wish to take that into consideration in piping these houses.

W. G. L.—Colo.

The sketch accompanying the letter shows that the houses are built side by side and that the wider house has four feet of glass and five feet of siding in the exposed wall. Whether there is glass in the wall of the other house is not indicated.

The piping on hand will provide about what is required in the way of radiation and the plan suggested for installing the system would in the main be found satisfactory.

The principal change we advise is in regard to the mains. We should not attempt to heat both houses with a 4-inch main, but should use this to supply the larger house. A 3-inch overhead flow pipe will answer fairly well for the smaller house, but will not give the desired results in the house twenty-four feet wide. Run the 4-inch main to where the 3-inch flow would be taken off and then reduce to 2-inch pipe and run this as a flow on the plate of the outer wall. With this, feed a coil of three 1½-inch pipes placed upon the wall. At the farther end of this house, connect the overhead 3-inch flow pipe with three coils, each containing three 1½-inch returns, placed under each of the 5-foot benches, and with a coil of two 2-inch returns on the inner wall of the house.



While a 3-inch flow pipe connected directly with the boiler will supply the pipes. Altogether, six 1½-inch returns will be needed in these coils if there is no glass in the outer wall, while eight should be used if there is four feet of glass.

In arranging the return mains, care should be taken to provide approximately the same capacity as that of the flow pipes which supply them.

As outlined above, in addition to using the run of 3-inch pipe and three runs of 2-inch pipe in one house and one run in the other house, there will be twelve runs of 1½-inch pipe in the wide house and either twelve or fourteen runs in the other house. With the 4-inch pipe and the 2½-inch pipe used for the flow and return mains, this will use practically all of the pipe on hand and may require a few feet additional of 3-inch and 2-inch pipe, if the flow and return mains are run as suggested.

FROM COAL TO CRUDE OIL.

I have a house 32x154, with five runs of pipe and three lines of pipe in each run, making fifteen 2-inch lines of pipe in the house. If I were to substitute crude oil for coal, would it be practicable and economical to heat each section of pipe as per enclosed diagram with a manifold representing a miniature boiler, thus having five manifolds and heating only the water in the pipes, not what is in the 5-inch mains nor the vast amount that is in the boiler? Coal is a serious problem and the night man is liable to walk off, leaving me in the lurch. I shall have to put in a large tank for oil storage. What kind of burners could be used and how much oil would be needed to heat each line of pipe for sixty hours, keeping the water at 175 degrees? My reason for wishing to heat each run separately is that we have much mild weather and I could use three runs of pipe many nights, instead of having them all attached and heating the big pipes at the end where they connect.

I read in The Review a few weeks ago about one man's method of taking care of the fumes from his oil burner, and I had that plan in mind. Will the oil burn by gravity or will a forced blast be necessary? B. J. P.—Pa.

What is proposed is to substitute five small boilers, to be heated with crude oil, for the present large boiler, heated by means of coal. There seem to be several objections to this plan, aside from the cost of making the installation. We doubt whether it will be possible to arrange anything in the way of a "man-ifold" which will have sufficient heating surface to handle 300 square feet of radiation, which is approximately the amount in each coil. If the present boiler and mains are properly insulated, the loss of heat will not be great and can hardly be more than from five independent heating systems.

We appreciate the objections to the use of coal, but would prefer to install an oil burner for the large boiler, rather than put in five small "manifolds." It is generally found advisable to use some form of air or steam jet for feeding the oil. There are several such burners in the market and some local heating engineer can doubtless supply them. Even with the large boiler, it will only be necessary to have valves on the flow pipes when the weather makes it possible to reduce the heat for the house. Then one or more pipes can be shut off in whole or in part, as is deemed necessary.

The Market.

Market conditions both before and after Thanksgiving day have been beneficial to all the trade. The growers were able to cut a good quantity of stock for the holiday. While prices remained but fair on ordinary stock, the retailer had thus a chance to offer his patrons flowers on a holiday without the usual sharp advance in price.

There was an especially heavy cut of mums, both large, medium and pompons. Roses were in fair supply and of excellent quality. Violets were scarce and prices advanced about fifty per cent. A few poor sweet peas brought more than they were worth. Carnations are still scarce and there appears to be no likelihood of a heavy cut till after Christmas.

The day following Thanksgiving found the retailers eager to buy, showing that a good clean-up was made on heavy purchases. The market, however, was about depleted and ruling prices were higher than those before the holiday.

There was not a steady run of funeral work in November, nor has there been an abundance of large work in any line. The market has afforded an abundance of stock throughout. Bad though some growers may feel in comparing this with last year's returns, they have reason rather to feel grateful, for the wholesaler has labored under a heavy market. Those who cut flowers in the next thirty days will be fortunate.

The Market.

The colder weather has had its effect on the market, both in decreasing production and in increasing prices. In the latter part of last week incoming stock by express was stopped by the embargo. Thanksgiving stock was a bit scarce, although large quantities were moved. The retailers report that business was the best they have ever known, with chrysanthemums the only flowers that sold in large quantities.

Chrysanthemums arriving are quickly cleared, being a bit short in supply. Dolly Dimple leads in quality. Some stores colored the Eatons pink, which helped to sell them. Chadwick and Golden Chadwick are about over. Pompons have shortened up in supply, as the Thanksgiving business used up all those that could be cut; those to be had now are of second quality.

Roses are of good quality and at times a bit scarce. Premier is the best, with Russell and Columbia close behind but clearing more easily because somewhat cheaper; Wards are scarce. Carnations are of fine quality and sell well in all colors. Sweet peas, calendulas and snapdragons find a good demand and the supply is short. Stevia and Paper Whites are plentiful. Violets and orchids have been scarce, because of increased demand.

Various Notes.

The storm hit this city Saturday, November 29, and did considerable damage, blowing in the windows in the stores of John M. Carey and W. B. Brown.

As a result of the storm, Thomas Browne, of Greenfield, Mich., had his force working all day Sunday closing up the broken glass; he also had difficulty in pumping water into the boilers.

Sidney Beard, of Beard Bros., sustained extremely serious injuries when the smokestack was blown over, crashing through his home, hitting him and breaking his back and head. He was taken unconscious to Harper hospital. Charles Plumb had the men at the range working to save the stock from frost.

J. Evans, of Hamilton avenue, passed the cigars last week; the trade congratulates him. H. T.

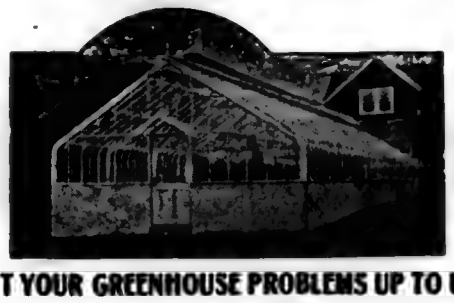
Muck Soils

The thick, heavy, impervious soils require considerable ventilation which charcoal provides better than anything else. It also acts as a liberator of many plant growth essentials in such soils which are otherwise unavailable to the plants.

Charcoal lightens such soils, assists in their drainage and provides an absorbent for their excessive moisture.



'OLE PIT Charcoal (extra fine, size 20) will be found the most valuable for such purposes, since it is genuine hearth-burned hardwood charcoal and has full chemical qualities.

The Market.

The market has been cleaning up well. Business for Thanksgiving was better than that of the previous year. Chrysanthemums, of which there were fine Golden Wedding, Dolly Dimple and Bonnaffon, were short of the demand. Pompons were plentiful and, after the rush, were about all there was to offer. Roses were far short of the demand and realized from $6 to $25 per hundred. Carnations cleaned up well at $6 per hundred. Stevia met a ready sale, being some of the first in this market. Violets were short of the demand and many rose and pompon corsages were substituted. Narcissi cleaned up well at $6.

TORONTO, ONT.

The Market.

The demand for flowers has assumed the proportions which existed before the war. The people appear to have money and are spending it freely; also they are giving a large number of receptions and dances. While the amount of flowers purchased for each dance may be comparatively small, the aggregate amounts to a great deal. The florists are benefiting by this in the number of corsage bouquets they are now called upon to make up.

A visit to some of the greenhouses reveals a fair outlook for Christmas stock. At the present moment it is scarce and is probably being held for the larger Christmas demand. The prices have already advanced and a further advance may be expected before Christmas.

Various Notes.

The regular business meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club will be held in its rooms December 8. The growers have been invited to attend. It is hoped that the growers may be persuaded to coöperate with the retailers for the betterment of the trade in general.

C. L. Vis, of the firm of Van Meeuwen & Tegelaar, Holland, wholesale bulb merchants, was in Toronto last week calling on the trade.

The late Herman J. Simmers left an estate valued at $156,813. This is left to the widow, his sister, his nephews and niece. The estate was chiefly real estate, including shares in property on Yonge street and King street and an interest in J. A. Simmers & Sons, Ltd.

During the mum season there were some gorgeous window displays, but at the present time the demand is so great that flowers are made up just as soon as they are received. As a result the window displays have been suffering and there have been no outstanding displays recently.

J. J. Higgins has a new truck. It is finished in blue enamel, with his name in the usual signature script and "Say It with Flowers" below.

The park commissioner of Toronto is planning a civic nursery. The land will cost $35,000 and will probably be located near Brampton. J. J. H.

Hamilton, Ont.—John Morgan has sold his greenhouses in this city and is leaving the business.

SUBSTITUTES BY TALK.

Is there value to you in an endurance test of 50 years in greenhouse sash? It is reported to us that sash made of heart Cypress by a prominent greenhouse contractor in Chicago and placed in position in a greenhouse at Des Plaines, Ill., in 1868, are still doing service.

Jacob Fries, Bethlehem, Pa., has Cypress sash that have stood the racket for 30 years and are still on the job. And these are not isolated cases—they represent no more than a fair test of "The Wood Eternal" for greenhouse use.

It will serve you as well and save you the nuisance and expense of repairs and replacements.

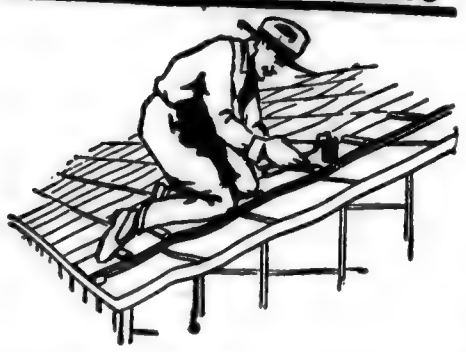
The argument backed by such facts cannot be answered by mere talk. Ask the manufacturer or contractor who wants to give you a "substitute" for Cypress to cite you to an endurance test of 30 or 50 years to the credit of the so-called "substitute."

That is no more than a fair precaution on your part—good, ordinary business sense.

If he would meet the Cypress record with more talk, and no test, then there's a "nigger in that woodpile." You know you would better pass up the "substitute" and stick to the real article, which is Cypress.

"PECKY" CYPRESS. You greenhouse men know how common it looks and how uncommon it lasts. The U. S. Govt. Rept. (Forest Service Bul. 95) says—"That the disease (which produces the 'peck') has been a long time preying upon Cypress timber is apparent from an examination of Cypress logs dug from alluvial deposits many feet below the present level of the Gulf of Mexico. Some of that prehistoric timber is pecky, though it has been buried during a period estimated at no less than 30,000 years. . . . The effect of the disease (known as 'Pecky') . . . is believed to act as a preservative . . . and to hinder decay."

Is 30,000 years' "hindering of decay" long enough for YOUR greenhouse?



There is no known record of rotten "Pecky." Use nothing else for benches and bench standards. It is cheap, too.
A postal will do, a letter is better—either brings a booklet or two from the famous CYPRESS Pocket Library (a strictly authoritative reference work). Vol. 8 is all about "GREENHOUSES." It is FREE. Send for it. Also ask for Vol. 2, on "Pecky"—a money-saver. Take no hearsay. GET THE FACTS. Then ACT. Vol. 4 is the Barn Book; Vol. 20 is "All Farm Needs Book"; Vol. 36 is the "Carpentry Book," in which a dozen hard jobs of carpentry are made easy, and Vol. 37 is the Big, New Silo Book. All contain plans for building and are profusely illustrated.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

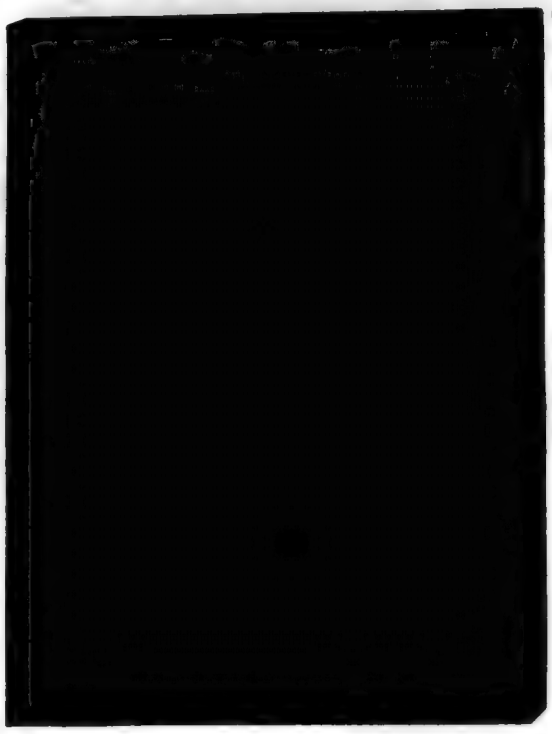
The Market.

Now that Thanksgiving is over, everyone is devoting his energy to preparing for the Christmas trade. Some good cyclamens, begonias and primroses are to be seen. Chrysanthemums are still abundant. Carnations are not so plentiful as they were a week ago. Some callas are to be had. Good snapdragons are being displayed.

The Thanksgiving sales were quite satisfactory and in some cases more than met all expectations. There are numerous calls for funeral designs. The calls for wedding flowers are not so numerous as a week ago, but some of the trade report small orders.

Various Notes.

Julius Reck reports a scarcity of carnations. They are used up as soon as they bloom. His chrysanthemums are exceptionally good this year. He has some varieties on hand that will not bloom until later. Funeral work still keeps up. He is getting ready for the Christmas trade and has some good poinsettias, primroses and cyclamens on hand.



Victor Carwardine has received several funeral orders lately and wedding work is also plentiful. He used large quantities of laurel roping and numerous bay trees and palms in decorating for an affair given by the Union Metallic Cartridge Co. recently.

The Arcade Flower Shop had good sales for Thanksgiving. Most of the sales were cut flowers. This firm is beginning to decorate some of the stores for Christmas.

Robert Hawkins says that the rainy weather which we had on the day before Thanksgiving made the florist rather gloomy, as the outlook for counter trade was not promising. However, he more than made up for this on Thanksgiving morning and reports that the results were decidedly satisfactory.

James Horan reports that general trade has improved greatly in the last few weeks. Large quantities of cut flowers and a good number of flowering plants were disposed of for Thanksgiving. This firm made a blanket of pink chrysanthemums and violets recently.

Bloomington, Ill.—Frank A. Harder has recently returned from military service and is again taking up his business, which was idle during the war.

Temple, Tex.—The Bell Floral Co. recently took advantage of the inspiration of its bookkeeper and sent out to its friends and customers several thousand copies of a letter which she, or possibly he, had written and which suggested in enticing language various reasons why one should "Say It with Flowers," either locally or by a flowergram.

Racine, Wis.—Harry Benz and Joseph Rehl, trading as Benz & Rehl and The Flower Shop, are branching out. They have leased a downtown store nearly four times as large as the one now occupied and have contracted with the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, for complete outfit of new fixtures, including a display refrigerator of large size, probably to be handled by a refrigerating machine.

AGMCO

American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago

Here's Meyer's Money Mill

Three sturdy AGMCO pipe frame houses, 36x300 feet, and a fourth (hidden by the service building) 29x100 feet.

This money mill was built at Addison, Ill., last summer, for Fred C. Meyer, well known to the trade as the senior member of the firm of Meyer & Dramm, Elmhurst, Ill.

You can easily see that these houses bear the hall marks of all AGMCO houses—long, clear-cut lines—clean, finished appearance. You can't hide these features of the AGMCO—they are always outstanding and standing out—telling the world that here is an up-to-the-second, progressive greenhouse plant.

Now is the time to get those figures and plans for the houses you're going to build next spring.

Better get your letter in the mail TODAY before the sun goes down.

CHRISTMAS - NUMBER

Greenhouse Builders

Detail of clamp column cap fitting.

Truss-joining plates bolting four truss members.

Sounding Some Sound Sense

SUPPOSE you had right now, 10 to 35 thousand dollars of ready money to invest, how would you invest it?

Isn't it so, that regardless of how many investments you have cleverly made, you sure must "be shown" before you put a cent into any stocks, bonds or enterprise of any sort.

You comb the facts down to the last possible point.
You wouldn't be much of a business man if you didn't.

Some of you go at it the same way when investing your money in a greenhouse.
Some of you don't.

Submit an estimate and specifications to some growers and the first thing they do is turn over to the last line of the last page and see what it costs.
Then they compare the cost on other estimates.
After which they compare a few of the bigger points about each construction; take another look at the estimate and give the order to the lowest one.

Then again there are others who comb over every detail.
They are the ones that discover that our truss plates are double and have two bolts to others' one.
They look into the size glazing nails we use.
They find out what's in our priming paint.

They look at the gable, and figure out whether it's stiff enough so the wind thrust against it won't be carried to the roof framing, and cause the glass to loosen.

They compare the size of roof bars; the size of rafters; the size of every piece of metal.
Then they go carefully over the method of framing and bracing to see if in reducing the number of posts, an equal in strength has been put into the roof framing.

Then they visit a number of houses built by the different concerns and see how they are standing up after several years' time test.

If possible they secure comparative crop figures and cost of heating.

With all these facts before them they turn again to the figures and nine times out of ten decide to put their money into the house that is the best investment in the long run.

A. S. Burns, of Spring Valley, N. Y., buys his houses that way.
Which more than likely accounts for his buying our houses.

When you are ready to talk house, say when and where and we'll be there.

Forcing Gladioli for Profit

Now is the proper time to plant Gladioli inside for forcing.

Wholesale prices on Gladiolus cut flowers were highly satisfactory last season and wise florists will find a good investment in making a liberal planting of bulbs for forcing.

Considering the large increases in cost in all other merchandise, Gladioli have increased but little.

Write for our full descriptive trade list on Gladioli, which offers a selection of the most suitable varieties for forcing.

National Bulb Farms - Incorporated - Benton Harbor, Mich.

LARGEST GROWERS OF GLADIOLI

Our Mr. Miller Inspecting a Field of Cultivated Rubrum Lilies in Japan

HARDY LILIES

A few cases planted now come in very handy and bloom at the time when flowers are scarce. These flowers last longer than any other flowers you can use for a floral piece. They improve the character of the floral piece when used with other flowers.

We offer for immediate shipment the following varieties:

Rubrum, Album, Magnificum, Auratum

Sizes 7/9, 8/9, 9/10, 9/11, 10/11, 11/12

The quality of our Lily Bulbs cannot be surpassed. We positively assure you that these Bulbs have been properly cultivated to produce the best Bulbs for florists' forcing. This type of Lily grows wild in Japan, but the bulbs must be cultivated to give the results florists demand. During the war very few were cultivated for export purposes. When our Mr. Miller arrived in Japan, knowing of the scarcity, he immediately purchased fields that have been cultivated.

To produce a good Hardy Lily, it is necessary to gather the Bulbs in the mountains, where they grow wild, and then cultivate them for a season or two in open land. This method improves the quality and has been long practiced by the Japanese growers. Very few cultivated bulbs are available this season, so you can expect many uncultivated Lily Bulbs. In trusting us with your order, you assure yourself of the best cultivated stock.

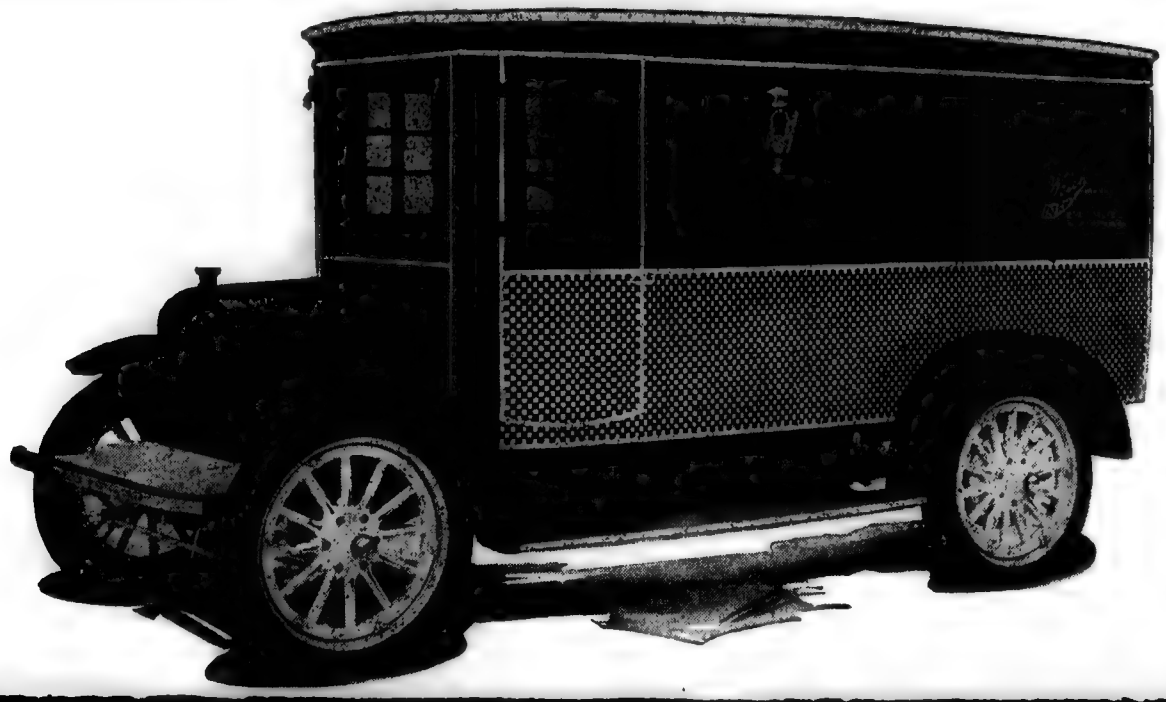
Our business doubled this year

WE did twice as much business this year as we did during any other year in our history.



This shows that merchants realize more than ever before that they should get their store records quickly and economically by machinery instead of by the slow, expensive hand method.

It shows in the best way possible that up-to-date National Cash Registers are helping merchants solve their problems most satisfactorily to themselves, their clerks, and their customers.

It is the very best evidence that our efforts to build a labor and time-saving machine are appreciated by merchants everywhere. It shows that up-to-date National Cash Registers are meeting the needs of retail stores in every country in the world.

Stewarts help make florists' business hum

Many a florist who hesitated about buying a truck, found that his first Stewart not only paid for itself, but brought in new business besides.

Stewarts perform their work quickly and economically, keep running and save many dollars for their owners.

$200 to $300 is saved to begin with on the purchase price, for Stewarts' simplified design does away with hundreds of needless parts that add nothing to strength or durability. This is a big advantage. It means—

The Truth—

Less dead weight
Less gas and oil
Less wear on tires
Less time out for repairs
Less wear and tear from poor operation

The proof—

Our Model-A Stewart Truck is now five years old, and actually looks as good today as it did three years ago.

We, of course, have spent a little money in keeping up the appearance of the car, but we believe the car is very worthy of this expense.

This Truck, for a light delivery car, is surely a good investment for any business.

Let Our Watchword be "Preparedness"

IN VIEW of all the circumstances connected with this year's Christmas trade, the keynote of the situation is preparation—immediate, watchful and active preparation. The heavy demand at Thanksgiving, coupled with other favorable indications, gave assurance of an immense Christmas business. Now that the miners' strike is nearing a settlement, there is an abatement of our fears about coal scarcity and the consequent government restrictions, the insufficient means of transportation and other untoward conditions. Any remaining uncertainties serve to confirm the one fact as to the need of a "forehanded" course—serve to accentuate the necessity that our watchword be "Preparedness."

Preparedness and Publicity.

Of course it is vitally important, as a general rule, that we endeavor also to increase the volume of business, by such means of publicity as are available. Other things being equal, the prosperity of a man's business is in exact proportion to its publicity; his success depends upon the amount of effort that he makes to draw attention to his merchandise. That is a self-evident fact, a mere truism. But it seems proper at this time to place the emphasis not so much on publicity as on preparedness, since the extent of each florist's Christmas trade will be governed to an unusual degree by the adequacy or inadequacy of the stock and facilities that he provides. The retail florist's present task is not so much to create a demand as to be fully equipped to cater to the demand that already exists. In street parlance, "it's up to us" to make our stores lively, attractive and "going" concerns, in spite of any difficulties caused by the miners' strike.

Moreover, some of the best methods of preparing for business may also serve as a means of increasing business. Preparedness and publicity are closely related. The nearness of their relationship will be indicated to some extent in one or two of the following paragraphs, and can be more fully demonstrated by the readers themselves.

High Prices No Hindrance.

There is one circumstance which, though at first thought it might seem unfavorable, is really a reason for encouragement; that is, the high level of prices. The everlastingly troublesome question of Christmas prices should actually be less troublesome, less of a bugaboo, than in almost any previous year. There is much truth in the argument that undue raising of prices at special seasons like Christmas is detrimental to the business. But that argument is less applicable at present than in almost any previous year. In the first place, a few varieties of stock, on account of the more normal conditions of the source of supply, will not be so scarce and high-priced as they were a year ago, and it will be well to push the sale of these plentiful items. Moreover—and there seems to be need of saying this again, however frequently it has been said before—people have become thoroughly accustomed to rising prices. Scarcely anything else in our daily life seems so fully expected, so inevitable, so much a matter of course, as the skyward movement of prices. Daily price rises seem as natural and certain as sunrise. If one article does not soar in price, another does, thus keeping the record of ascents unbroken.

Convincing a Customer.

Yet flowers have not advanced in price in proportion to most other commodities. It should not require a great deal of skill, then, to convince a customer that the charges for flowers are reasonable. Under present circumstances, there is not likely to be any valid excuse for not receiving fairly profitable prices. No, not unfairly profitable; there is no intention here to advocate profiteering.

One phase of preparation, that of ordering suitable stock early or making definite arrangements to obtain it, is so important that it deserves more than the casual reference already made to it, and yet is so indisputable that it scarcely needs to be discussed at length. Every florist is more or less aware of the necessity of studying in advance the probabilities of the Artistic Basket Arrangements are Popular and Profitable at Christmas.

Christmas demand. He knows that, after the fashion of the weather prognosticator, he must combine present facts and figures and indications in such a way as to make as clear a mental picture as possible of the Christmas market, and must then make provision accordingly. This precaution is particularly needed this year, on account of the precariousness of transportation.

Hitting the Market Right.

As already intimated, the wisest and easiest course, in a general way, will be to promote the sale of the comparatively plentiful and low-priced classes of stock. It is frequently profitable thus to follow the path of least resistance, if that policy does not become too confirmed a habit. On the other hand, there is sometimes great advantage, both prestige and profit, in presenting for sale the rarer articles of stock, which other florists may not be able to offer. For the shrewd florist there are infinite possibilities in forecasting the future conditions of the market and planning to "hit it" just right.

Of course, we all realize the necessity of finding substitutes for azaleas and for some other plants which heretofore have been principally of foreign origin. We are all aware how the world war almost demolished this semi-foreign department of the trade, and how the Federal Horticultural Board then came along and completed the work of destruction by hurling Quarantine No. 37 at the devastated region. Any florist who has succeeded in saving a few azaleas from the wreck deserves his reward. But there seems to be a fair supply of other seasonable plants—for him who orders early enough. Cyclamens are somewhat scarce but poinsettias appear to be especially abundant.

Obtaining Advance Orders.

One of the best methods of preparation, practiced by numerous florists to a greater or less extent, is to secure as many advance orders as possible, thus lightening the labor of the last day or two, increasing the total volume of business and making it possible to attend to it all without confusion and vexation. When a large proportion of the customers have selected their purchases early and the orders have been placed on file, the final task of wrapping and sorting and routing and delivering is greatly simplified. And one of the best expedients for obtaining these advance orders is to mail to a selected list of customers and prospective customers, as early as December 15 if possible, a neatly printed card, stating the benefits—especially, of course, the benefits for the customer—to be derived from early ordering. Attractive cards for this purpose are supplied by some of the publicity specialists.

Since such a form of preparedness is also a means of publicity, this is one of the instances in which the close relationship of preparedness and publicity is obvious.

Planning for a Clean-Up.

It is evident, then, that these advance orders are advantageous to the florist in several ways, expanding his business, lessening the intensity of the eleventh-hour rush and improving the quality of the service he renders. But another advantage, and perhaps the greatest one of all, is the clue that the advance orders give to the florist in regard to the stock that he will need for the holiday. If many of his customers have already given their orders for Christmas and have thus given some indication, also, of the general trend of popular fancy and desire, surely the florist is better informed in regard to the required stock than he otherwise would be. He need not buy blindly, to have his temper and his profits spoiled later by grievous surpluses and shortages. He can buy intelligently, with a reasonable prospect of the devoutly desired result—a clean-up. "Oh-h-h, Boy! Ain't it a gr-r-rand and glor-r-rious feelin'!"

The time is short and our action must be prompt. Let our watchword be "Preparedness" and let us practice what we preach.

Poinsettias Can be Used in about as Many Ways as There Are Baskets.

HOLIDAY PLANT ARRANGEMENTS.

Some Good Sellers Illustrated.

There is no great variety in the Christmas plants—the number of kinds is limited to a comparative few and they are practically the same from year to year, but there is infinite variety in the accessories by whose use the capable retailer can provide an assortment of stock rich in artistic attractiveness. This issue contains a number of illustrations of the popular style of plant combination.

While there is an excellent sale for single plants in simple form with the pots concealed by inexpensive covers, the effort of the florist should be toward beter things; toward those items of stock which give him opportunity to make a charge for his artistic skill as shown in the arrangement. When a sale consists of a plant with nothing but a piece of crepe paper around the pot there is no opportunity to charge for the florist's knowledge of his business. One's experience in the trade can only be represented in the price when artistic combinations of plants are offered. It is not necessary that these plant combinations be large or expensive. It is possible to make up artistic combinations in small baskets to sell at moderate prices and yet bring more money than the plants would be worth without the addition of the baskets, ribbons and artistic qualities.

It is not in every store that big mixed baskets of plants can be sold, but every store can do business with small baskets filled with a variety of material. The small baskets call for small plants, but a number of them can be used. If the baskets are provided with metal liners and the combination is carefully planted, the keeping qualities are excellent and one sale leads to another.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

R. O. W., Ind.—Before attempting to grow sweet peas outdoors "in a large way" for market, consult the market as to the varieties and quantities wanted.

J. P., Mich.—Clean the mealy bug off the coleus by means of a fine, strong spray of clear water. You can use concrete blocks, but a solid concrete wall would be more desirable for a greenhouse. Hot water is preferable for a small house.

C. M. W., Tenn.—There is nothing harmful either in the paraffin or linseed oil.

CHRISTMAS PLANTS

SOME OF THE MOST SALABLE VARIETIES, WITH TIMELY SUGGESTIONS ON MAKING THEM READY

SPLENDID STOCK AVAILABLE.

To Fill Record Demand.

Business in plants for Christmas a year ago was far beyond all expectations. That it will be better for the coming great holiday admits of no doubt. Cut flowers experienced a few weeks of rather dull trade in some sections when the chrysanthemum wave was at its crest, but this happens every year and is expected. From Thanksgiving onward we have seen a robust market, and all inclinations point to a record-breaking Christmas sale of plants. Prices have advanced all along the line and now average about double those of prewar times, but this is not too much when one considers how labor, fuel, flower pots, twine, boxes, paper and all other incidentals of the trade have jumped.

It has been a good growing season on the whole. During the summer there were fewer torrid days than usual. While fall has had more cloudy days than clear ones, the temperature has been above normal. Except in some western sections, winter has not yet been felt to any great degree. This is particularly fortunate when fuel supplies are falling dangerously low. It is also an advantage to have plants grown with as little artificial heat as possible, especially where growers have to ship considerable distances.

Cyclamens Replace Azaleas.

One familiar Christmas plant will be conspicuous by its absence this year, viz., the azalea. Even in 1918 a fair number of Mme. Petrick, Firefly and other early sorts appeared, but this season they will be practically nil. The plant which will in great measure take the place of this one-time stand-by is the cyclamen. The cult o of this is becoming well understood commercially and never did the leading plant factories contain a grander lot of plants than at present. The dreaded "mite" has been little seen. It is becoming recognized that when a grower has a bad attack of this he will not secure immunity unless he drops their culture for a season, for while fumigating, spraying and sterilizing may all work wonders, if any host plants are retained of this popular plant, there is great danger of its being carried over on them.

Only a year or two ago we imported all our cyclamen seeds. Now a great proportion are American-grown, and some of our largest and best growers claim the domestic are superior to the European seeds. Certainly in beauty of foliage, size of bloom and richness of colors the plants leave nothing to be desired. That retailers, who at one time thought $60 per dozen a stiff price to pay for cyclamens, are willing to pay double the price, and in special cases treble and quadruple, goes to show that the cyclamen has become a popular plant when well cultivated. When we take into consideration their beautiful, symmetrical foliage, above which stand numerous salmon, scarlet, pink or white flowers, with swarms of buds below the foliage, and consider the fact that this plant is an ideal one for the store window and that if given reasonable care it will flower for weeks or even months in the average home, where can we find a plant which will surpass or even equal it?

Begonias Next in Favor.

Begonias come next in favor to cyclamens and are now to be had in considerable variety, but most of them are in one color, pink. It looks at this time as though it would be a close race for supremacy between the popular Glory of Cincinnati and the newer Melior, with its more cup-shaped flowers. Personally, I prefer Melior commercially, but admit that when it comes to growing specimen plants Cincinnati has it beaten. The dark foliaged and flowered Mrs. Peterson has a large call, and makes a good Christmas plant. For basket work I prefer it to any of the other begonias. Some growers have entirely dropped Lorraine, as it does not hold its flowers so well as other sorts already named. I think, however, it is well worth retaining, and small plants in from 2½-inch to 4-inch pots prove specially valuable. It also makes a beautiful basket subject. The white Turnford Hall variety does not sell well; in fact, no white flowers go well for the holidays.

The new English race (to us) of begonias with socotrana blood in them are worth watching. The private estates grow beautiful specimens, and our wide-awake florists are beginning to see great possibilities in them. Their flowers are as large as those of the tuberous-rooted begonias and are abundantly produced. The colors embrace crimson, scarlet and orange, the finest possible Christmas colors. Another point to consider is that this race, popular for over twenty-five years in Europe, will withstand the arid conditions of the home vastly better than the small-flowered varieties now in common culture. So my advice would be to watch these begonias and stock up with them in even a small way if you possibly can.

Poinsettias Have Real Christmas Color.

Coming down to the real Christmas color in flowers, we cannot well dispense with poinsettias. They are finicky subjects and many fail with them, especially when it somes to holding foliage on them. They are also extremely tender, and when we get a Christmas cold wave, as occasionally occurs, they suffer badly. There is, nevertheless, nothing to equal them in brilliancy of coloring. A good many Eastern growers are this year trying the California poinsettia, which seems to be a better grower, branches more freely and makes a better pan than the form of pulcherrima we have been growing. Planted out in beds or benches, the plants will hold their foliage beautifully, and bracts up to twenty-four inches across can be grown. These, if cooled off somewhat before being cut and the ends of the stalks seared or scalded as soon as they are cut, will stand up well if plunged in deep jars or vases of water and held in a temperature of about 45 degrees.

Poinsettia plants cannot be kept cold or the foliage will become yellow and the bracts wilt. Neither can they be carelessly watered; let someone water them who understands this important operation and not extra holiday helpers, whose knowledge of plants and their needs is generally quite elementary. I do not think there is any finer Christmas plant than a well-grown pan of this brilliant flower, with some ferns, cyperus or asparagus planted in to hide the soil and bare stems. Be sure to wrap poinsettias up warmly when sending them out, remembering that they are more easily injured by cold than any other Christmas plants.

Oranges and Ardisias Not Abundant.

There appear to be rather fewer oranges and ardisias than usual. These two plants are of slow growth compared with solanums and must therefore command a much stiffer price. Both are splendid plants for the store windows and last a long time in fine condition in the home. The clusters of scarlet berries on the ardisias will stay on the plants for a year or more, something we cannot hope for from the more every-day solanums and peppers.

Cleveland Cherry Making a Hit.

Fruiting plants are numerous this season, and the new Cleveland cherry is making a great hit. This is the finest form of Solanum capsicastrum yet introduced, and many thousands will be sold this month. You cannot afford to grow this plant through the summer in pots. Plant it out in good soil about May 20, pot up about September 1, and you will have plants which will be big, heavily fruited and will need pots from six to eight inches in diameter, according to whether you sow seeds early in February or late in March. The yellow-fruited solanum sent out by Carl Hagenburger also is good, but will not sell as a holiday plant as well as the scarlet sort.

The Cyclamen is Among the Biggest Sellers in Christmas Plants.

Hard-Wooded Plants Gain Favor.

Hard-wooded plants are rapidly coming back into favor, and a number of these may be had at Christmas. The most prominent of these is Erica melanthera. A few other varieties may be seen, but melanthera is the holiday heath par excellence. All the ericas need cool culture, but I do not know of any plant which, if carefully watered, will hold its flowers as long as E. melanthera in a steam-heated home. As all the heaths have fine, hair-like roots, it must be remembered that once the roots get dust-dry the plants are as good as dead.

Camellias are already flowering well and, while their numbers are few compared with those of the ericas and their flowers are liable to drop, they appeal to critical buyers. Be sure to keep both camellias and ericas cool while awaiting sales, and ask purchasers to give them a cool location if they want to enjoy them long.

Primulas Sell Well.

The finest Primula obconica I have seen this season were grown in benches in a cool greenhouse and lifted and potted late in October. The plants far exceeded in size and vigor any pot-grown ones, and seeing them three weeks after potting, one would never know that they had not been pot-grown all summer. There are now some grand, large-flowered obconicas and, while some prejudice exists on account of their poisonous properties, they sell well each season, much better than P. sinensis. The newer P. malacoides, the most graceful and decorative of the family, is not seen at its best for Christmas. It is far better from the end of January onward, and with Easter coming early next season, a good many will be held until that date.

Other Attractive Plants.

Many miscellaneous plants seen in smaller batches than the plants already named are worthy of note. "What have you new this Christmas?" is a constant refrain. While I have seen little new, here are some interesting and useful varieties which are being offered: Heliotropes in standard form and nicely flowered; pans of the brilliant Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, an old friend and an excellent holiday plant, excellent for cutting; Nemesia strumosa Suttonii in pans, from seeds sown early in August, in some charming colors, which I have not seen before for Christmas; Freesia Purity, plants in pots and pans of this sweet and pretty bulbous subject should command a good sale; chrysanthemums, a few nice pots of late pompons, especially of bronze shades, are pleasing, but people are getting tired of mums at this date; cypripediums, the old insigne and the golden yellow sport Sanderæ will appeal to "classy" buyers and certainly the flowers of these plants have remarkable lasting qualities. Where a tall, graceful and deliciously fragrant plant with white flowers is wanted, nothing can equal Buddleia asiatica. Racemes of this beautiful flower were open as early as December 1 this year in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. In more every-day plants there are some good zonale geraniums and cinerarias and the dwarf stevia makes a really nice pot plant.

There are other flowering plants than those named and, of course, in crotons, dracænas, pandanus, ficus, palms, ferns, selaginellas and other foliage subjects a wide variety is available. Taken all in all, while we still miss azaleas, our growers have risen to the occasion and given us such good substitutes that we shall hardly feel their absence.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE RUSH.

Plenty of Wrapping.

It is always well to prepare for cold weather at Christmas and not to try to economize on wrappings for plants. Be prepared with an ample supply of wrapping paper; it may mean unfrozen plants and pleased customers, which are surely better than the reverse. Paper comes high these days, but we must have it, and be sure that you have newspapers in abundance. The more expensive oil, tissue and various wrapping papers we can no doubt cut down on, but in newspapers we cannot afford to economize.

The need of clean pots all florists now understand. It is nothing less than an insult to a customer to offer him or her a well grown plant in an unwashed pot.

Attention to Watering.

Now about the need of watering. It must be remembered that watering is a good deal of an art and one which, naturally, the growers understand vastly better than those who are retailers only. Some growers are also retailers, and in such cases plants in the stores are most likely to receive proper care. I have been struck many times with the careless and almost ignorant way in which some store employees water plants. The man who understands watering is a jewel, and I would advise either grower or retailer to hold on to such a man when he gets him.

Impress upon customers the need of watering, particularizing those plants which need the most abundant supply. The card tied on plants by some retailers, "Water this plant every day," is good so far as it goes. Some plants would be speedily ruined by a daily watering, while in the often overheated living room not a few need it twice a day. In reality, two or three tags are needed to cover watering properly. Rubber plants, palms, aspidistras, dracænas, crotons, Boston ferns, unless in small pots and near radiators, need not be watered more than thrice a week. Cyclamens, begonias and berried plants will, on the average, need it daily. Poinsettias keep in better shape if a little on the dry side, while recently made up pans of mixed plants need far less water than those matted with roots.

Araucaria All Decorated Up.

HOLIDAY TELEGRAPH ORDERS.

Care should be exercised in the acceptance of orders from customers to telegraph to other parts of the country for holiday delivery. At this time more than on ordinary occasions the variations in prices and in stock available in different sections should be kept constantly in mind. Should the customer specify a certain variety or even a certain flower, the florist who takes the order should make sure that the amount will pay for good stock of that kind in the place where the order is to be delivered. If the sum is not enough, the florist who receives the order is forced either to deliver another kind of flower or a low grade of the blooms named—unless he is willing to fill the order at a loss, which is not what he is in business for.

The safe course is for the retailer when he takes the order to advise the customer to leave the filling of it to the florist at the other end of the wire, giving assurance that such a course will result in the most satisfaction and pleasure to the recipient of the flowers. He can explain the variation in prices and kinds of stock available if the customer needs such explanation. If retail prices were supplied for the various sections of the country, the taking of holiday telegraph orders would be simpler. A dozen florists of Los Angeles, Pasadena and Santa Barbara, Cal., use two pages in the Pink Section of this issue to announce their holiday prices. In the absence of prices from other localities, the retailer must, as suggested above, leave some leeway to the florist who fills the order.

AFTER EFFECTS.

To the observance of "Say It with Flowers" week in Washington, D. C., Z. D. Blackistone attributes a Thanksgiving day order of a unique character. A group of Boy Scouts gathered at his store Thanksgiving morning to carry boxes and baskets of flowers to sick children in Washington hospitals.

"These boys," says Mr. Blackistone, "imbued with the idea of spreading cheer and sunshine, hit upon the idea, 'Say It with Flowers.' They raised among their organization, in contributions ranging from 10 cents to $1, the sum of $45 and came in and ordered the baskets and boxes of flowers for that sum. One leading point in this is that they got the idea of giving flowers from the 'Say It with Flowers' campaign which we had here not long ago. After the boys had made their visits to the different hospitals and distributed their flowers, I made it a point to visit Mr. Shaw, the local secretary of the organization, and he assured me that everyone was most gratified with the response which the flowers received.

"Thanksgiving day, in the general thought, is an occasion of the bountiful feast, but antedating this comes the thought that man cannot live on bread alone. This, you see, opens up a new channel of thought for those who make flowers their business and pleasure."

MUELLER SHOWS SYSTEMS.

Instead of sending to members of the F. T. D. a card or something similar to ask them to send their Wichita orders to Chas. P. Mueller, Mr. Mueller is sending to members copies of two of his forms which have done good service in his store.

One, a ruled form 5x8, printed on bristol board, takes the place of a ledger account with the various florists with whom he does individually but a comparatively small amount of business. These cards are filed according to cities. There is a card for every member of the F. T. D. and for every other firm to whom he has sent or from whom he has received an order. At a glance he can tell just how the "balance of trade" stands between each other firm and his own. At the top of the form appear the city, florist's name and street number, whether he is a Rotarian or member of F. T. D. or other organization, and what his telegraph rate is. Below are columns in which are made entries each time an order is sent or received. They are headed "Date," "How Ordered," "Item," "To Whom," "Address," "Outgoing," "Incoming," "Date Paid," "Amount," "Check No." Such a system simplifies the problems of telegraph business greatly.

Another form which Mr. Mueller has found useful in preventing extra trips of the delivery man is a tag which can be tied to the doorknob, telling that delivery was attempted and that the goods are being held at the store to be delivered at such time as the customer will designate, with the telephone number conspicuously in bold-faced type just below. Part of the tag is torn off and tied to the package, bearing address of customer, date and hour of delivery and driver's name. The next delivery is made when the recipient will be at home. This saves the deliveryman time and enables the florist to make a direct delivery of the flowers in good condition.

Ardisia Berries Hang on All Winter.

WILL READERS REPLY?

The writer would like to have the views of any readers who have had experience that bears on the following:

He is about to lease his greenhouse range for a term of ten years. It consists of ten greenhouses, about 30,000 feet of glass. It is in an indifferent state of repair. About one-third is old and in ordinary times would soon have to be torn down and rebuilt, but it is still in use and with reasonable repairs can probably be used for several years. The rest is in fair to good repair. The boilers also are old, though they still pass inspection and as far as can be seen may last years. The piping is in none too good shape and will have to be renewed before long.

We propose to have a valuation placed on the whole and the rental is to be on a per cent basis. The question is, what per cent? How should repairs or rebuilding be arranged? The only way we can see is to have each building appraised separately, and if one is thrown out of use, to take it off the valuation, or if rebuilt by owner, to add to the rent for cost of same. We think a new valuation should be made at least every three years.

Again, should this valuation be based on the present price of material or nearer original cost of it? Suppose in the course of two or three years the entire heating plant should have to be renewed, by whom should this expense be borne? How should the ordinary wear and tear be accounted for, such as painting the benches, etc.?

Any suggestions along these lines, to help us out in our dilemma, will be greatly appreciated. C. C. S.

COAL ORDERS CUT SALES

ISSUE RULES AS STRIKE ENDS.

Curtail Country's Business.

On the same day that the proposal of President Wilson to end the bituminous coal strike was made, Fuel Administrator Garfield issued orders for the conservation of coal more drastic in effect than any promulgated during the war. Factories and manufacturing plants of all kinds are limited to three days of operation per week, shops are limited to six hours of lighting a day, and offices are darkened at 4 p. m. Coming as they do just at the opening of the Christmas trade, the orders are regarded by florists as a peril to what was otherwise one of the best holiday businesses they have ever enjoyed.

Already the closing of industrial establishments in various localities had threatened the prosperity of the florists who derived their business from the workers employed in such factories. But the anticipation of an early ending of the strike and the consequent resumption of normal business led them to hope their difficulties would have passed by the time the holiday buying was due to begin in force.

Restrictions Tighter.

Instead of such alleviation the end of the strike was accompanied by restrictions more drastic than those made locally before. And they are not, according to statements published, issued for a few days only, but may last weeks.

The orders were issued, notwithstanding the anticipated settlement of the strike, to assist the country in recuperating from the loss of 35,000,000 tons in coal production for which the strike was responsible.

Officials pointed out that settlement of the strike cannot bring production back to normal for several weeks and that further conservation is absolutely necessary. Therefore the railroad administration was given power to enforce the restrictions of the fuel administrator.

After Dr. Garfield had empowered the railroad administration to curtail coal consumption, it issued the following order:

"On December 1 the fuel administration gave out a statement urging the conservation of coal and suggested that local authorities adopt regulations and put them into effect to carry out this purpose.

"A careful survey of the coal situation indicates that even if there is a prompt settlement of the coal strike, it will take some time to adjust the country to a normal basis, and that, therefore, certain restrictions will have to be placed on the consumption of bituminous coal and of light, heat and power derived therefrom, so that urgent domestic needs may be cared for, the necessary foodstuffs produced, and really essential light, power and heat supplied.

"Already, in many parts of the country, restrictions as to the use of coal and coke for lighting and heating purposes and for production of electricity and power for such purposes have been adopted."

Uniform Throughout Country.

In pursuance to such needs restrictions were placed in force which will operate throughout the entire country. The most far-reaching of these, so far as the florists' trade is concerned, are those summarized in the box on this page. The details of these are well known, since they have been reprinted in the daily newspapers and commented upon in the light of local effects.

Retail florists will find it difficult, if not impossible, to handle anything like the anticipated business for the holidays under the restrictions imposed. Of course, recourse is had to all sorts of improvised lighting and heating devices which do not consume coal. But even with lanterns and candles and oil stoves there is question whether business approximating that anticipated can be done.

The real point that concerns the florist is whether the public, under the conditions which are the result of the fuel orders, will spend its money for flowers, even at Christmas. There has been an appreciable drop in sales in localities where the lack of coal resulted in the closing of factories. How tight the public will pull the purse-strings at the Yuletide season under such circumstances is the question which governs the florists' state of mind as to the holiday prospects.

In the larger-sized communities the restriction governing transportation will be particularly felt in its limitation of shoppers. Buying will be curtailed, particularly if the weather is cold, as the forecasts of the weather prophets indicate. Similarly, the closing of the theaters two performances a week and other diminution of social festivities will affect the sale of flowers. At this season, when they usually are numerous, their absence will be felt the more.

The sole glimmer of hope that comes to the trade in its outlook on Christmas business is that the ending of the miners' strike will bring about a resumption of normal working hours in most cases at least till after the holidays. For the drastic restrictions issued affect not only florists but all the lines of business which are aided so largely by the holidays at the year's end.

Hope in Strike's End.

If the miners resume operations promptly and production is immediately increased, there is hope that the public would not be so strongly inclined to curtail their Christmas purchases and even a possibility that some of the severe features of the orders would be eliminated in view of the fact that a fuel famine was averted.

But operating against the expectation of a quick return to normal production is the miners' custom of laying off entirely from Christmas eve until after New Year's. Whether this practice will be observed this year is a matter that is now debated. At a time when every day's production counts, that question will be one of some effect on other industries. Indeed, so many factors count in the present situation that it is difficult for florists to estimate accurately what another week will bring.

Growers are given concern by the orders for fuel conservation because they are not sure of their ability to obtain the supplies needed to replenish the piles rapidly disappearing under the ravages of zero weather in various localities. Though most greenhousemen provided amply for the winter under ordinary circumstances, they did not stock up last summer as fully as they did during war times, partly because labor was so difficult to obtain and partly because the coal was not always easy to get. The fuel secured then will tide over many till January, when concern will give way to anxiety. Cars on the way have been confiscated en route and growers are forced to seek help from the fuel administration. These officials will doubtless see that

RESTRICTIONS WHICH PERIL FLORISTS' HOLIDAY TRADE

All stores may be lighted only during six hours a day.

Office buildings must cut off lights not later than 4 p. m.

Advertising signs and show windows may not be lighted.

Electric railroad and street-car service must be cut to the bone.

Factories will be furnished coal sufficient for operation only three days a week.

florists secure enough coal to insure them from total loss by freezing. How much more they are able to obtain depends upon the local needs and the speed with which production is resumed by the miners. The developments of the next few days will mean much to the trade in the solution of the problems it faces.

A Pinch at Omaha.

Reports have reached Chicago which indicate that the most severe situation thus far confronting the trade is in the Omaha-Council Bluffs district. The general situation there seems to be worse than elsewhere and the florists are hard pressed to get fuel as their stocks run low. The two largest places are those of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, and Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, both of whom are reported to be so near the end of their stocks that they are closing down some of their houses.

TATE'S TIPS

FORTUNE IN FORESIGHT.

Holiday Hovers Ahead.

In about ten days from the time the majority of the readers of The Review have read this article they will be in the midst of one of the greatest Christmas rushes the florists' business has ever experienced. This, of course, is only a prediction, but it is one based upon facts. There is a well known proverb which can be applied and one which I think everyone will agree is most fitting to demonstrate my prediction, viz., "Coming events cast their shadows before."

Wherever you may find two or more florists together, in fact, everywhere you turn, you hear the same thing: "There will be more flowers used this Christmas than ever before." Now let us consider this for a moment and see if this statement is based on sound business facts.

Retail Pace Unprecedented.

In the first place, such commercial agencies as Dun's report unprecedented retail business and that there is more money in circulation today than has been known of for many years, or perhaps was ever known before. It seems all classes have money and are spending it, which naturally increases circulation; they are not holding their money back, causing a congestion.

Look over your business since September 1, compare it with the same time last year, when business was abnormal, and you will find the difference is not great, if any. And, last but not least, consider the scarcity of stock there has been this fall; what is the reason for this? I have made it my business to scrutinize the market closely and my personal observation has shown that it has not been the scarcity of production that has caused the shortage. I feel safe in saying that production this fall has been normal, compared with other seasons, and am convinced that the shortage has been entirely due to increased demand.

The Governing Law.

There is a law that governs this, and that is cause and effect. May it not be possible that the publicity campaign is gradually getting away from us? Anyone who is in the habit of perusing these columns carefully cannot but see that this increased demand is by no means local, but is from one end of the country to the other. "Say It with Flowers" is to be seen or heard somewhere every day, and the sooner we make up our minds to the fact that the slogan is the cause of the shortage of stock, the sooner production will be increased.

The publicity committee has done its work well; you are going to see more of the effect of advertising this Christmas than ever before—it is now up to the retail florists to do their part. If you have not already engaged all of the stock you will need, get busy, and remember how you had to close your doors early in previous years because you did not have sufficient stock. Almost everyone I interviewed last year after the holiday told me how he was obliged to close the doors in order to keep the public out. Now, there are just two causes responsible for such an emergency—insufficient stock or inability to handle the public because of insufficient help. "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: 'It might have been.'"

Prepare for Action.

Another important thing, look over your stock of accessories. Do it today; there may be something you are short on. Your time is becoming more limited each day. The supply houses will be up to their eyes in business, but if you need anything, use the telephone or telegraph and perhaps if you are a good customer they will strain a point to take care of your order. Have everything about the store ready; have plenty of boxes made up. But it seems useless to go further into detail, as everyone who reads this article will know what I mean, or perhaps a familiar story will serve as a good illustration:

Admiral Dewey, after he had issued orders to clear decks for action at Manila bay, then issued orders to serve breakfast to the various crews. After breakfast was finished he turned to his chief of staff and said, "Commence firing when you are ready, Gridley." Gridley was ready then; he commenced, and we all know the result.

Make Ten Days Tell.

We have about ten days to put the final touches on. Spend these in seeing that every detail is perfect; it will make the actual work lighter and will be more satisfactory to you and your customers. Plan to have the Christmas spirit about all of your work. For instance, be prepared to tie all packages with red tape, and have holly cut in convenient sizes so that a piece can be slipped on the outside of each box after it is wrapped. This will make the package more attractive and add the Christmas spirit. Look the delivery trucks over; this will be a bad time to have one of them go wrong.

Remember stock will be expensive; put only the most experienced and careful help you have at packing boxes and making up. You will have extra and inexperienced help; let them take charge of the plants and stock that can be plainly marked; this will not only be an asset to you, but also to customers. You will find it profitable to have a sort of rehearsal for extra help some evening during the next week; drill them into your system, especially as to charge accounts.

These are only cited to you to serve as reminders. Every man knows how to run his own business best. But above everything else, be prepared.

A prosperous Christmas to everyone, is the sincere wish of Tate.

GREETINGS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Year of Accomplishment.

The Canadian Horticultural Association has through its executive accepted an invitation to hold its 1920 convention at Hamilton, Ont. The steps now being taken to make arrangements leave no room for doubt as to proper provision for the meeting. A strong committee has been formed and all signs portend the most important convention in the horticultural history of Canada. President E. B. Hamilton has just put in another strenuous week-end at Hamilton conferring with some of his fellow officers and others on important C. H. A. matters. Following is a copy of his Christmas message to members of the association:

GREETINGS FROM PRESIDENT OF C. H. A.

As the Yuletide approaches I wish to express my deep appreciation of the earnest coöperation of the officers, committees and members of the C. H. A. to give to it the standing originally desired by the fathers of the association.

"The Call to Service" at the close of the convention in August has been loyally answered by all.

It affords me much pleasure to inform you that his excellency the Duke of Devonshire, K. G. C. M. G., has graciously consented to favor us with his patronage.

The coming convention at Hamilton next August promises to be a great one.

The enthusiasm with which the various committees are working out the year's program can spell nothing but success, and with the continued united efforts of all, 1920 bids fair to be the red-letter year in the history of the association.

One cannot but feel it an honor and privilege to serve as your president.

I thank you for your loyal support and wish you all a Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year. Emery B. Hamilton.

The president and officers appreciate deeply the hearty coöperation they are receiving from fellow workers across the line, and feel sure that a still further development of this spirit will tend to the mutual advantage of florists both in the United States and Canada.

The association is congratulating itself in having secured as patron the governor general of Canada, his excellency the Duke of Devonshire.

SNAPDRAGON RUST SPREADING

DURING the summer of 1913 the attention of the floriculture department of the University of Illinois was first called to a rust on antirrhinum growing in the region north of Chicago. This rust, although it was thought at the time to be of little or no economic importance, has since, by virtue of its having spread into other states, affecting seriously the snapdragon crops of a considerable number of growers, come to be regarded as a serious pest by all florists who depend upon the popular antirrhinum for a part of their revenue.

History and Distribution.

Prior to the summer of 1913, the rust had been reported but from two western coast states, California and Oregon. In 1895 it was determined as a new species by Holway, an American botanist, and named Puccinia antirrhini (Diet. and Holw.) However, within a month after the station was apprised of the presence of the rust in the region north of Chicago, four new areas of infection had been located within a radius of fifty miles from the point at which the disease was first reported.

Then, in September, 1914, the writer learned that snapdragons growing on a private estate in northern Ohio were suffering an attack of the disease. The report was substantiated by the receipt of a quantity of diseased material from that locality at the station. Later two new areas of infection were located, one about a mile from the infection just mentioned in Ohio and the other in the western part of central Indiana. From

Fig. 1.—Rust Pustules on Antirrhinum.

So many inquiries for information concerning snapdragon rust have been received that The Review has exhausted its supply of the issue carrying the following article and therefore reprints this report on "The Rust on Antirrhinum," by Charles O. Rees, Floricultural Pathologist, Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.

all that could be learned, the rust in Indiana and Ohio was noticed on the antirrhinum for the first time during the latter part of August, 1914. One grower in the northern part of Indiana reported the loss of 6,000 cuttings. It has also been reported that a rust quite similar to, if not the same as, Puccinia antirrhini has been found on the wild Linaria vulgaris, commonly known as butter-and-eggs. This linaria is quite closely related to Antirrhinum majus.

Description.

The disease is easily recognized and each grower of antirrhinum owes it to himself as well as to neighboring growers to examine his plants and cuttings thoroughly for any traces of infection. Within ten to thirteen days after a plant has been exposed to the rust, numerous grayish white areas the size of a pin's head will appear on the under sides of the lower leaves. From three to five days later characteristic rusty brown pustules begin to replace these spots. (See Figure 1.) These pustules continue to increase in number until practically every leaf of the plant is attacked. The stem also furnishes a foothold for the disease.

At this stage the plant begins to wilt; its period of usefulness has passed and in a short time it is dead. Figure 2 shows well the condition of a plant two weeks after the infection had established itself. The plant was taken from the house.

Cuttings have also proved themselves to be quite susceptible to attacks of the disease. Taken at a time when their vitality is at its lowest point, the cuttings fall an easy prey to the rust. The disease appears on the cuttings as it does on the older plants, grayish white spots appearing first, followed by the rusty brown pustules. However, where the cuttings are taken from diseased plants in the field, the pustules may show up on the upper leaves as soon as they do on the lower ones. The reason for this is obvious, as the disease was already established on the plants in the field from which the cuttings were taken.

Cause of Spreading.

Two theories have been advanced to account for the presence of the rust in these widely separated localities. One is that the rust spores might have been introduced on cuttings shipped in from an infected territory. The other is, since the rust has recently been reported on the linaria, butter-and-eggs, that the disease might easily be carried over from year to year on this wild host, which is so common in the United States and which is closely related to the antirrhinum. Under these conditions the linaria, growing wild, would furnish an excellent medium for the transportation of the infection to the extreme limits of its habitat.

The discovery of the teleutospore, or winter stage of the rust, on the material from Indiana permits the conclusion that the disease is carried over from year to year in the field by these spores, which establish themselves during the early fall on the stalks of the snapdragon. (See Figure 3.)

A Warning.

It is hoped that this article will serve to place every grower of antirrhinum on his guard against the ravages of the rust, which gives every indication of causing alarming loss if allowed to go unchecked.

After studying this problem and after having observed the infection in a number of localities, it would seem advisable to observe the following precautions:

(1) Cover with straw and burn all dead plants that were left in the field. Even though these plants show no signs of the disease, this precaution should be taken.

(2) Examine carefully the cuttings and plants growing in the house. Pay particular attention to the lower leaves of the older plants, as the heavy moisture on these leaves makes conditions ideal for the germination of rust spores. Remove at once and burn all plants showing the slightest signs of infection, keeping well in mind the description of the rust as given in this article. Diseased plants should be removed, roots and all, and burned with great care, as the spores will "fly" upon the slightest provocation, and in this way neighboring plants are infected.

(3) As heavy moisture on the leaves makes germination easy for all rust spores, it would seem advisable to discontinue all overhead watering. Water only from below, and should the soil dry out too rapidly, mulch the bench well.

(4) Do not propagate from a plant showing the slightest signs of the rust or from a plant that has in any way been exposed to the disease. The selection of cuttings from diseased plants has already played too active a part in the spread of the infection.

If every grower of antirrhinum will take these precautions the chances of artificial as well as natural infection will be greatly reduced. By so doing, the spread of the disease can at least be checked.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., was showing some fine mums and pompons. Business was reported excellent.

Labo, Florist, of Joliet, Ill., reports a good season. Some excellent stock was noted at the greenhouses, where the damage occurring from the fire last spring has been entirely repaired.

• • • •

H. F. Drury, of Galesburg, Ill., was showing some fine chrysanthemums, which are proving to be ready sellers. Funeral work and counter trade have both been good.

• • • •

Swan Peterson, of Rockford, Ill., has some of this season's finest cyclamens. He has the largest stock seen in this section of the state, "but only enough for my own use," was his remark.

• • • •

J. J. Soper, of Rockford, Ill., is considering the burning of wood as fuel to keep the greenhouse going, as his supply of coal is small.

Mrs. M. C. Sadewater, of Rockford, Ill., is on her way to Texas to escape the winter weather.

• • • •

H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., has his store in holiday trim; prepared wreaths and baskets of prepared foliage are well displayed.

• • • •

John Bauscher, at Freeport, Ill., has had an unusual counter trade, which offsets the lack of funeral orders. A good variety of roses, mums and other desirable stock was noted, while old-fashioned bouquets were being made for hospital trade.

• • • •

The Freeport Floral Co., of Freeport, Ill., had a large out-of-town funeral order, which called for several large designs. Business here is reported good and a successful Thanksgiving day was enjoyed.

• • • •

The Sterling Floral Co., of Sterling, Ill., has well filled greenhouses, where especially fine potted stock was seen, including cyclamens, poinsettias and primroses. A bed of wallflowers was also noted; Robert Lundstrom remarked that he had a great demand for them.

J. A. Swartley & Sons, of Sterling, Ill., are busy shipping geranium plants. Because of careful packing, not a plant has been lost this season, even during these cold days. This has been a decided factor in the success of this department, the firm states.

LAMBERT'S LOCALS.

Incorporation papers were filed December 5, with capital stock of $50,000, for the Lakewood Floral & Nursery Co., of Atlanta, Ga. The officers are: President, A. G. Rhodes; vice-president, J. G. Rhodes; secretary and treasurer, S. F. Gibbs; general manager, V. E. Lambert. The new firm has acquired 100 acres of fertile land at Lakewood for the purpose of growing nursery and floral stock for wholesale. The firm has under construction two houses and has completed one house, which is used for propagating. It is the purpose to begin active business January 1.

G. M. Murphy, for four years in the jobbing end of the nursery business at Atlanta, Ga., has a well appointed store and is handling a complete line of nursery stock, plants and cut flowers. Mr. Murphy reports business good. He uses as his slogan the words, "Everything that grows." His firm name is the Empire Nursery.

M. W. Stallings, formerly manager of the floral department of the Nunnally Co., opened a flower shop December 5 at 41 Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga., to be known as Stallings' Flower Shop.

BETSCHER BLAMES BAD FALL.

Twenty-two days of rain in October and weather nearly as bad in September and November hindered the digging of gladiolus bulbs, reports C. Betscher, of Dover, O., and some stocks are still undug. The handling of peonies was, he says, out of the question. Ohio peony growers could only get out part of their orders, while the demand was heavy.

The problem of help has been worse than during the war, says Mr. Betscher, that which can be had being much less reliable and capable. Wages in all branches of the horticultural trades and especially for workers under glass must go up materially, he thinks, in order to secure men who are of value. Sunday labor, long hours and other conditions must be changed. In the end prices will go higher, much higher, in his estimation.

Gladiolus bulbs are in heavy demand. Prices will rule higher, for the crop is relatively short, some varieties particularly so. Geraniums, as a result of the wet fall, damped off in large percentage and what promised to be a surplus in many hands proved to be a shortage. Good cyclamens will not be abundant for Christmas.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Trade conditions are such throughout the Dominion today that no fine stock coming on for Christmas can be spared. The demand seems greater than ever and all growers appear unable to cope with the ever increasing demand for stock.

The florists generally are congratulating themselves that they have at last come into their own since the high prices have made it impossible for the drug stores to interfere with their week-end sales and prices of stock are so well maintained that there is nothing of a cheap nature going today. Consequently the cut flower departments in the drug stores in cities like Montreal and Toronto have found it difficult to get along under present conditions.

Various Notes.

The Dale Estate greenhouses narrowly escaped destruction by fire during the heavy wind storm Sunday morning, November 30. The fire, which originated from some source that has not yet been ascertained, began at the corner of the well seasoned lumber pile immediately at the rear of the large coal shed. The wind, which blew at the rate of over eighty miles an hour, carried sparks across the roof of the boiler house; the sparks caught the attention of the men who were stoking at the time. In a few minutes the fire brigade responded to the call for help and after three hours of work managed to quell the flames. At one time it was thought that the coal house itself was doomed; if the roof of the boiler section adjoining had given way, there is no doubt that the boilers would have been put out of commission and the fire would probably have caught the greenhouses as well. During the storm the two large sections of the new wall, twenty-two inches thick, at the heating plant in course of construction were blown down by the heavy wind. It was hoped that the heating section would be completed and in operation by the end of the year, but this setback will hardly admit of this, although strenuous efforts are being made to house in the boilers in such a way that there will be a certain amount of steam available before the extremely cold weather begins. Further building operations will be deferred until spring.

W. G. Peacock recently returned from a trip to Montreal.

Mr. McHardy has just taken over the McIntyre greenhouses here, having bought them from the proprietor for the sum of $40,000. The business has been run for the last seven years by W. G. Mulliss and Mr. McHardy intends to cultivate a similar quality of mixed stock.

Springfield, Mo.—The Pioneer Floral Co. has recently completed the erection of two new greenhouses, making a total of fourteen houses in its range, which now covers practically two acres.

Carnations

CARNATION LEAF-SPOT.

I bought a large number of carnation plants in September from a Chicago firm and they looked like fine, large plants. I planted them the same day they arrived and have given them every care possible; all at once, the Good Cheer variety started to go down. They seem to be affected with some kind of black spot, which affects the leaves first and goes on down into the plant. I have picked off all diseased foliage and worked in a little lime in the soil. What else can I do? I am sending you some of the foliage to examine.

A. L. C.—Tenn.

Your plants are affected with the disease known as carnation leaf-spot. This disease is usually started by too much moisture on the foliage and takes on its most virulent form during extreme heat. These plants, having been transported from a cool northern climate to your much warmer climate at a time when growth is rapid and soft, were naturally susceptible to this disease. I have found Good Cheer more prone to lose its foliage after being benched than most varieties, but it always took hold and started off growing well. Extremely large plants would probably be more susceptible to this disease than medium-sized and better matured plants. Pick off all the spotted leaves you can find and then spray the plants thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture. Keep the atmosphere in your houses slightly charged with the fumes of sulphur by painting one of the steam pipes in each house with a mixture of lime, sulphur and water, using equal parts of the lime and the sulphur.

BRANCH-ROT ON HERALD.

We are sending you one Herald carnation plant and should like to know what is wrong with it and what to do for it. The trouble affects only the Herald variety; other varieties receiving the same treatment, soil, etc., are doing especially well. A few leaves turn yellow on a branch and in a short while the entire branch is affected and dies; one by one the branches die until the entire plant is dead. We should like to plant something in place of the plants that die out. We are wholesale florists. What would you recommend us to plant and what treatment should we give it? Will soil that has been used in the greenhouse during the past season, well manured and plowed, be all right to put back in the greenhouse this coming season; if not, what would be best to plant or sow in that soil to put it in first-class shape for greenhouses?

S. B.—Ill.

Herald was always more or less susceptible to the branch-rot disease, which is destroying your plants now. There is little to be done to counteract it. After it once destroys a branch of a plant, the whole plant usually goes sooner or later. Sometimes one can cut away the affected branch and save the plant, but not often. If a large percentage of the plants have died out, it would probably be advisable to tear out the balance and replant with something else. To fill in the spaces where plants have died out would not prove satisfactory, as more plants will die and you would have a ragged looking bench all the time. There are a number of crops you could replant this space with to good advantage. Snapdragons will yield a good return if your market will take them. Calendulas will also come along quickly if you will procure good, strong plants at once. Ten weeks' stocks and fever-few will pay well and last year we saw some candytuft that sold at a good profit. Delphinium may be planted in now, will produce a crop of good quality in April and May, and always sells well. You will probably need some room for your young carnation stock a little later and it might pay you to keep the Herald going until you need the room for potting up your young stock, even though the yield may be somewhat reduced. If you will thoroughly cleanse the bench after taking out the soil, no harm should befall the young plants. That would pay better than to plant with one of these other crops and then later on tear out perfectly good carnations to make room for the young stock.

FAIRY RING ON CARNATIONS.

Please tell me what is wrong with the carnation shoots which I am sending you; also what the remedy is. Thenanthos is the only variety affected. The trouble seems to start in cloudy, fall weather and continue until the following spring. I had a similar case last year, which I attributed to a check in the growth, but now I am certain that that was not the trouble, as these were especially strong plants, some carrying twenty-five shoots when they were housed in July and August. I use Nicofume and Nicoticide for spraying and also sprayed once with salt; I hardly think that could be the cause of the trouble, since only a few plants are as yet affected. I have not been able to discover any worm or borer of any sort.

E. F. C.—Wash.

Your Thenanthos plants are affected with fairy ring. There were also some red spiders on the leaves. You have a rather peculiar condition in that you have the red spider on account of lack of syringing and you have the fairy ring, which usually comes from too much moisture on the foliage or in the atmosphere. It comes generally during a warm, humid spell. Probably you did not use the salt freely enough. One thorough application each week should keep the plants clean without any additional syringing. Overhead watering should be discontinued after the plants are established on the benches.

The fairy ring is the more serious of the two troubles and should be attended to first. Pick off as many of the affected leaves as possible. Then syringe with all the force at your command, directly from the faucet. Use no salt. After that, spray heavily with Bordeaux mixture. Go over the plants frequently, picking off new spots. Repeat the Bordeaux treatment every week or ten days until you have the disease under control. Do not apply any salt until the Bordeaux is all off the plants; otherwise, the salt and the sulphate of copper together may cause serious burning of the foliage.

PERSONAL GLIMPSES

MEN OF ACTION.

Charles H. Grakelow.

The character of the oratory heard at the conventions of our national trade bodies compares favorably with that of business men in other fields of endeavor, except, of course, those professions in which elegant diction is an essential requirement. It is a pleasure indeed to hear many of our leading florists discourse at length upon topics peculiar to their trade. They know their subjects well and upon questions nearest their hearts frequently speak with fervor, force and feeling, regaling the senses of their hearers and stirring to action fellow-workers given to apathy.

Alone and in a class by himself, in this respect, stands Charles H. Grakelow, with whose splendid elocution we are all familiar. It matters little what the occasion; before an audience this wizard of the spoken word never fails to acquit himself in a manner typical of the master. Without apparent effort his fancy soars to noble heights and without difficulty comes the subtle phrase that clothes his winged thoughts. The most commonplace topics are imparted dignity by his creative faculty and dullness is changed to entertainment by his scintillating wit. We know not from what source was derived the wonderful eloquence of this brilliant man, but, united with his mastery of the art of public speaking and his willingness to serve, it is a vast and constructive influence in the advancement of his and our profession. With a soul filled to the brim with beautiful images, it is peculiarly fitting that flowers are found in the hands of Charles H. Grakelow.

Paul Klingsporn.

Caring little for the man that falls by the wayside, the business world is always vitally interested in the man that makes good. Men of action are never failures; they may receive temporary setbacks, which, their mettle true, serve only to increase their efforts.

Taking the immortal Greeley's advice, a number of years ago Paul Klingsporn went west, locating in that greatest of truly American cities, Chicago. By trade a florist, he continued in his calling, advancing steadily by dint of hard work. Today he is one of the best known and most successful wholesale florists in the great central market. Not long ago the Chicago Florists' Club by nominating him for its president, which office he declined, showed the same appreciation of merit as did the S. A. F. last August in electing him to its directorate. His efforts in behalf of the parent organization certainly entitled him to that distinction.

That it is impossible to keep a good man down is proved by the success of this energetic young man. The way is open to all, its successful course being dependent upon untiring and intelligent application; the reward is well worth the effort. The career of Paul Klingsporn supplies encouragement to the young florist who has lost hope by reason of the absence of opportunity in his community. The country is large, the trade is prosperous and it is merely a question of the lack or possession of initiative and ability as to whether he stays in the rut or emerges progressively from it.

Vincent Gorly.

At the F. T. D. meeting in Cleveland, 1918, Vincent Gorly won the esteem of many florists present by reason of his zealous advocacy of the adoption of a uniform language of flowers. Although his measure met with the disapproval of the meeting, he was himself thoroughly convinced of its merit.

Again at Buffalo, last October, before the same body, he presented a carefully devised plan for associating a certain seasonable flower with each individual month of the year. He championed his plan with his customary zeal, but it was not accepted—a result that did not in the least weaken his conviction.

We are not dealing with the intrinsic worth of either proposition here; we mention them merely to emphasize our belief that Vincent Gorly is a business man of practical and constructive ideas. Progress depends upon the creation of new outlets for our wares and the man capable of evolving novel ideas in this direction and presenting them in a convincing manner to his fellow-florists is indeed an asset. Since one of the principal objects in holding trade conventions is the interchange of ideas, it is to be desired that many more men of the type of this progressive St. Louis retailer be heard from at the annual assemblages. We are willing to risk our fair fame as a prophet by hazarding that Mr. Gorly will have one or two novel and meritorious ideas to present to the Indianapolis meeting of the F. T. D. next year.

Now he was tall and handsome
In a Denman Thompson way,
And she, oh, my! was quite a queen,
She was so tall yet gay!

The livery stable keeper,
When he asked her for her hand,
Attempted to embrace her,
But for this she would not stand.

Why, oh, why, upon this manly breast
Will you not lay your head?
She looked into his whiskered face,
And this is what she said:

Chorus.

My love works in a greenhouse,
And there always is a smell
Of violets and geraniums
Upon his coat lapel.
Now, mind, I do not blame you
Nor do I make complaint,
But a greenhouse has a fragrance
That a livery stable aint.

F. H. B. TELLS ITS TALE

MR. MARLATT'S STORY.

F. H. B. Report on Quarantine 37.

To the trade there is the interest of the other person's version of a tale in the account of Quarantine No. 37 embodied in the report of the Federal Horticultural Board for the year ending June 30. Mr. Marlatt says:

"The need of additional restrictions or prohibitions with respect to the entry of various classes of nursery stock and other plant and seeds was referred to in the report of the Federal Horticultural Board for last year, and also the holding of a public hearing at this department May 28, 1918, at which the whole subject was fully discussed with all the interests concerned.
